Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which European countries there are agricultural attachés; if he will list these attachés; what are their responsibilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: There are agricultural attachés in Her Majesty's embassies in the following European countries:

Denmark: First Secretary—also covering Norway.
France: Counsellor.
Federal Republic of Germany: First Secretary.
Irish Republic: First Secretary.
Italy: First Secretary.
Netherlands: First Secretary — also covering Belgium and Luxembourg.
Spain: First Secretary.

Their main responsibilities are:

"(a) to report on reactions and attitudes towards developments in European Community agricultural, fisheries and food policies;

(b) to explain United Kingdom policies on agricultural matters and to advise on bilateral questions;

(c) to collect economic, statistical, administrative and technical information and, where appropriate, to assist in promoting United Kingdom food and agricultural exports.

In the office of the United Kingdom permanent representative to the European Community at Brussels there are a Minister, two first secretaries and a second secretary dealing with agricultural matters.

Gulf of Sirte (Incident)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what evidence he based his statement to the House of 25 March, Official Report, column 782, that the Libyans fired missiles at United States aircraft on 24 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to which my hon. Friend refers was based on the statement issued by the White House at 2200 hours on 24 March.

Petty Officer Black

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response has been received from the Spanish Government to the note verbale presented to it regarding the circumstances surrounding the death of Petty Officer Black in Spain; what report he has received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Madrid on progress in this case; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Eggar: The note and supporting documents were sent to the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 3 December 1985. Her Majesty's ambassador has reported that the papers have been passed to the Ministry of Justice and by them to the provincial court in Malaga, where any decision to re-open the case will be made. The Foreign Ministry will convey the findings of the court in due course.

Libyan Nationals

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Libyan nationals have been granted visas in each of the past three years and to date.

Mr. Eggar: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Paraguay

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Government of Paraguay regarding possible assistance to Paraguay for the Ferrocaril de Soya or other railway; whether any offer of assistance has been made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: The Foreign Minister of Paraguay, Dr. Saldivar, discussed his country's plans for the Ferrocaril de Soya railway with British firms during his official visit to London in March. Her Majesty's Government have not been asked to provide assistance for this large-scale project from our modest bilateral aid programme to Paraguay.

Population Projects (Aid)

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of net public expenditure on overseas aid was represented by expenditure on population projects for each of the years 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985; and what percentage of this expenditure was represented by bilateral project support, excluding research and joint funding schemes.

Mr. Raison: In 1982, population-related activities represented 0·9 per cent. of gross expenditure on overseas aid, of which 28 per cent. was spent on bilateral programmes and projects. The same figures for 1983 were 1·1 per cent. and 36 per cent. and for 1984 0·9 per cent. and 28 per cent. respectively. Figures for 1985 are not yet available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Productivity

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the encouragement of further improvements in the productivity of United Kingdom agriculture for those products which are in surplus in the EEC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Improved productivity has enabled food to be supplied to consumers at prices which are lower now in real terms than in 1979 and has increased our self sufficiency to 80 per cent. in the commodities which can be produced here.

Production must be geared to the demands of the market, particularly at a time of surplus. Improvements in productivity have a continuing role to play in helping producers to supply the market competitively with products of the right quality. More realistic CAP support prices would allow the maximum benefit of those improvements to be passed on to the consumer and, through lower CAP costs, to the taxpayer.

Salmon

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the main threats to British salmon stocks, apart from illegal fishing, together with the measures his Department has taken, since 1979, to counter their effect.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Seals (Fish Stocks)

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the impact of grey and common seal populations on fish stocks in British waters.

Mr. Gummer: I am not able to make an estimate in the terms defined. This would require detailed information on the age composition and quantities of individual species of fish consumed by seals, which is not available. The most recent information available on the diet and quantities of fish consumed by grey seals is included in the report entitled "Interaction between Grey Seals and UK Fisheries" prepared by the National Environment Research Council of a study commissioned jointly by this Department and the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland. This was deposited in the Library of the House on 26 June 1984. There is no equivalent study in respect of common seals. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I are currently planning further research to improve our information on these matters and this Department has initiated a survey to estimate the level of predation of the Farne Islands seal population on the north-east coast fisheries.

Pâté de Foie Gras

Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will introduce legislation to impose a ban on the import of pâté de foie gras into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has about the extent to which the production and importation of pâté de foie gras is permitted in other EEC countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: I understand that the force feeding of animals is prohibited in the Federal Republic of Germany, but am not aware that any restriction is imposed on the production of pâté de foie gras in any other member state. The method of feeding geese involved in this production has been examined by both the Council of Europe and the European Parliament, following expert advice, and neither body saw reason to restrict or prohibit it. Any ban on the import of pâté de foie gras would contravene the provisions of the Treaty of Rome, which of course bind all member states of the European Community.

Frozen Food

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he took to convey the views of the British frozen vegetable industry on the proposed rate of duty on export of frozen vegetables from the United Kingdom to Spain to those in the European Commission responsible for negotiating the terms of the Spanish accession treaty.

Mrs. Fenner: We have made clear to the European Commission our dissatisfaction with present tariffs on exports of certain frozen vegetables from the United Kingdom to Spain.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on duty on frozen peas exported from Sweden to Spain consequent on the treaty of accession.

Mrs. Fenner: Under recently agreed arrangements between the European Community and the European Free Trade Association, each year until 31 December 1992 a quota of 4,500 tonnes of frozen peas will be allowed to enter Spain from Sweden at a reduced duty of 4·5 per cent. Exports above this level will be charged at the level of the common customs tariff (18 per cent.).

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what part he took in the negotiations on the duty payable on frozen food exports from the United Kingdom to Spain; when Her Majesty's Government were first aware of the proposed increase; what steps he has taken (a) within the European Economic Community and (b) with the Spanish Government to reduce the duty to its former level; and whether he has consulted with other frozen food exporting countries within the European Economic Community about joint action to secure this end;

(2) what consultations were held with the frozen food industry about the increase in duties into Spain consequent on the treaty of accession; what information was made available to the industry about that increase; and what attempt was made by him to prevent it.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department was consulted on the negotiations for Spanish entry into the European Community as they progressed. Due to the rapid pace of the negotiations trade associations could be consulted only on an ad hoc basis; no specific consultations were held with the frozen food industry as a whole. Many different duties are payable on frozen foods as a result of those negotiations. Spain proposed in April 1985 that for certain products Spanish tariff dismantlement for imports from the Ten should start from the level of the common tariff rather than the (normally lower) level actually paid before accession. A United Kingdom objection in respect of frozen vegetables was registered at the time. We are pressing within the European Community for a reduction in the present Spanish duty on frozen peas imported from the Ten.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what have been the levels of British frozen food exports to Spain for each of the last three available years; and how many jobs he estimates are dependent on those exports.

Mrs. Fenner: Statistics are not readily available for such a wide definition. I have no basis for making estimates of the sort to which the hon. Member refers.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the rate of duty in Spain on frozen food and vegetables from the United Kingdom (i) before and (ii) after Spanish accession.

Mrs. Fenner: Spanish duty rates for frozen foods imported from the United Kingdom vary greatly, but for frozen vegetables are as follows:

0702B (Frozen Vegetables)

As at 28 February 1986*
Import duty = 4·1 per cent. (EC preferential rate)
+ "Home Compensation Tax" of 10 per cent. (levied on cif value + 6 per cent. = 10·6 per cent.
= Total tax and duty burden of 14·7 per cent.

As from 1 March 1986
Import duty = 15·7 per cent.
+ VAT of 6 per cent. (levied on cif value + import duty) = 6·9 per cent.
= Total tax and duty burden of 22·6 per cent.

* Subject to import licensing also.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the rate of the duty payable on frozen food and vegetable imports from Spain (i) before and (ii) after Spanish accession to the European Economic Community.

Mrs. Fenner: The United Kingdom duty payable on frozen food and vegetables imported from Spain before accession is set out in Her Majesty's Customs and Excise tariff 1985. The system of dismantlement of these tariffs is to be found in article 75 of the treaty of accession (Official Journal) L302 of 15 November 1985. Both documents are to be found in the Library of the House. The duty on frozen vegetables imported from Spain was 18 per cent. as at 28 February 1986 and was reduced to 15·7 per cent. on 1 March 1986.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he is making to the Spanish Government to seek a reduction in the duty on frozen food and vegetables from Britain into Spain, reduced to its preaccession level of 4·1 per cent.

Mrs. Fenner: Representations have been made to the Spanish authorities in favour of reducing the duty on frozen peas imported from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations Her Majesty's embassy in Madrid has made to the Spanish Government over the increased duty payable on frozen vegetables imported from the United Kingdom consequent on Spain's accession to the European Economic Community.

Mrs. Fenner: Officials in the Madrid embassy have informed the Spanish authorities that for frozen peas there is in the view of Her Majesty's Government a strong case for activating the provisions of article 75(4) of the treaty of Spanish accession, under which import duties into Spain from the Ten can be dismantled in an accelerated manner.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the outstanding balance of hill livestock compensatory allowances will be paid to eligible recipients; and what has been the reason for the delay in processing payments.

Mr. John MacKay: I have been asked to reply.

Four thousand, two hundred and fifty-eight of the 15,939 producers who are due them have already received their outstanding balance. Processing of the remaining claims is continuing as rapidly as possible and payment of most of the balances will be made in April and May.

There has been no delay in processing payments. By 7 April 1986, 20,532 payments of 1986 hill livestock compensatory allowances had been made to 16,274 producers, compared with the position on 9 April 1985, by which date 15,542 farmers had been paid.

EEC (Price Review)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Commission sought the agreement of the Council of Ministers to its decision not to publish the rates of subsidy for exports of dairy produce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 596]: The Commission's decision not to publish export refunds for butter, butter oil and skimmed milk powder for certain destinations and for limited periods reflects its concern that advance knowledge of the rates gives a commercial advantage to the Community's competitors by enabling them to adjust their own offer prices accordingly. The Commission considers that it already has the authority to act in this way, so no proposal was put to the Council.

EEC (Dairy Produce)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Commission has authority under its regulation No. 765/86 to sell butter to zone C2(i) countries at prices lower than the minimum prescribed under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade; if any instructions have been given to the Commission by the Council of Ministers on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 596]: A meeting on 31 May 1985 of the milk fats protocol committee of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade international dairy arrangement adopted a decision providing derogation from the minimum export price in respect of sales of butter aged at least 18 months. The decision imposed conditions concerning minimum quantities and delivery periods.

Regulation (EEC) 765/86, in particular at articles 1, 7 and 15, takes account of the obligations arising under the international dairy arrangement, including those provided for in the decision adopted on 31 May 1985.

No sales under this regulation have yet taken place.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sales have been authorised by the Commission in terms of Commission regulation (EEC) No. 765/86 of 14 March; if he will specify the price, amount and country of destination of each sale; if he will further explain which countries are covered by the definition zone C2(i) in the regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 596]: No tenders have yet been accepted under the terms of article 3 of Commission regulation (EEC) 765/86. The destinations covered by zone C2 as shown in the annex to regulation (EEC) 1098/68 are the USSR and Mongolia.

ENERGY

North Sea Oil and Gas (Contracts)

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has for the period from 1985 to the latest date about (a) the percentage of contracts and orders arising from North sea oil and gas operations which have been placed with British firms, (b) the total value of such contracts and (c) the percentage and value of such contracts sub-contracted to British firms; and if he will list the companies which have received such contracts or orders.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The information requested at (a) and (b) will be contained in my right hon. Friend's the Secretary of State's report to Parliament on the development of the oil and gas resources of the United Kingdom. This report will be published towards the end of April. The information requested at (c) is not available to my Department. Details of companies which have received contracts and orders arising from North sea oil and gas operations are commercially confidential.

Oil (Taxation)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to the extent to which oil companies have passed on to the consumer the increases in duty announced in the Budget statement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Pump prices have not in general risen by the full amount of the duty increases announced in the Budget. There is a very wide spread of pump prices at present and prices are continuing to fall.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Budgen asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the number of serving members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary who have taken their own lives to date in each of the last five years, showing in each case the month of the year.

Mr. Scott: The information is as follows:

Regular Royal Ulster Constabulary	Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve (Full-time)	Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve (Part-time)
1981
1 (June)	0	1 (September)
1982

Training Centres

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will invite the Fair Employment Agency for Northern Ireland to initiate an urgent and comprehensive investigation of promotion structures and practices within Government training centres; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Boyson: No. The Fair Employment Agency is obliged to investigate bona fide individual complaints of unlawful discrimination within the terms of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976; any individual who believes that he has suffered in this way can seek redress by making a complaint to the agency.

The agency is also empowered, under section 12 of the 1976 Act, to investigate the employment policies and practices of an employer. It is for the agency, which is an independent statutory body, to decide when these powers should be used.

Firearms

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the level of fees applicable in Great Britain to the holding of firearms in comparison with what is proposed for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Portadown

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recent violence in Portadown, County Armagh, on 31 March, 1 April detailing the number of people injured and arrested.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Polytechnics

15. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

46. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the recommendations of the National Advisory Body on its 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: The secretariat of the National Advisory Body for public sector higher education has drawn up preliminary plans for the disposition of student numbers in the public sector in 1987-88 which were sent out to institutions for consultation on 4 April. These plans are based on certain assumptions about the resources likely to be available for public sector higher education in 1987-88, which will not be announced until the autumn.

39. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the recommendations by the National Advisory Body on its 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received roughly 30 letters from Members and others bearing on the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise since December 1985.

23. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many departments in polytechnics and colleges will close as a result of the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

27. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the implications for student numbers of the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: It is too early to tell what the implications of the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise will be. Its planning to date has been based on certain assumptions about the resources likely to be available for the public sector of higher education in 1987-88 which may well be modified when planned expenditure on local authority higher education and on the voluntary sector is known for certain in the autumn. The National Advisory Body will not submit final recommendations about academic provision in the public sector in 1987-88 to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State until December.

25. Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to meet the National Union of Students to discuss the recommendations of the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: No arrangements have been made for a meeting between my right hon. Friend and the National Union of Students about the recommendations arising from the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise, which will not be adopted by the National Advisory Body's committee, nor submitted to my right hon. Friend, until December. My right hon. Friend would carefully consider a request for such a meeting were one to be made.

Free Speech

16. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has called for reports on recent violations of free speech at Bradford university, Oriel college, Oxford, Bristol polytechnic, Bristol university and Sunderland polytechnic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has obtained a report in each of these instances. The authorities of higher education institutions are well aware of his concern that they should show their determination to safeguard freedom of speech.

Inspectors of Schools (Report)

17. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has now received a copy of the 1985 report of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools.

Sir Keith Joseph: No.

35. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish the 1985 report of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools.

Sir Keith Joseph: I hope to publish the next report by Her Majesty's inspectors on the effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England towards the end of May.

Schools (Four-term Year)

18. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration has been given to introducing a four-term year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: This suggestion has been considered on various occasions in the past, most recently by the National Association of Head Teachers and by a joint working party of the Association of County Councils and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities. In January the ACC published a discussion document and we shall be interested to see the response it receives.

Non-advanced Further Education

19. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will next meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss non-advanced further education.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has regular meetings with the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission at which non-advanced further education is usually an important item on the agenda.

Science and Mathematics

20. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the number of science and mathematics teachers in Liverpool secondary schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information is not available centrally on the total number of teachers currently teaching specified subjects in individual education authorities. The Department's teacher records show that there were 280 and 114 graduates in science and mathematics respectively, employed in maintained Liverpool secondary schools at the end of March 1984.

21. Dr. Hampson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of candidates in mathematics and science at A-level are girls.

Mr. Chris Patten: In England in 1983-84, 29 per cent. of A-level candidates in mathematics and 37 per cent. in science were girls.

School Books (Expenditure)

22. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied with the level of expenditure per pupil on text and library books in primary schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Since 1979, spending per primary school pupil on books has increased slightly in real terms as measured by the GDP deflator; it is also encouraging to note that, in their report on "The effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England—1984" Her Majesty's inspectors stated that the level of book provision in primary schools was "satisfactory or better in over four-fifths of LEAs." However, the Government acknowledge that a limited increase in expenditure on books is needed to support their policies for the primary schools. Our expenditure plans allow authorities to continue to give some priority to this area of expenditure so long as they take advantage of the scope for savings elsewhere in the education budget and contain their costs.

School Books (Expenditure)

44. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is satisfied with the level of expenditure per pupil on text and library books in secondary schools.

45. Mr Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the level of expenditure per pupil on text and library books in secondary schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: In their report on "The effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England—1984" Her Majesty's inspectors stated that the level of book provision was satisfactory or better for 11 to 16-year-olds in two thirds of LEAs and for the 16 to 19 age groups in schools in over three quarters of LEAs. However, in recent years expenditure per secondary school pupil on books has fallen as schools have spent more of a rising capitation allowance on equipment. Some local education authorities and schools could with advantage give higher priority to spending on books. The Government have made proposals to pay education support grant to assist the purchase of books and equipment needed for courses leading to the new GCSE examination.

ILEA Schools

24. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the standards of academic achievement in Inner London education authority schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: Her Majesty's inspectors have commented on the quality of educational provision in a number of reports published on inspections of ILEA schools. The Department's school leavers survey measures the CSE and GCE achievements of young people at the time they leave school, and the results, broken down by local education authority, are published regularly in the Department's series of statistical bulletins. Examination results on their own are insufficient, however, as one of the possible measures of what the schools have achieved for their pupils unless allowance is made of pupils' background. The Department's "Statistical Bulletin 13/84", entitled "School Standards and Spending", showed that the socio-economic background of pupils is highly associated statistically with their examination results. The bulletin suggested that when allowance is made for background factors, pupils' examination results in the ILEA are close to those that might be expected. The bulletin also showed that at the level of the LEA there was very little association between levels of achievement and levels of expenditure, which in the ILEA are uniquely high.

The statistical bulletin analysed examination achievement at the level of the local education authority. Within that unit there are great variations. The Government's policies for raising standards, set out in "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) involve raising the performance of poorer schools to the level of the best comparable schools. Those policies are as relevant in inner London as elsewhere.

Selective Schools (Closures)

26. Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many plans for the closure of selective schools are currently under consideration by his Department.

Mr. Dunn: Proposals involving the closure of two grammar schools are currently under consideration in the Department.

Truancy

28. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how truancy figures in inner London compare with those in other parts of England.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department does not maintain any central record of statistics about truancy.

Social Work Education and Training

29. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to increase the allocation of funds for social work education and training.

Mr. Walden: As regards the public sector of advanced further education, my right hon. Friend is advised on the allocation of funding by the NAB. For 1986-87 he has accepted the NAB's advice, based on target student numbers by subject for each institution, on the distribution of resource provision, and against this background expenditure in 1986-87 is consistent with the preservation of the unit of resource (expenditure per student) actually obtaining in 1985-86. Advice on the pattern of provision for 1987-88 will be offered by the NAB at the end of the year, by which time decisions will have been taken about the resources available for local authority higher education. The university sector will be making its own decisions about allocation of resources provided via the UGC and any funding which may be obtained from private and business sources.

36. Mr Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students are currently undergoing social worker training courses; and how this compares with each of the previous three years.

Mr. Walden: The number of students in publicly funded further education establishments on courses recognised by the Central Council for Education and Training in social work are shown in the table. The figures are for the latest four years available. Figures for the numbers of students undergoing social work training in universities are not readily available.

Higher Education (Books)

30. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the provision of books in universities, polytechnics and colleges, in the light of the National Book League's recent publication, a copy of which hs been sent to him.

Mr. Walden: Decisions about the amount to be spent on books rest with individual universities, polytechnics and colleges, within the total funds available to them, but my right hon. Friend is concerned by the evidence that spending on books has been disproportionately reduced.

Association of Polytechnic Teachers

31. Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the Association of Polytechnic Teachers is routinely consulted on matters concerning higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: In cases where consultation encompasses a range of interested parties, and where the Association of Polytechnic Teachers (APT) is perceived to have an interest, the APT is included in the consultative process. My right hon. Friend welcomes the APT's evident willingness to contribute its comments on a wide range of higher education issues. I myself met it on 3 March to discuss its responses to the higher education Green Paper.

GCSE

32. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what talks he has had in recent weeks with the teachers' unions about the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has not held such discussions, but I have had meetings, in recent weeks, with the Assistant Masters and Mistresses Association, the Secondary Heads Association and the National Association of Head Teachers.

33. Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what talks he has had in recent weeks with local education authorities about the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has had correspondence but not discussion with local education authorities in recent weeks on this matter.

34. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement about preparations for the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education examinations.

38. Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement about preparations for the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby).

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what response he has made to the letter from the general secretary of the Secondary Heads Association about the finances which he has devoted to the general certificate of secondary education development programme.

Mr. Chris Patten: The general secretary of the Secondary Heads Association wrote to me on 20 March following the announcement by my right hon. Friend on 13 March of the response that the Government are making to the concerns expressed by his association and others. In my response to the general secretary I have reminded him of the considerable support that the Government are giving to the preparations for the GCSE which will allow the orderly completion of the training programme for all teachers and will enable local education authorities to fund a real increase in their provision for books and equipment for the GCSE.

Students (Maintenance)

37. Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider implementing a fundamental review of post-16 years student maintenance.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 19 November 1985 at column 689.

School Buildings

40. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received regarding resources for school buildings, repairs and maintenance.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received recent written representations from some 300 bodies and individuals, including hon. Members, on these topics.

Schools (Midday Supervision)

41. Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is satisfied with the arrangements of local education authorities with regard to levels of supervision in giving effect to section 2 of the Education (Amendment) Act 1986.

42. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, how many local education authorities have made firm proposals to give effect to the provisions of secton 2 of the Education (Amendment) Act 1986.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier to day to the hon. Members for Oldham, Central and Royton (Mr. Lamond), for Manchester, Central (Mr. Litherland), for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) and for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham).

43. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, whether he has any plans to meet the National Association of Headteachers to discuss the implementation of the Education (Amendment) Act 1986.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member or Jarrow (Mr. Dixon).

Teachers (Pay)

47. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations his Department has had with the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service in relation to its role in seeking a new salary structure for teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Officials of my Department have attended meetings at ACAS with other representatives of the Burnham P and S committee management panel.

High Energy Physics

48. Sir John Osborn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now make a statement on the progress being made by the Governments of the member countries of CERN to review expenditure on high energy physics following the meeting which he attended of CERN's council.

Mr. Walden: The president of the CERN council is considering the proposals made by Governments of CERN member states for individuals to be members of the group to conduct the in-depth review, as agreed by the council at its meeting on 20 February and reported by me to the House on 21 February at columns 355-56.

Student Grants

49. Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in the last six months concerning a restructuring of student grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The case for a review has been raised in the many hundreds of letters received about grant levels proposed for 1986-87 and the proposal to withdraw students from social security benefits; and several Members spoke in favour of a review during the debate on student support on 12 March. However, we remain committed to the view announced by my right hon. Friend on 12 November that no useful purpose would be served by a review which did not include student loans.

Initiatives

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all the education initiatives taken by his Department since 1979 and the cost to the Exchequer to date of each initiative.

Sir Keith Joseph: Our principal concern in education has been to raise standards at all ability levels and to obtain better value for money throughout the education system. We have put great emphasis on the need for a closer relationship between the education service and the outside world, particularly industry and commerce. These concerns have been reflected in a wide range of initiatives affecting all parts of the education service. Since 1979 the proportion of children commencing education before the age of five has increased and the numbers in education of all types beyond 16 have also increased. It is not practicable in the time available to identify the cost of the many measures undertaken but these are listed and have all been taken forward within the planned provision for public expenditure as announced.

In schools

The Government's principal achievements in respect to the schools are set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) published on 26 March 1985. In particular, the definition with greater clarity of the objectives and content of the curriculum, financial support for a pilot initiative to promote technical and vocational education for 14 to 18-year-olds in schools and colleges; the support of a pilot programme for improving the education of lower attaining pupils; and the establishment of a scheme for in-service grants for teachers.

The assisted places scheme has been established, to provide a wider range of opportunity.

Decisions have been taken to introduce a new system of examinations at 16, the general certificate of secondary education, based on national criteria; to introduce the AS level examination to broaden A-level studies; and to introduce, and to develop, through specially financed pilot projects, records of achievement for all school leavers.

Legislation in this field has included: the Education Act 1979 which removed the compulsion on local education authorities to reorganise their secondary school provision along comprehensive lines; the Education Act 1980 which, among other matters, improved arrangements for meals, parental preference in admission to school including a right of appeal and provided for parent governors on all governing bodies; and the Education Act 1981 which introduced new arrangements for educating children with special needs.

The Education Bill, now before Parliament, will reform school government, giving more influence to parents. It will also provide for new financial arrangements to make in-service training of teachers more effective.

All initial training courses are being reviewed and strengthened where necessary.

Spending per pupil is now some 19 per cent. higher than in 1979, with a best ever overall pupil-teacher ratio of 17·8:1.

In other parts of the education system the Government have promoted improvements in performance by:

In Further Education

Setting out and implementing important decisions for vocational education in the White Paper "Training for Jobs";

The formation of the Business and Technician Education Council with an important role in the preparation of skilled manpower;

Introducing the new certificate of pre-vocational education (CPVE) as an additional option in the range of courses preparing young people for the world of work, and available in both schools and colleges;

The establishment of a scheme of in-service training grants for further education lecturers;

The operation of college-employer links project (CELP) aimed at increasing colleges' responsiveness to employers' needs and the awareness of the latter of college facilities;

Developing the work of the further education unit, giving it new status and developing the presentation of its reports.

In Adult and Continuing Education

Launching PICKUP to promote provision of updating and broadening the skills of those in mid-career; the programme is helping to secure an increase in updating education of about 10 per cent. a year, especially in the areas of technology and business studies;

Establishing over 100 local collaborative projects in which educational institutions and firms work in partnership to offer adult training and updating—a joint venture between PICKUP and the MSC within the Government's adult training campaign;

Initiating REPLAN for meeting more effectively the education needs of unemployed adults;

Promoting the establishment of a national unit for the development of continuing education.

In Higher Education

The number of home students in higher education has increased, including a general shift towards vocational courses and specifically a 30 per cent. increase in the numbers on science and engineering courses. This reflects a 15 per cent. growth in the proportion of 18 to 19-year-olds entering higher education and an increase of 12 per cent. in the number of mature entrants. At the same time measures to preserve and enhance quality and to increase the cost-effectiveness of the system and its responsiveness to the needs of the economy have been pursued; as elements within the movement towards science and engineering, launching the information technology initiative in 1982 and the engineering and technology programme with industry itself contributing £24 million. Specific measures to link higher education and industry in collaborative projects include the appointment of more industrialists to educational bodies;

the Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education has been set up to review and evaluate initial teacher training courses for which criteria have been set down; establishing the educational counselling and credit transfer information service (ECCTIS); and supporting the development of a computer-aided careers guidance system for graduates; establishing the National Advisory Body for public sector higher education; providing resources for "new blood" in the universities; and for the enhancement of equipment in selected centres of high quality research in the universities; reviewing academic validation procedures in the public sector of higher education a committee under Sir Norman Lindop reported in 1985, and the Government's position was set out in a statement on 17 March 1986; providing support for programmes of efficiency studies in the universities and in public sector higher education.

Generally in Education publishing reports of formal inspections by Her Majesty's inspectorate and introducing arrangements for more systematic follow up action, and publishing the annual HMI report on the observed effects of LEA expenditure policies; introducing a scheme of education support grants covering up to £30 million of expenditure in 1985-86 on selected activities of national education importance, as provided for under the Education (Grants and Awards) Act 1984;

introducing new arrangements for decision-making and management within the Department, aimed at greater efficiency and value for money.

It is not practicable in the time available to identify the cost of each of these measures but all these initiatives have been undertaken within the provision for public expenditure which has been announced.

Student Grants

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report those educational grants which it is mandatory for local education authorities to pay.

Mr. Walden: Mandatory awards are available for the courses described in regulation 10 of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations 1985—viz full-time or sandwich courses leading to a first degree, a diploma of higher education, a higher national diploma (including the higher national diploma of the Business and Technician Education Council) and full-time and certain part-time courses of initial training for teachers. There are also a considerable number of courses that have been designated as comparable to a first degree course and certain prescribed international courses leading to a first degree provided by an institution in the United Kingdom in conjunction with one in another country. A list of these courses and the institutions which provide them has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what would be the estimated cost of ending parental contributions towards the local education authority grants paid to students undertaking university education;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that no student who has reached the age of 18 years should have his or her grant entitlement for undertaking university degree courses reduced on a means-testing of the parents' income; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: No. The cost of abolishing parental contributions in respect of mandatory award holders undertaking university degree courses — currently estimated at about £160 million per annum — is prohibitively high.

School Leavers

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what number of leavers from non-comprehensive schools in 1983-84 were from secondary modern schools; and what other types are included in the heading Other Secondary in table 8 of his Statistical Bulletin No. 4/86;

(2) if he will publish a table to show, on the lines of table 8 of his Statistical Bulletin No. 4/86, the qualifications of leavers from maintained non-comprehensive schools.

Mr. Dunn: The number of leavers from maintained non-comprehensive schools and their CSE/GCE examination attainments and intended distinations for 1983-84 were:

Oxfordshire

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was Oxfordshire's education capital expenditure allocation at outturn and at constant prices in each year from 1981-82 to 1986-87; and what was the original bid received by his Department for each year.

Mr. Dunn: The following are Oxfordshire's bids and the allocations at outturn and constant prices for prescribed expenditure made by my right hon. Friend under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980:

	Bid	Allocation (£,000's) Outturn	Constant†
1981-82	*	3,185	3,714
1982-83	*	4,273	4,656

1985-86	9,134	3,650	3,476
1986-87	13,423	2,055	1,873

* Cash bids for these years were not required for prescribed allocation purposes.

† Expressed at 1984-85 prices using the GDP deflator.

The following are the allocations for capital expenditure by the governors of voluntary aided and special agreement schools in the area of Oxfordshire education authority on which my right hon. Friend was prepared to pay grant:

Poundswick School

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about recent attendance figures for pupils at Poundswick school, Manchester; if he can give any breakdown of these figures as between form years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not available centrally.

Schools (Leicestershire)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will now make provision within the capital allocation for 1986-87, for building work at St. Francis Roman Catholic primary school, Melton Mowbray, following the submission to him in that regard by the Director of Education of Leicestershire county council on 27 February.

Mr. Dunn: The available resources for aided works for 1986-87 have been fully allocated and there is no prospect of additional resources being made available during the current financial year for building work at St. Francis Roman Catholic primary school, Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will now make immediate provision, by means of a capital allocation, for a mobile classroom for St. Peter and St. Paul Church of England primary school, Syston, following the submission to him in that regard by the Director of Education of Leicestershire County Council on 27 February.

Mr. Dunn: The Leicestershire local education authority did not include a bid for a project at St. Peter and St. Paul Church of England primary school, Syston, in its bid for a capital allocation for works on aided schools in 1986-87 and no allocation was therefore made. There is now no prospect of making provision for this project during the current financial year.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations have been received by his Department from the Director of Education of Leicestershire county council regarding the absence of any capital allocation for minor or major works in aided schools in 1986-87; and what reply has been given.

Mr. Dunn: The director of education for Leicestershire wrote to the Department on 27 February about the absence of any capital allocation for major or minor works in aided schools in 1986-87. The Department's reply of 31 March explained resources for capital expenditure were constrained and that all bids were examined against nationally applied criteria. None of Leicestershire's aided projects fell into a sufficiently high category of priority to receive an allocation in 1986-87. I am placing a copy of the Department's letter in the Library.

Animal Disease Control

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what effects he estimates the reductions in the budgets of the research institutes of the Agricultural and Food Research Council in 1986-87 and 1987-88 will have upon future animal health and disease control in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Walden: Following the public expenditure decisions for 1986-87 and 1987-88 the Government funded programme of research on animal diseases to be carried out at Agricultural and Food Research Council institutes has had to be significantly reduced. However, I understand that the council has made every effort to maintain research programmes of the highest quality and maximum productivity. Furthermore, the industry has been invited to contribute to the funding of such work from which it benefits. The Government are hopeful of achieving a fruitful partnership with industry that will help to ensure that the animal health and disease control needs of the United Kingdom are fully met. The need to maintain levels of expertise in important areas of research and development relating to animal disease control and animal welfare and to balance the research with the future needs of the industry have been major determinants of the Government funded programme.

Constituents' Inquiries

Mr. Gale asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what procedures his Department has for ensuring that inquiries from hon. and right hon. Members on behalf of constituents receive replies.

Sir Keith Joseph: Incoming letters from right hon. and hon. Members are now registered on an electronic database and a regular check is kept to ensure that replies are issued as promptly as possible.

Pre-school Places

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the figures for the number of pre-school places per 1,000 of the under-five population in education authorities grouped by political control on the classification used by the Secretary of State for the Environment in his reply to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 15 January, Official Report, column 577;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a table listing education authorities by the number of pre-school places they provide per 1,000 of the under-five population.

Mr. Dunn: Information on the number of places is not available. The number of children aged under five years attending maintained nursery and primary school per 1,000 of the three and four-year-old population in January 1985 was as follows:

Number of pre-school children per 1,000 of the population aged three and four at January 1985.

Higher Education

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he proposes to take to reassure university staff who have expressed concern at apparent trends in the level of support for higher education; and if he will make a further statement.

Mr. Walden: The Government's expenditure plans envisage that if inflation declines at the rate we expect, universities will need to make savings in real terms of about 1 per cent. a year between now and 1988-89. We recognise that this will face universities with a difficult task but, given the need to constrain the growth of public expenditure, we believe that this is not unreasonable and can be achieved through increases in efficiency. Nevertheless, my right hon. Friend and I have made clear on a number of occasions that we would be very ready to consider any systematic information provided by universities or their staff about possible adverse consequences for the size and quality of the university system, and to take account of such information in our further planning.

Child Abuse

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, pursuant to the answers of 27 March, Official Report, column 559, concerning the background of teachers and prevention of child abuse, he will state what he means by the joint guidance being at an advanced stage of preparation; and when he expects the guidelines to be circulated.

Mr. Chris Patten: Joint guidance on checking the criminal background of those seeking to work with children in the statutory sector will shortly be considered for final approval by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science, for Home Affairs, for Social Services and for Wales. Subject to approval, the aim is to circulate the guidance in a few weeks' time.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the number of school pupils going from each London borough from school to university or public sector higher education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Information in the form requested for individual local education authorities is not available. However, the table shows the total number of school leavers and the proportion who express an intention to pursue full-time further and higher education courses directly on leaving school averaged over a three-year period for each of the Greater London local education authorities.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Housing Benefit

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the treatment of home income plans for the purpose of calculating housing benefit entitlement.

Mr. Major: The current guidance to local authorities, consolidated in a manual issued last summer, reflects the legal advice we have received on how home income plans should be treated when assessing entitlement to housing benefit. We have received a number of representations suggesting an alternative approach, which would require an amendment to the Housing Benefits Regulations, and are considering the position. We expect to be able to announce the outcome in the near future.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what account he took of drug quantity increase in his determination of the increase in prescription charges.

Mr. Hayhoe: The quantity of drugs prescribed per patient was one of the factors taken into account by Ministers when reaching a decision on the level of prescription charges.

Leyton and Leytonstone

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of claimants in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) invalidity benefit/pension, (c) industrial disablement benefit and (d) non-contributory invalidity pension/housewives non-contributory invalidity pension or severe disablement allowance for the latest available year in Leyton and Leytonstone.

Mr. Major: The London postal districts of Leyton and Leytonstone are covered by the Department's office at Leytonstone although the boundaries are not conterminous. The number of claimants at that office in receipt of sickness and invalidity benefit/pension and severe disablement allowance as at 11 March 1986, and in receipt of industrial disablement benefit as at 11 February 1986 (the latest dates for which information is available) is as follows:

	Numbers
Sickness and invalidity benefit/pension	1,395
Severe disablement allowance	355
Industrial disablement benefit	217

Separate records are not kept of the number of claimants in receipt of sickness and invalidity benefit/pension.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of claimant couples with children in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit only, (b) supplementary benefit only and (c) unemployment and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Leyton and Leytonstone.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of claimants in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit only, (b) supplementary benefit only and (c) both unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Leyton and Leytonstone excluding pensioner claimants and claimants with children.

Mr. Major: The boundaries of unemployment benefit offices and local social security offices are not conterminous and therefore it is not possible to provide comparable local figures for claimants receiving unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit.

On 11 February 1986 (the latest date for which information is available) there were 9,930 people receiving supplementary benefit from the Leytonstone social security office of whom 6,755 were under pension age and of these 4,093 were unemployed. Information is not available to show how many of these have children.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the numbers of (a) single payments and (b) urgent needs payments, weekly and one-off, paid to (i) claimants under pensionable age not required to register for work, (ii) claimants under pensionable age required to register for work and (iii) persons over pensionable age and (x) the average rate per 1,000 claimants in (i), (ii) and (iii), (y) the average payment in (i), (ii) and (iii) and (z) the number of claimants with dependent children for the latest available year in Leyton and Leytonstone.

Mr. Major: The London postal districts of Leyton and Leytonstone are covered by the Department's office at Leytonstone, although the boundaries are not conterminous.

The table shows the information available on (a) single payments and (b) urgent need payments for the year up to March 1985 (the latest available figures). Comparable information about claimants with dependent children is only available on a national basis.

	(i) people under pension age not required to register for work	(ii) unemployed people	(iii) people over pension age
(a) single payments
No. of awards	2,114	1,726	482
Average rate per 1,000 claimants	949	435	143
Average payment £	86	89	65
(b) urgent need payments
No. of awards	227	348	13
Average rate per 1,000 claimants	102	88	4

Information is not kept of the amounts of urgent need payments made.

Income Support

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the income support available to British subjects who had been working but had become unemployed in each of the following countries: (a) France, (b) West Germany, (c) Italy, and (d) Eire.

Mr. Major: The European convention on social and medical assistance to which France, West Germany, Italy, the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom are signatories, provides that nationals of countries which are parties tc the convention, who are lawfully present in another signatory's country without means, are entitled to social assistance on the same basis as that country's own nationals. Information on social assistance benefits is contained in section IX of the Department's publication, "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the Member States of the European Communities, Portugal and Spain (Position at 1 January 1985)", a copy of which is available in the Library.

A United Kingdom national who has been employed and becomes unemployed in France, West Germany, Italy or the Republic of Ireland may qualify for unemployment benefit on the same basis and subject to the same conditions as a national of the particular member state concerned. For these purposes the insurance record in the United Kingdom may be taken into account under arrangements in European Community legislation. Details of the basic conditions that have to be satisfied and of the rates of benefit payable in EC member states are given in section VII of the tables to which I have referred.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the income support available to British subjects who were visitors in each of the following countries if they found themselves without any money: (a) France, (b) West Germany, (c) Italy and (d) Eire.

Mr. Major: Such information as is available is contained in the Department's publication, "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the Member States of the European Communities, Portugal and Spain (Position at 1 January 1985)", a copy of which is in the Library. As section IX of that publication indicates, there is no statutory right to assistance in France or Italy for people who are not residents of those countries. The supplementary welfare allowance payable in Ireland is shown in section IX as available to residents only, but our latest information is that a condition of residence is not essential.

Rate Rebates (Solihull)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many people in the borough of Solihull possessing savings over £6,000 in value will lose the benefit of any rate rebate if the proposed changes in social security payments are enacted.

Mr. Major: The Department does not collect information about the capital holdings of housing benefit recipients, and the sample data used to produce the very broad estimates in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691) do not readily permit a breakdown by different regions of the country.

Supplementary Benefit

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate how many recipients of supplementary benefit in the United Kingdom in 1984 and 1985 had dependent children; and what number of children this represented.

Mr. Major: The following estimated information is available for 1984; similar information for 1985 is not yet available.

(a) Estimated number of supplementary benefit recipients in the United Kingdom with dependent children—1 million.

(b) Estimated number of dependent children—2 million.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving laundry additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) pensioners aged 60 to 79 years of age, (b) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients;

(2) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving diet additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) pensioners aged 60 to 79 years, (b) pensioners aged over 80 years, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients;

(3) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving heating additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) to pensioners aged 60 to 79 years, (b) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 213]: The information at December 1983, the latest date for which information is available, is as follows:

	(1) *Age 60-79	(2) Age 80 and over	(3) Disabled aged 60-79	(4) Others
Laundry additions
Number (000)	47	27	4	47

Number (000)	1,057	390	46	1,140
Average weekly amount (£)	2·92	3·48	4·23	3·12
Total weekly amount paid (£000)	3,085	1,358	196	3,563

* Includes disabled claimants shown in column 3.

† The amount does not take account of the effect of the available scale margin in relevant cases so that that average amount of benefit actually received and the total amount paid would be somewhat lower than shown.

‡ A claimant with dependants may receive more than one addition for diet: the number of additions made will be greater than the number of claimants shown as receiving an addition, and the average amount shown is greater than the average amount of each addition.

Drug Trafficking and Alcoholism

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which foreign health Ministers attended the recent international conference of health Ministers in London; and what action will be taken collectively by Her Majesty's Government and the other Governments involved to reduce drug trafficking and alcoholism.

Mr. Whitney: Delegations from 30 countries attended the conference. Ministers headed the delegations from the following 19 countries:

Australia, the Bahamas, Burma, Colombia, Greece, India, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Malaysia, Mexico, Nigeria, Peru, Sir Lanka, Sweden, Thailand, United Kingdom and USSR.

In addition, 11 countries sent delegations headed by senior officials from their Health Departments:

Bolivia, Canada, Egypt, Federal Republic of Germany, Finland, France, the Netherlands, Poland, Spain, Tanzania and United States of America.

Brazil and Chile were represented by observers from their London embassies.

The conference was concerned with the health aspects of the misuse of narcotic and psychotropic drugs. It did not directly address the questions of trafficking and alcoholism. A copy of the Ministers' statement, released at the end of the conference, is being placed in the Library.

Benefit (London South Region)

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the average time taken to process postal applications for benefit in each office located in the London south region in the latest period for which figures are available;

(2) what is the average time taken to process applications for benefit in each office of his Department located in the London south region; what is the number of outstanding visits on the latest available date in each office in the London south region; and how many visits have been abandoned during the latest month for which figures are available in each office in the London south region.

Mr. Major: Tables setting out the latest available information on processing benefit applications and in respect of supplementary benefit home visits for each local office in London south region have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many postal claims for benefit were outstanding in each office in the London south region on the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: Tables setting out the available figures of outstanding postal benefit claims on 11 March 1986 have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what comparison his Department has undertaken of current pay levels of staff employed in offices of his Department located in the London south region in relation to pay levels in comparable employment in the region.

Mr. Major: None.

Geriatric Patients

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, whether he has been consulted about the proposal to relocate geriatric patients from St. Nicholas hospital, Plumstead in the psychiatric unit at Greenwich District Hospital; and if he is satisfied that this is in the best interests of the patients and their families.

Mr. Whitney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services has approved the proposal by Greenwich health authority to close St. Nicholas hospital. No decision has yet been made regarding alternative accommodation for the geriatric patients affected. The health authority will consider a number of options at its meeting today. Whichever option is agreed, I would expect the health authority to ensure that patients currently in St. Nicholas continue to receive the best possible standard of care.

Radiation

Dr. Bray asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how the responsibilities and terms of reference of the committee on medical aspects of radiation in the environment relate to those of the Medical Research Council and the National Radiological Protection Board, particularly with regard to research and to dose limits.

Mr. Whitney: It is the statutory function of the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) (a) by means of research and otherwise to advance the acquisition of knowledge about the protection of mankind from radiation hazards; and (b) to provide information and advice to persons (including Government Departments) with responsibilities in the United Kingdom in relation to the protection from radiation hazards either of the community as a whole or of particular sections of the community.

The board has been directed by Ministers to advise Government Departments and statutory bodies on the acceptability of and application in the United Kingdom of radiation protection standards (including dose limits) recommended by the International Commission on Radiological Protection (ICRP) and other international bodies, taking into consideration such advice that it may obtain from the Medical Research Council in relation to the biological bases on which standards rest.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) operates under a royal charter which empowers it to undertake biomedical research. It is involved in fundamental research to investigate the effect of radiation on biological systems. It has a committee on the effects of ionising radiation (CEIR), the terms of reference of which are:

(a) to keep the field of radiobiology under general review and to advise and report to the cell board as appropriate: and

(b) to advise on the biological basis on which radiological protection standards rest, and on the risks arising from ionising radiation.

Both the NRPB and the MRC send assessors to meetings of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). This is a Government advisory body whose terms of reference are:

"To assesss and advise Government on the health aspects of radiation in the environment and to assess the adequacy of the available data and the need for further research".

It does not carry out its own research. The NRPB helps provide the secretariat for COMARE.

The NRPB advises on radiation protection matters over a number of fields, but COMARE is concerned solely with the health implications of environmental radiation.

Whilst the roles of all three bodies are related, there is close co-operation between them to avoid duplication.

Children in Care

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average weekly cost of each child (a) in local authority care and (b) in a foster family in each of the main regions of Great Britain.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not available in precisely the form requested. The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountacy (CIPFA) publishes annual volumes "Personal Social Services Statistics"; the information in the table is derived from its latest (1984-85) information on actual spending by local authorities, and covers England and Wales.

Gross cost per week—1984-85

	Local Authority residential care £	Community placements £
North	322·18	41·36
Yorkshire and Humberside	278·99	41·13
East Midlands	327·55	42·15
East Anglia	323·77	39·40
South East	421·04	49·82
South West	340·76	43·48
West Midlands	270·14	42·99
North West	296·66	41·20
Wales	290·03	36·38

Notes:

1. The information on residential care includes costs in each authority's own residential homes; it excludes payments made in respect of children accommodated elsewhere.

2. The information on community placements includes costs of children boarded in foster homes, those in lodgings and those home on trial; the numbers of children home on trial are excluded, but this affects the figures only marginally.

3. Not all authorities provided information. Further details can be found in the CIPFA volume, a copy of which is in the Library.

Joint Finance Arrangements

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the total allocations made under joint finance arrangements in England and Wales for each year since its introduction, and state for each year to which authorities allocations have been made and the amounts of money involved in each case.

Mr. Hayhoe: The total allocations broken down by year and health authority for England are given in the following table. Allocations in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Medical Lasers

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make additional resources available to regional health authorities to enable them to purchase and install in their hospitals more medical lasers.

Mr. Whitney: It is not our general policy to make special allocations for specific items of equipment. It is for health authorities to decide how best to deploy their cash limits in the light of national and local priorities.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many lasers have been purchased by each regional health authority in England during the last seven years; and at what cost.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not available centrally.

Amputations and Limb Fitting

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many amputations and artificial limb fittings have been carried out in hospitals in each regional health authority in England during the last seven years; and at what cost.

Mr. Newton: Information about the number and cost of amputations in each regional health authority is not available centrally. The following table refers to the provision of artificial limbs through the Department's artificial limb and appliance centres:

Year	New patients referred to centres (a)	Total limbs supplied (b)	Total repairs	Cost at current prices (c) £Million
1979	5,780	18,040	85,900	17·8
1980	5,470	17,780	99,240	24·5
1981	5,730	19,220	97,130	25·1

1984	5,320	21,150	98,160	33·2
1985	5,570	22,900	93,210	35·4

(a) Includes patients with congenital malformations and patients whose amputation was carried out in another year.
(b) Total new and replacement limb supplied to all patients.
(c) The cost represents the total payment to contractors during the year for the provision of limb repairs and prosthetic services.

Dental Estimates Board (Computer System)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the introduction of the new Dental Estimates Board computer system has been delayed for a further two years.

Mr. Whitney: There is no delay; the new computer has been delivered and is operational.

Private Patients

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have been admitted to National Health Service hospitals in the west midlands region in each of the last seven years as private patients; and what income was yielded as a result of such admissions.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information she seeks in precisely the form requested. The relevant information, for the most recent years available centrally, is as follows:

Discharges and deaths of private patients in NHS hospitals West Midlands Regional Health Authority

	Number

NHS (Management Objectives)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the inclusion by National Health Service unit general managers in documents setting out management objectives of clauses reserving the right to impose penalties on National Health Service staff who, in the judgment of the unit general manager concerned, fail to meet those management objectives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: As the hon. Member has now provided me with details of a particular instance he has in mind, I will investigate this and let the hon. Member have a fuller reply as soon as possible.

Nurseries Act 1948

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what he attributes the variation of supervisor ratios with regard to local authority implementation of the Nurseries Act 1948.

Mr. Whitney: Local authorities are free to determine the extent of supervision they require in facilities registered under the Nurseries and Child-Minders Regulation Act 1948. No information is held centrally on local variations.

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the Nurseries Act 1948; and if he intends to update its provisions.

Mr. Whitney: A recent consultation exercise of the Department on the possible revision of the Nurseries and Child-Minders Regulation Act 1948 attracted 130 responses from those consulted in England (that is statutory authorities and their representative associations, professional associations, voluntary bodies and others interested in day-care for children under five). We hope to make an announcement soon on how we intend to proceed.

Guardians ad Litem

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has had regarding the level of co-operation received by court-appointed guardians ad litem in care proceedings, from social services officials in protecting their charges.

Mr. Whitney: No formal representations have been received and we have no reason to believe that guardians ad litem are not receiving full co-operation from social services departments.

Comments received during 1985 on how the guardian ad litem arrangements were working in practice included some general references to the need for guardians ad litem to have access to records, and the Department, when a circular was issued on 3 February this year about the arrangements, took the opportunity to include a reminder to local authorities that they are expected to allow guardians ad litem access to their records.

Board and Lodging Regulations (Scotland)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people under the age of 25 years in Scotland have been affected by changes in the board and lodging regulations since November 1985.

Mr. Newton: I regret that separate statistical information on this subject is not maintained and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria are used by his Department's medical boards to assess the level of disability of persons claiming disablement benefit who suffer vibration-induced white finger.

Mr. Newton: In claims for vibration white finger, as for other prescribed diseases, the assessment of disablement is made by independent medical boards. Using their professional skills and judgment, they compare the claimant with a physically and mentally normal person of the same age and sex. The effect of the occupational disease on any other condition present is also taken into account.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage disability was awarded for each person granted disablement benefit as a consequence of vibration-induced white finger; and where on the Pelmear/Taylor scale each claimant's vibration white finger was placed during the last 12 month period for which statistics were available.

Mr. Newton: Assessments in the period of 1 April 1985 to 26 March 1986 were as follows:

Per cent. disablement	Number of successful claim
5	22
*—	29
	154

* Not yet available.

Claimants' scores on the Pelmear/Taylor scale are not recorded.

Hip Treatment (South Warwickshire)

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average waiting time for treatment for hip disorders in the South Warwickshire health authority area.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend the information he seeks. The numbers in the central data sample are too small for reliable estimates to be made below regional level. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairman of the South Warwickshire district health authority about the information requested.

Mrs. Myra Mabel Fairclough (Inquiry)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now require the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire health authority to make public the details of the inquiry that it held into the death of Mrs. Myra Mabel Fairclough at St. Mary's hospital, Portsmouth.

Mr. Whitney: In view of the continuing possibility of legal proceedings it would be improper at this stage to publicise the report.

Mrs. Agnes Scott

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to reply to the hon. Member for Midlothian's letter to him concerning the case of 95-year-old Mrs. Agnes Scott.

Mr. Major: I wrote to the hon. Member today.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Bob Edwards asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of companies in the Wolverhampton area which have failed to pass on to his Department national insurance contributions which have been deducted from employees' wages.

Mr. Major: No detailed list of these companies is held by the Department of Health and Social Security. The initial responsibility for collection of national insurance contribution rests with the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Bob Edwards asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action is taken by his Department to ensure that people are not denied their entitlement to unemployment benefit, maternity benefit or other benefits related to their national insurance contributions, by the failure of their employers to pass on to the revenue the national insurance contributions they have deducted from their employees' wages.

Mr. Major: Where payment to the Revenue is so delayed as to affect benefit, regulations deem the contributions to have been paid for benefit purposes where the Department is satisfied that the failure to pay was not with the consent or connivance of, or attributable to any negligence on the part of, the employee.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each year since 1978-79 changes in the contribution rates for both employee and employer for class 1 national insurance contributions and if he will state for each year the additional revenue raised by those charges for (i) employees and (ii) employers for each of the years.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986, c. 229]: The information for Great Britain, assuming not contracted out standard rate national insurance contributions, is as follows:

Year	National Insurance contribution rates (per cent.)		Change—all funds (per cent.)		Date change effective	Revenue raised (£ million—estimate)

Notes:

(1) In 1982-83 there was a special rebate on the National Insurance Surcharge (NIS) equivalent to a reduction to 2 per cent. over the whole year, but because this was concentrated in the last quarter it is not possible to give a simple figure for the rate changes.

(2) The rate payable on all earnings if weekly earnings (or equivalent) reach (a) but do not exceed (b) is as follows:

NIC rate	Earnings
	(a)	(b)
per cent.	£	£
5	35·50	54·99
7	55·00	89·99
9	90·00	129·99
10·45	130·00	*

* Employers only: no upper limit.

(3) The figures ignore both the changes in the earnings limits (except for the 1985-86 restructuring where the abolition of the employer's upper earnings limit has been allowed for), and also the effects of special NIS rates payable by local authorities.

West Sussex Ambulance Service

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the cost of the West Sussex ambulance service in each of the past five years; and what he expects the cost to be in the next three years;

(2) if he will specify what recent changes have been made in the West Sussex ambulance service and the extent to which these changes were carried out as a result of instructions from his Department rather than from the health authorities concerned.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my right hon. Friend the information he seeks as this is not held centrally. My right hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of Worthing district health authority, which manages the ambulance service on behalf of the three West Sussex health districts for this information.

Home Helps

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the figures for numbers of home helps per 1,000 of the elderly population in social work authorities grouped by political control on the classification used by the Secretary of State for the Environment in his reply to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 15 January, Official Report, column 577.

Mr. Whitney: The information is given in the table.

Table: Estimated number of home helps at 30 September 1985 per thousand population aged 65 years and over by political control

	Numbers	Number of Authorities included in analysis
England	7·4	109
Conservative controlled	5·4	31
Labour controlled	11·5	32
Independent controlled	13·5	1

Notes

a. The number of home helps has been expressed as whole-time equivalents.

b. Estimated population at 30 June 1984.

c. As in the reply to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 15 January, at column 577, the analysis excludes authorities that changed political control between 1979 and 1985 and authorities under no overall political control, except in the England figures.

Social Work Authorities (Statistics)

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table listing social work authorities with (a) the number of home helps, (b) the number of home meals and (c) the number of lunch club places they provide per 1,000 of the elderly population.

Mr. Whitney: The available information about social services authorities in England, which is not in precisely the form requested, is given in the table.

England—Home Helps, Home Meals, 'Elderly' day centre places. Rates per 1,000 population aged 65 and over—1985 (provisional)

Sugar Consumption

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice his Department gives on the effects and desirable levels of sugar consumption (a) by adults and (b) by children; what information he has on current sugar consumption levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney Although a number of departmental and Health Education Council publications contain advice about the effects of sugar, particularly on dental health, we have not issued guidance on desirable levels of sugar consumption. The most recent official statistics, based on sugar supplies, estimate United Kingdom sugar consumption in 1984 as 44·3 kilogrammes per head per year. The level has remained fairly constant over the past decade.

Dermatology Ward, Royal Victoria Hospital, Newcastle

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has yet considered the proposed closure of a dermatology ward in the Royal Victoria hospital, Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Whitney: Newcastle health authority is currently undertaking a wide-ranging review of its services. As part of that work it is considering a number of areas for investigation, including the rationalisation of its dermatology services. I understand, however, that no firm proposals for this service have yet been considered.

Proposals from health authorities to rationalise services, or to vary the way in which those services are provided, would normally be referred to Ministers only where they involve a substantial variation in services to which the local community health council had objected.

Health Education

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of the health education budget has been spent on education regarding dietary and eating patterns.

Mr. Whitney: The Health Education Council, which is Government funded, spent 1·4 per cent. of its budget (£142,000) in 1985-86 on activity relating to diet and nutrition. Information on the percentage of health authorities' budgets spent on this subject is not held centrally.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria are used to assess the effectiveness of particular health campaigns in health education areas.

Mr. Whitney: Health authorities, which are responsible for their own health education activities, assess the effectiveness of specific campaigns in accordance with their own criteria. National campaigns run by the Health Education Council are normally subject to pre-testing and subsequent evaluation in accordance with criteria appropriate to the particular circumstances.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what sums of money have been spent on health education in each year since 1960.

Mr. Whitney: Total Government funds allocated to the Health Education Council in each of the years since it was set up are:

1968-69*	0·1
1970-71	0·3

The council undertakes a wide variety of health education programmes and carries out the planning and promotion of health education at national level in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Information on the proportion of health authorities' budgets spent on health education is not held centrally.

Single Payments

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, by type of client group, the number and amount of single payments paid in each of the past four years.

Mr. Major: The following tables set out the information requested:

Year	Persons over pension age		Unemployed		Others
	Number of single payments (000s)	Amount £ million	Number of single payments (000s)	Amount £ million	Number of single payments (000s)	Amount £ million
1982	301	10	701	41	594	37
1983	187	12	966	73	721	57
1984	268	18	1,452	110	1,129	89
1985	442	25	2,007	155	1,670	129

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the number and amount of single payments by client group type for Strathclyde, Scotland and Great Britain; what were the reasons for payment by regulation and item for the above areas by client group for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985; and what was the average amount paid by type of item generally for the above areas and periods.

Mr. Major: The information requested is available only for Great Britain. The most recent detailed data about the number and amount of single payments by client group and the reasons for payment are available in tables 19.2 and 19.3 of the "Supplementary Benefit Annual Statistical Enquiry 1983", a copy of which is in the Library.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what mechanism he intends to use to implement his proposals for cuts in single payments; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he intends to implement his proposed cuts in single payment awards.

Mr. Newton: Proposals for changes to the single payments regulations are currently the subject of consultations with the Social Security Advisory Committee in the normal way. Final decisions on content and timing of changes will be taken in the light of the outcome of the consultation. Changes to the rules on single payments require amending regulations to be laid before Parliament.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the effect of his proposals for cuts in single payments on the number of single payment cases going to appeal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: It is not feasible to quantify the effect which our proposals to change the rules for single payments might have on the number of appeals.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what changes he intends to make in the arrangements for assessing the level of single payments, in the light of the decision of the Social Security Commission in allowing the appeal in the case R(SB) 30/85; and if he intends to establish standard sums and a national price list.

Mr. Newton: In September 1985 the Chief Adjudication Officer and the Department jointly issued circular S36/85 on the pricing of single payment awards, part of which followed the commissioner's decision in R(SB) 30/85; a copy of the circular is in the Library. I have since announced, in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) on 24 February at columns 476-78, our proposals for changing the rules on single payments which are currently with the Social Security Advisory Committee for consultation; these provide for a national price list for items of essential furniture and household equipment.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what criteria he will use to determine the proportional share that each region will be expected to cut from single payment awards;

(2) what will be the proportional loss to Scotland of his proposed cut in single payments; and how much this will correspond to in cash terms.

Mr. Newton: There is no question of DHSS offices in Scotland being expected to make any particular cut in money terms. They will simply be expected to apply the revised regulations to the circumstances of any claims which are made. The aim of the proposals nationally is to bring expenditure on single payments back to around 1984 levels.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to what specific factors he attributes the increase in single payments since 1981.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986, c. 380.]: In 1981, the first full year of the regulated scheme, there was a short-term decline in the number and costs of single payments. Factors in the immediate subsequent increase are likely to be increasing awareness of the new basis and rules of help and changes in the claimant population. The continued rapid expansion in more recent years is less readily explainable. Between 1983 and 1985 the numbers, real cost, and rates of payment for each thousand claimants on benefit at the relevant date broadly doubled. In the light of continuing evidence of disparities between individual offices, different parts of the country and groups of claimants, the Government consider that a particular factor in the continued expansion is the relatively open-ended nature of certain of the qualifying conditions.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the use by local authority of publicity campaigns to increase applications for single payments.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986 c. 380]: Our general policy on the use by local authorities of publicity campaigns is to ensure so far as possible they are targetted towards those who are most likely to be entitled to benefit and are planned with the co-operation of our local or regional staff to ensure that the normal work of local offices is not disrupted to the disadvantage of other claimants.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he has evidence of an increase in fraudulent claims for single payments in (a) Southwark and (b) the country as a whole;

(2) if he has conducted an investigation of fraudulent claims for single payments;

(3) what is his estimate of the amount fraudulently claimed in (a) single payments and (b) all other benefits.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986 c. 380]: By its nature, it is not possible to make a reliable estimate of the extent of benefit fraud either locally or nationally. Evidence given in support of single payments claims can be difficult to verify or challenge but we are aware of examples of claims where there must be considerable doubt about the facts presented.

Guardians ad litem

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce legislation to extend the powers of court-appointed guardians ad litem in care proceedings to protect the interests of their charges.

Mr. Whitney: The powers of court-appointed guardians ad litem were recently reappraised as part of a wider review of child care law conducted by an interdepartmental working party. The working party's report was published as a consultative document in October 1985. Its recommendations included a proposal that the guardian ad litem should have access to all local authority records, in line with current practice in the large majority of local authorities. We are now considering responses to the report and we hope to make an announcement soon on how we intend to proceed.

Child Abuse

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Honiton of 27 March, Official Report, column 559, concerning child care workers, he will state what he means by the statement that consultations on the implementation of the recommendations are at an advanced stage; and if he can yet give a date for the regulations to be introduced.

Mr. Whitney: A draft local authority circular was issued for consultation on 18 December 1985. Comments have been received from a wide range of interested parties and it is hoped to issue the circular, revised to take account of the comments received, within the next few weeks.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to how many senior staff in each local authority social services department are engaged (i) full-time, and (ii) part-time on supervision of staff dealing with child abuse cases, and how this compares in each case with central guidelines for staff supervision ratios.

Mr. Whitney: The Department does not collect data relating to the number of people engaged on supervision of staff dealing with child abuse cases. We have no plans to issue guidance on staffing ratios in child abuse work, as this is a matter to be decided by each local authority according to local needs and circumstances.

Hospital Beds (Hull)

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what estimate he has made of the number of ophthalmic operations which did not take place as a result of the closure of ophthalmic beds at the Hull royal infirmary in the last financial year;

(2) what was the reduction in the number of available beds in the last financial year in hospitals in Hull whose loss was attributed by the responsible health authorities to shortage of funds;

(3) what information he has as to the number of ward closures in hospitals in Hull during the last financial year for which the responsible health authorities gave shortage of funds as the reason; and if he has any plans to increase funding for the Hull district health authority;

(4) what is his estimate of the effect on the waiting time for cataract operations in the Hull health authority hospitals as a result of the reduction in ophthalmic beds in the last financial year;

(5) what estimate he has made of the effect on patients of those reductions in beds and other services in the general surgical wards in the Hull district health authority in the last financial year for which shortage of funds has been given as the reason.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally. The regional health authority is responsible for deciding on the levels of funding for individual district health authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairmen of the regional and district health authorities for the information he seeks.

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any application from the Health Education Council for public funds to mount a campaign against the consumption of alcohol.

Mr. Whitney: The Health Education Council's budgeted expenditure on activity concerning alcohol misuse in 1986-87 is £494,000. The council has not requested additional funding for this purpose.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions he has had with the drinks industry over the health aspects of the consumption of alcohol.

Mr. Whitney: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Health met the Wine and Spirit Association on 19 December 1985 and I met the Scotch Whisky Association on 14 January 1986 for informal discussions.

Action on Alcohol Abuse

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any application for public funds from Action on Alcohol Abuse; what has been his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: An application for grant-aid from Action on Alcohol Abuse was received on 2 December 1985. Following a review of the alcohol misuse voluntary sector in 1982, it was decided to maximise the use of departmental funds in this field by continuing grant-aid to a single national voluntary agency. Alcohol Concern was set up in 1983 to undertake a wide range of activities, including many of the stated aims of Action on Alcohol Abuse; we were therefore unable to agree to fund Action on Alcohol Abuse.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what meetings he or his officials have had with representatives from Action on Alcohol Abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Meetings between officials and representatives from Action on Alcohol Abuse took place on 21 January 1983 and 18 July 1985.

Health Education Council

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met the chairman of the Health Education Council; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Whitney: I met the chairman on 17 March when he led a team of council members and officers for the annual review of council activities. Subjects discussed included priorities for forthcoming programmes, cost-effectiveness, evaluation, organisational structure and publications policy.

British Medical Association

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met the chairman of the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Hayhoe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services last met Dr. Marks, chairman of the British Medical Association Council on 25 July 1985 for an informal lunch. In addition, I have had several meetings with Dr. Marks, the last of which was on 20 January 1986 to discuss a report on NHS expenditure.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many private hospitals have been opened in the United Kingdom since June 1979 to date; how many beds are provided; and how many of these beds are for (a) acute illness, (b) chronic illness, (c) geriatric care and (d) other categories.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks as it is not collected centrally in the form requested. The available relevant information is given in the table. Statistics for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Social Security Bill

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the estimated change in public expenditure arising from each section of the Social Security Bill which involves changes in public expenditure, both in the first year after implementation and in the first full year of any proposed change, respectively.

Mr. Newton: I have nothing to add to my reply to the hon. Member on 21 March, at column 321, about the financial effects of the Bill.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage change (i) each year since 1979 and (ii) in 1986 by comparison with 1979 in National Health Service expenditure in each of the National Health Service's regions and nationally (a) in real terms, (b) in real terms taking account of National Health Service pay and prices and in terms of constant standards after taking account of the annually growing numbers of elderly people.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Leeds Western Health Authority

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received from the chairman of the Yorkshire regional health authority regarding the chairmanship of the Leeds Western health authority;

(2) why Mr. Robin Good is not being re-appointed as Chairman of the Leeds Western health authority;

(3) what representations he has received from medical staff in relation to the chairmanship of the Leeds Western health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1986, c. 449]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) on 26 March at column 523. The views of the regional health authority chairmen were taken into account, along with those from other sources. Correspondence on this subject has been received from the medical staff within Leeds Western health authority.

Research

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the social security research currently being undertaken by or on behalf of his Department; what are his priorities for future social security research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1986, c. 519]: Details of social security research currently being undertaken by or on behalf of the Department are contained in the DHSS "Handbook of Research and Development 1985" which has recently been published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office and of which a copy has been placed in the Library. The Department will undertake such further research as is needed to assess the need for and measure the effectiveness of the main services, including the implementation of the programme for action "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691); to suggest ways in which these might be improved; and to provide information on the likely consequences of changes in the extent or nature of services.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out the average level of (a) the state earnings-related pension scheme additional component and (b) the guaranteed minimum pension paid out each year since 1978, both at current and constant prices; and on the basis of the economic assumptions of the five-year rolling Public Expenditure Survey Committee programme, what he estimates will be their levels over the next five years.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 321]: The information requested is set out in the tables. Table A shows, at current prices, the average levels of gross additional component, net additional component (that is, the sums paid to those who receive some additional pension, after taking account of amounts paid as guaranteed minimum pension) and guaranteed minimum pension (similarly, the average sum paid to those who actually receive the guaranteed minimum pension), for each year since 1979 and to the end of the current Public Expenditure Survey Committee period. Table B gives the information at November 1985 prices. Figures up to September 1985 represent awards in payment at the date specified. For future years the estimated amounts given are financial year averages, taking account both of upratings and of part year awards of benefit.

Nurses

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many qualified state enrolled nurses and state registered nurses were trained in the private sector in each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1986, c. 519]: This information is held by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting.

I understand that the only private sector training for state enrolled nurses, now referred to as enrolled nurses (general) is at King Edward VII hospital at Midhurst and that the numbers trained have been 16 in 1983-84, 18 in 1984-85 and seven in 1985-86. Similarly the only private sector training for state registered nurses, now referred to as registered general nurses, is at the Royal Masonic hospital and this is run jointly with the National Health Service Training School at Queen Mary's, Roehampton. The number of RGNs trained at this joint training school has been 43 in 1983-84; 57 in 1984-85 and 44 in 1985-86.

In both cases the figures for 1985-86 are subject to further examination results yet to be announced. Figures for earlier years are not available.

District Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply of 24 March, Official Report, column 384, about district health authority chairmanships, the various sources included any Conservative party officials and organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 578]: These are not political appointments. Members of Parliament of all parties were invited to make recommendations and nominations. There were no consultations with individual political parties or organisations.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the number of staff serving in social security offices each year since 1979; what has been the average work load each year in number of cases dealt with by each of them; how many Staff each year undertook home visits; how many home visits they made; and how many welfare visits each member of the visiting staff made on average each year.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 20 February 1986 c. 320.]: As certain figures given in my earlier reply were inconsistent, the basis of the table has been re-examined and a revised version is as follows. As will be seen, the trends are broadly the same as those indicated in the previous reply.

No records are kept on the number of staff undertaking home visits, and no separate records are kept on welfare visits, although all home visits have a welfare aspect.

Social Security Bill (Actuary's Report)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, in the Government Actuary's report to the Social Security Bill 1986 (Cmnd. 9711), in table 5 (p. 14), what would be the estimated joint rates of contributions for each of the years stated if the assumptions included (a) forecast growth of the economy of 3 per cent. per year, (b) growth in real earnings of 3 per cent. per year, or (c) both these assumptions, whilst other assumptions in each case remained the same.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 217]: The table shows estimated joint rates of contribution to the national insurance fund. The assumptions underlying these rates are the same as those for Table 5 in the Government Actuary's report (Cmnd. 9711) except that real earnings growth is assumed to be 3 per cent. per annum — that is variant (b) requested by the hon. Member. In practice, variants (a) and (c) do not arise because the report makes no assumption about the growth of the economy.

THE ARTS

Budget Effects

Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Arts what effect he expects the tax proposals in the current Budget to have upon the funding of the arts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The tax concessions designed to encourage greater corporate and private support for charities will provide significant and far-reaching opportunities for the arts. I have been encouraging arts bodies to develop plural sources of funding in addition to the state support which the Government are committed to maintain. These proposals should be of great benefit. I shall be encouraging arts bodies to take the fullest possible advantage of these.

Parliamentary Written Answers

Mr. Greenway asked the Minister for the Arts how many questions for priority written answer he has received in connection with the funding of the arts, following the abolition of the Greater London council, during this parliamentary Session; and what is the estimated cost to his Department of providing the answers.

Mr. Luce: There were 46 questions, and the cost of reply is estimated at £525.

Merseyside County Council

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister for the Arts what is his latest assessment of the implications for the level of grant to arts organisations of the abolition of Merseyside county council.

Mr. Luce: The whole burden of supporting museums and galleries on Merseyside, and a major share of the cost of supporting the performing arts, is being assumed out of central Government funding. The five district councils are being relieved of substantial precepts, and I hope that we shall soon have a positive commitment from them all.

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will list the objects and property accepted in satisfaction of a capital transfer tax during the whole of the financial year ended 31 March; if, in listing them, he will specify (a) the amount of tax satisfied in each case, (b) whether any offer of objects carried conditions as to destination, (c) the dates in each case of the recommendations received by him from the Museums and Galleries Commission for the acceptance of objects, (d) the total for the financial year of the tax thus satisfied and (e) the means by which that total has been covered in the public accounts; and whether a press notice will be issued from the Office of Arts and Libraries comprising the information given in his reply.

Mr. Luce: The following items have been accepted in satisfaction of capital transfer tax during the financial year ended 31 March 1986.

Work of art/land	Condition as to allocation	Date recommended by Museums and Galleries Commission
Photographs associated with the late Marquess Curzon of Kedleston	India Office and Records (now part of the British Library)	30 March 1984

The amount of tax satisfied in individual cases is confidential. The total tax satisfied during the year is £2,366,707. It has been covered in public accounts by the allocation of £2 million to the joint Votes of the Department of the Environment and the Office of Arts and Libraries. In addition, as I explained in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle) on 25 March, a call was made on the public expenditure reserve in accordance with arrangements announced by the then Minister for the Arts on 26 July 1985. Provision was made for this through a spring Supplementary Estimate, which was given Royal Assent on 18 March 1986.

A press notice will be issued giving the information in this reply.

Victoria and Albert Museum

Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Arts what is the latest assessment of the damage suffered by the Victoria and Albert museum due to the flooding of the basement; and if the museum will be compensated from public funds for the value of the damage incurred.

Mr. Luce: I am not yet in a position to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) on 25 March 1986, at columns 425-26. The House will be informed when the investigation has been completed and the value of the damage and the liability for compensation have been established.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Snape asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many representations he has received in the current financial year about income tax on the benefit from workplace nurseries;

(2) if he will estimate the cost of removing income tax liability from the benefit of workplace nurseries.

Mr. Moore: Since April 1985 Treasury Ministers have received 109 letters on this subject. I regret that a firm estimate of the cost of exempting this benefit from tax cannot be made because this will depend on a number of factors including the number of places provided, the size of the employer's subsidy, and the marginal tax rates of those employees receiving the benefit. But it could be of the order of £1 million.

Disposable Incomes

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the gross weekly income required on 1 November 1985 to maintain the real disposable income of (y) a single person and (z) a married man with two children under 11 years of age, taking account of payments of tax, national insurance, and 5 per cent. of earnings as superannuation contributions, who on 1 November 1969 earned (a) £10, (b) £12, (c) £14, (d) £16, (e) £18, (f) £20, (g) £25, (h) £30, (i) £35, (j) £40, (k) £45, (l) £50, (m) £60, (n) £70, (o) £80, (p) £90, (q) £100, (r) £125, (s) £150, (t) £175 and (u) £200.

Income Tax

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the administrative saving to his Department brought about by the exemption from income tax of the increases to retirement pensions which come into effect in July.

Mr. Moore: £1·75 million, which compares with a revenue cost of £15 million. Approximately three-quarters of the administrative saving relates to recording and the balance to related correspondence.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to the answer given on 25 February, Official Report, columns 502-8, about gains and losses from tax changes, he will show in each of the income ranges the number of units paying tax in 1986-87 and the aggregate and individual charges in 1986-87 compared with the indexed 1978-79 tax structure.

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons have been taken out of tax following each budget since 1960; and how many persons had become liable for tax each year by the time of the following budget.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Members have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the aggregate total amount of taxable income of taxpayers earning over £30,000 per annum represented by their earnings in excess of this figure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maples asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers are estimated to have incomes in excess of £30,000 per annum; and what is estimated to be their aggregated total income in excess of £30,000 per annum each.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 19 February 1986, c. 173]: It is estimated that about 190,000 taxpayers have taxable incomes in excess of £30,000. The total of income in excess of this level is some £3·5 billion.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the amount of income tax collected, the amount of taxable income, and the number of taxpayers in each Scottish region, English and Welsh county, and in Greater London.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 602]: For counties, the available information on income tax is amounts due rather than receipts. Estimates for 1982-83 (the latest available) of the amount of income tax due, the amount of taxable income and the number of taxpaying units (counting married couples as one unit) in each Scottish region, English and Welsh county, and in Greater London are given in the four tables which follow.

Unemployment (Costs)

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost to the Exchequer of an unemployed married man with two children.

Mr. MacGregor: An unemployed married man with two children aged four and six would be entitled to about £3,000 a year in benefits in respect of his unemployment. It is not possible to estimate the revenue forgone.

Note: This calculation, at November 1985 benefit rates, assumes that the claimant is entitled to and claims the full rate of unemployment benefit with, in addition, supplementary benefit. Housing benefit, free school meals, and free welfare foods, to which he would also be entitled, have been excluded from this calculation as these benefits are also available to low-income families in work. Child benefit has also been excluded as it is paid to all families with children, regardless of means.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on the purchase or use in any of the Departments of Government for which he is responsible of computers or software which are subject to extra-territorial control as to its use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The policy of the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency in relation to US export licence requirements has always been that it would be inappropriate to accept a contractual commitment limiting the freedom of action of the British Government in relation to information technology products to which they hold title.

System software used in connection with computers is normally the subject of a licence which limits use to a particular central processor and which is not transferable except by specific approval of the licensor. This is true of almost all system software licences whether or not they emanate from US suppliers.

Attempts are often made by US suppliers to pass on to Government Departments the export provisions which the US Administration exact on commercial concerns, but the CCTA has not accepted any contracts in relation to its own requirements or those of any Government Department for which it acts which seeks to impose these extraterritorial requirements. This remains true even where the suppliers concerned are operating in very specialised areas of the computer market, notably on security-linked products and where often no alternative source of supply exists.

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling university.

Mr. Brooke: The Treasury has not employed the services of Dr. K. Featherstone.

Cigarettes (Taxation)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the organisations and individuals from whom he received representations prior to the Budget statement urging increases in the tax on cigarettes on the grounds of the health of smokers.

Mr. Brooke: A substantial number of representations were received urging increases in the tax on cigarettes on the grounds of the health of smokers. These included representations from the following organisations:

British Medical Association;
Royal College of Physicians;
Action on Smoking and Health;
Royal College of Pathologists;
Cancer Research Campaign;
Faculty of Community Medicine of RCP;
National Society of Non-Smokers;
Ulster Cancer Foundation;
Royal College of General Practitioners;
Imperial Cancer Research Fund;
Coronary Prevention Group;
Conference of Medical Royal Colleges;
Tenovus Cancer Information Centre;
Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists; Health Promotion Unit of Trafford Health Authority; and East Scotland Faculty of Royal College of General Practitioners.

There were also a number of such representations from individuals.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Hill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on duty on petrol of abolishing the vehicle excise duty and raising the same amount of revenue from the petrol duty; and if he will express this sum in terms of pence per gallon.

Mr. Brooke: An increase of 38p per gallon (including VAT) would be required to replace the vehicle excise duty from petrol-driven vehicles, at 1986-87 duty rates.

State Pensioners

Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated effect of the reduction of one penny in the standard rate of income tax on the disposable income of state pensioners; and how many pensioners he estimates will be affected.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Drink Tobacco and Petrol (Prices)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out in tabular form for the financial year 1979-80, for 1985-86 and for the financial year 1986-87 to date, assuming the tax changes proposed in the Budget statement are introduced in full, the proportion of the average price of (a) a pint of beer, (b) a bottle of whisky, (c) a packet of tipped cigarettes, (d) a packet of untipped cigarettes and (e) a gallon of petrol, which is accounted for by taxation.

Mr. Brooke: The information is as follows:

Percentage tax as a proportion of typical post-Budget price

	1979-80	1985-86	1986-87
Beer (pint)	32	39	36
Whisky (75 cl)	78	74	72
King size tipped cigarettes (packet 20)	70	75	75
Standard plain cigarettes (packet 20)	64	71	72
Petrol (gallon 4 star)	48	53	60

Oil Prices

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect he expects the recent fall in oil prices to have on the United Kingdom's prospects for output, jobs, inflation and the balance of payments relative to those in other major industrial countries.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend's forecast for economic prospects to mid-1987, for the United Kingdom and the world, was set out in chapter 3 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report, published on Budget day, March 18.

Small Businesses

Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had from small businesses following his Budget statement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend's Budget statement included various measures which are intended to help small businesses and which have been generally welcomed. No specific representations have been subsequently received from small businesses relating to the Budget statement.

Net Wage Levels

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends taking any direct steps to influence net wage levels during 1986-87.

Mr. MacGregor: Net wage levels will be increased in 1986-87 as a result of the Budget measures to reduce the basic rate of income tax and to increase tax thresholds. These measures, together with falling inflation, will allow for real increases in take-home pay and so will encourage and assist the lower pay settlements necessary to check the rise in employers' costs and improve prospects for jobs.

State Assets (Sales)

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total income anticipated from the sale of state assets over the next two years.

Mr. Moore: The main categories of disposals are as follows:

(i) Projected proceeds from privatisation accruing directly to the Exchequer are shown in table 2.11 of Cmnd. 9702-II.

(ii) Nationalised industries' forecast receipts from asset disposals, included in the total internal resources figures shown in tables 5.1 and 5.5 of Cmnd. 9702-II, are £184 million in 1986-87 and £159 million in 1987-88.

(iii) Sales of land and buildings by central Government, local authorities, and new towns are forecast to be £2,313 million in 1986-87 and £2,170 million in 1987-88; these figures are consistent with those for net sales show in table 2.17 of Cmnd. 9702-II.

Budget (Employment Measures)

Mr. Parry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has yet quantified the expected effect of his Budget on the level of unemployment.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government's economic policy aims to establish a vigorous, enterprising economy which will generate sustained growth and increased employment. The Budget proposals include a considerable number of direct measures of help to the unemployed, most notably the expansion of the community programme and the enterprise allowance scheme, a new workers scheme and the restart programme; in addition, to the two-year YTS, starting this month.

Form P11D

Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will amend the regulations governing the requirement to submit form P11D for 1986-87 and subsequent years, so that the salary level at which such a form becomes necessary for each employee is set at a level above £8,500, including all expenses reimbursed.

Mr. Moore: No. Payment in kind is just as much a form of remuneration as payment in cash and it remains our aim to ensure that one is not treated more favourably for tax purposes than the other.

Tax and National Insurance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the cases of a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum, making an annual investment of £40,000 from his earnings under the business expansion scheme as well as claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £306·25, (b) an annual investment of £5,000 into an approved pension and (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £1,000.

(2) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the case of a married man with earnings of £30,000 per annum, and making an annual investment from his earnings of £5,000 under the business expansion scheme as well as claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £306·25, (b) an annual investment of £1,500 into an approved pension and (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £200;

(3) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the following cases (a) a married man with earnings of £30,000 per annum, (b) a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum, (c) a married man on the level of average male earnings assumed for 1986 and (d) a single person earning £100 per week.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if, pursuant to the answer given on 7 February, Official Report, columns 277-78, about tax and National Insurance contributions, he will show for 1986-87 those ranges of earnings within which the burden of income tax plus national insurance is less than in 1978-79.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Members have a reply as soon as possible.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing income tax and national insurance (less child benefit where appropriate) as a proportion of earnings for the household types and at the earnings levels used in the answer given on 29 March 1985 (Official Report, columns 373-74).

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 27 March 1986, at column 608.

Tax Yields

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if, pursuant to the answer given on 27 February, Volume 92, Official Report, column 693, concerning current tax yields at 1978-79 rates, he will publish an updated table on direct revenue effects for 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

United Kingdom Investment (United States)

Mr. Grylls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the current total value of (a) all United Kingdom corporate investments in the United States and (b) all United Kingdom total investments in the United States.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I regret that full information on investment by the United Kingdom in individual countries overseas, in this case the United States, is not available from United Kingdom sources. The latest information relating to the United States is published in "Business Monitor MA4 1981 Supplement" which shows the book value of total net direct investment by United Kingdom companies in their affiliates in the United States as £14·6 billion at end-1981.

Rare and Endangered Birds

Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many successful convictions there have been during 1986 against smugglers of rare and endangered birds.

Mr. Brooke: There have been two prosecutions (both successful) so far this year under the restrictions on the importation or exportation of endangered birds. A further prosecution is pending.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Hunter asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) in percentage terms, what has been the increase or decrease in investment in manufacturing industry and the output of manufacturing industry each year since 1975;

(2) what has been the value, in real terms, of investment in manufacturing industry and the output of manufacturing industry in each year since 1975.

Mr. Butcher: I have been asked to reply.

The information is given in the following table. Investment includes the estimated volume of assets leased from financial industries. The investment data are expressed in constant (1980) prices. Output data are available only in index number form.

Year	Investment by manufacturing industries		Output of manufacturing industries
	Amount (£ million)	Change on preceding year (per cent.)	Index number (1980=100)	Change on preceding year (per cent.)
1975	7,136	..	105·0	..
1976	6,839	−4·2	107·0	+1·9
1977	7,254	+6·1	109·0	+1·9
1978	7,904	+9·0	109·7	+0·6
1979	8,230	+4·1	109·5	−0·2
1980	7,314	−11·1	100·0	−8·7
1981	5,698	−22·1	94·0	−6·0
1982	5,598	−1·8	94·2	+0·2
1983	5,557	−0·7	96·9	+2·9
1984	6,372	+14·7	100·7	+3·9
1985	6,776	+6·3	103·8	+3·1

Mortgage Interest Relief

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 4 February 1985, Official Report, column 397, he will (a) publish and update the table on restructuring mortgage interest relief to different rates of taxation for 1985-86, (b) report how many mortgagors receive relief at rates in excess of the basic rates of income tax and (c) report how many persons currently paying tax only at standard rate would pay tax at a higher rate if mortgage tax relief were removed from higher rates of tax; and what would be the additional income to the Exchequer.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 85]: I regret the delay in providing this information. Estimates of the direct revenue yields in a full year from restricting mortgage interest relief, at 1985-86 levels of mortgage lending, are as follows. The figures do not take account of possible changes in taxpayers' behaviour.

Rate of mortgage interest relief per cent.	Direct revenue yield £ million
30	290

About 700,000 mortgagors receive relief at rates in excess of the basic rate of income tax. Of these, about 200,000 are currently liable at the basic rate, but would be liable at higher rates if mortgage interest relief was not available at higher rates of tax.

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will list, giving the relevant references in the Official Report, those occasions on which the amounts of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied by the acceptance of objects or land in respect of individual cases have been specified in written answers dealing with such acceptances subsequent to those listed comprehensively in annex 2 to the memorandum by Her Majesty's Treasury dated 31 August 1977, published in the third report from the Expenditure Committee, House of Commons Paper 280 of Session 1977-79, pages 6-12, until those detailed in the written answers to the hon. Member for Warley, East on 1 May 1980, Official Report, column 597, listed acceptances during the last financial year prior to the responsibility for such answers being transferred from her Majesty's Treasury to the Office of Arts and Libraries and the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 387]: In the relevant period, announcements of acceptances of items in lieu specifying the estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied were made on the following dates:

22 June 1978, columns 304-5
28 March 1979, column 235
26 October 1979, column 358
14 January 1980, columns 652-53
2 April 1980, columns 248

Mr. Faulds asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will specify, giving the relevant references in the Official Report, the occasions when it has been stated to the House on behalf of Her Majesty's Treasury that the amounts of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied by the acceptance of objects or land is confidential in respect of individual cases during the period between the initiation of the system to the transfer of responsibility in 1980.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 387]: I am aware of two occasions in the relevant period on which the question of tax confidentiality was raised in this general context. These are 9 May 1978, at columns 490-91, and 12 June 1978, at columns 342-43.

DEFENCE

Departmental Research

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Defence what controls are applied by the Government of the United States on the use of his Department's research work which receives strategic defence initiative money and is placed on a sensitive list of technologies.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 27 March 1986 at column 597.

Pakistan (Frigate Sales)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on his discussions with the Government of Pakistan about the sale of frigates.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The negotiations with the Government of Pakistan over the sale of three modified Type 21 frigates to the Pakistan Navy are continuing. I cannot give further details at this stage.

NATO

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Defence what subjects he intends to raise at the NATO ministerial meeting in May.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 11 March at column 798. The agenda is confidential.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has purchased, or will purchase, computers or software from companies which seek to impose extra territorial constraints on their products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence has on occasions purchased computers or software from companies which sought to impose extra — territorial constraints on their products. However, the Ministry's policy has been, and continues to be, that it is inappropriate for a Government Department to accept such limitations on its freedom of action and that wherever practicable no such constraints should be accepted.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to visit the Falklands.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so, but hopes to do so in due course.

Service Men (Germany)

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to ensure cost efficiency in the education budget for the education of the children of service personnel serving in Germany.

Mr. Lee: We will continue to ensure cost efficiency in the education of service children in Germany through regular audit and specific rationalisation studies which seek to match provision to demand and take account of the resources available. We have implemented budgetary control of staff numbers and contracting out of support services to assist this effort.

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many children of service men in Germany were using a boarding school allowance; and what was the total cost of those allowances in 1978, 1981 and 1985, respectively, at 1985 prices;

(2) how much was the average boarding school allowance for the children of those serving in Germany in 1978, 1981 and 1985, respectively, at 1985 prices.

Mr. Lee: Boarding school allowance records are not maintained centrally in the form requested and cannot be obtained without disproportionate effort. Current payments cover some 21,500 children in all and the average annual payment in 1984-85 was some £3,600 per child, of which it is estimated that about 30 per cent. would have been received by the Inland Revenue in tax.

Education Budget (Germany)

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the education budget for the teaching of the children of service men in Germany in 1978, 1981 and 1985, respectively, at 1985 prices.

Mr. Lee: The total cost of staff employed on teaching children of service men in Germany in 1978, 1981 and 1985, at 1985 prices is as follows:

Year	£ million
1985	15·8

It is not possible to provide details of other education related costs without disproportionate staff time and effort.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value in deutschmarks of a scale 4 teacher's salary teaching the children of service men in Germany in 1978, 1981 and 1985 respectively, at 1985 prices.

Mr. Lee: The total value in deutschmarks of a scale 4 teacher's maximum annual salary teaching the children of service men in Germany in 1978, 1981 and 1985 at 1985 prices is as follows:

	Deutschmark
1978	34,890
1981	51,937

East London River Crossing

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department has taken to seek to ensure the continued operation of the Royal Arsenal Sports and Recreational Association in the event of the east London river crossing being built; what alternative locations have been considered; and when he expects to put forward practical proposals.

Mr. Lee: Although the terms of the Royal Arsenal Sports and Recreational Association's licence do not provide for reprovision of facilities in the event that land used by the association is required for the construction of the east London river crossing, my Department has agreed to consider without commitment what alternative locations or other arrangements might be possible. Studies, which are being undertaken by the Property Services Agency on our behalf, are likely to take some months. The outcome will be discussed with the association.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the letter on strategic defence initiative research participation by United Kingdom universities of 27 February from Mr. G. Gallagher-Daggitt of his Department to vice chancellors.

Mr. Lee: I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Computers

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he now intends to pursue a policy of IBM compatibility for all his Department's mainframe computers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No. Our policy is to foster compatibility through the development of standards which are independent of any existing machine and of any particular manufacturer's products.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the use of Orford Ness as a possible site for disposal of radioactive components from decommissioned nuclear powered submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No shortlist of possible sites for such a purpose has yet been drawn up. The position remains as described in my answer to the hon. Member on 28 February at column 710.

Greenham Common

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions in 1985, giving dates in each case, when vehicles based at Greenham Common with the 501st Security Police Group, hit British civilians, with details of the injuries sustained, whether anyone was taken to hospital and whether any United Kingdom and United States servicemen subsequently faced disciplinary proceedings arising from the incident.

Mr. Stanley: There was one such incident in 1985. On 27 August a United States Air Force Vehicle was involved in a collision with a British woman near RAF Greenham Common. The vehicle was part of a column of vehicles against which she was protesting at the time, and was driven by a British member of the RAF element of the 501st Security Police Group. The woman was taken to hospital with a fractured leg. The incident was investigated by the USAF motor transport authorities at the base, and by the Thames valley police. I understand that the Thames valley police subsequently informed the driver that no charges would be brought against him. There have been no service disciplinary proceedings arising from this incident.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of (a) part-time and (b) full-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment who are actively involved in local politics.

Mr. Stanley: In accordance with Regulations for the Ulster Defence Regiment and Queen's Regulations for the Army, members of the permanent cadre of the UDR and of the part-time element are debarred from active involvement in politics. However, officers and soldiers of the part-time element may stand as candidates for district councils in Northern Ireland provided they have obtained the permission of the Ministry of Defence. Our records show that there are currently two members of the part-time element of the UDR who are members of district councils.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of (a) officers and (b) soldiers of the part-time element of the Ulster Defence Regiment who stood in district council elections since 1980;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of (a) officers and (b) soldiers of the part-time element of the Ulster Defence Regiment who applied for permission from his Department to stand in district council elections since 1980, giving the number refused and the number granted permission.

Mr. Stanley: Since 1980 one officer and four soldiers of the part-time element of the Ulster Defence Regiment have applied for permission to stand in district council elections. Permission was granted in all cases.

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has that members of the Ulster Defence Regiment were involved in manning barricades during the Unionist day of action on 3 March 1985.

Mr. Stanley: Reports have been received alleging that a small number of off-duty personnel were present at barricades during the Unionist day of protest against the Anglo-Irish agreement on 3 March. These are being investigated by the RUC with the assistance of the military authorities. To date, no charges have been brought by the RUC, but in some cases, where it has been decided that no criminal offence has been committed, action has been taken under Service disciplinary procedures.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has to the numbers of (a) part-time members and (b) full-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment who are members of (i) the Orange Order and (ii) the Black Perceptory.

Mr. Stanley: Members of the UDR are not debarred from membership of either the Orange Order or the Royal Black Institution (the Black Perceptory) and there is therefore no reason to maintain records of the number of UDR soldiers who belong to these organisations.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment have been found to be members of paramilitary groups, by paramilitary grouping, for each year since 1980, showing whether they were; (a) full-time and (b) part-time; and what action was taken.

Mr. Stanley: According to available records, since 1980 no serving member of the Ulster Defence Regiment has been convicted of membership of any organisation proscribed under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report the number of weapons and equipment, by type, that have been stolen from the Ulster Defence Regiment in each year since its inception.

Mr. Stanley: The information requested is not readily available for the years before 1980. For each of the years since then, the following weapons have been stolen from members of the Ulster Defence Regiment:

Year	Number
1981	2
1982	2
1983	1
1984	2

* To date.

Three of these weapons have subsequently been recovered. Four were privately owned protection weapons. The remainder were Service-issued personal protection weapons.

Records for clothing stolen are not available, but there are no records of other military equipment being stolen from members of the UDR in this period.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 9 April 1986

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Attorney-General if the Lord Chancellor proposes to accept tenders for the planned computerisation of his Department from companies which seek to impose extraterritorial movement or resale conditions on their machines, software or know-how; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: No.

Miss Evelyn Glenholmes

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Attorney-General how many officials in the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions were involved in the preparation and checking of the nine warrants for the extradition of Miss Evelyn Glenholmes which were ruled to be invalid at the recent Dublin court hearing.

The Attorney-General: The information sought by the hon. Member is one of the facts which the disciplinary inquiry set up by the Director of Public Prosecutions will seek to establish.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Homework

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has completed his consultations on homework, which were proposed in the White Paper "Better Schools"; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: "Better Schools" defined homework as an important element of independent study, and one that is not necessarily carried out at home. It set out the Government's view that, appropriately set and marked, homework valuably reinforces work in the classroom; and that, as a consequence, every LEA and school should establish a policy for homework, to form part of its policy for the curriculum. Homework policies should relate to such matters as the amount, range and character of what should be expected in the primary and secondary phases at various ages and ability levels, the conditions which make for the effective use of homework, and the problems faced by pupils whose home environment may make study at home difficult. It was because the available evidence suggested that few LEAs and schools had formulated and implemented such policies that the DES issued a consultative paper on this subject in April last year.

I am grateful for the many thoughtful replies received from all sections of the education service and from other bodies with an interest in the subject. These revealed wide agreement about the importance of homework; about the need to ensure that it is a worthwhile activity, related to work in the classroom and to individual pupils' needs; about the value of enlisting parental support for homework policies; and about the importance of policies which take account of disparities in the extent and nature of resources available to pupils outside the classroom. There was broad agreement with the objectives for homework suggested in the Department's consultative paper. In a few areas—notably on the place of homework in the primary phase—no common view emerged.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate is currently surveying good practice in schools in relation to homework. I hope that the results of this survey will be available in the Summer of 1986. In the light of Her Majesty's Inspectorate's findings, the Government will consider what further action is necessary in respect of this important aspect of the work of schools.

Universities and Polytechnics (West Midlands)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what central Government funds have been distributed by the University Grants Committee to the University of Aston, the University of Birmingham and the University of Warwick in each of the last seven academic years for (a) undergraduate and (b) postgraduate courses; and what assessments are currently being made by the University Grants Committee to decide the amount of financing for which these three universities will qualify during the next two academic years.

Mr. Walden: Recurrent grants paid on the advice of the University Grants Committee to the universities concerned are listed below. UGC grant is not related to individual courses and it is therefore not possible to apportion the total between undergraduate and post-graduate courses. No decisions have yet been taken by the UGC in respect of the allocation of recurrent grant for the academic years 1986-87 and 1987-88.

£ million

Academic years	Aston	Birmingham	Warwick
1979-80	12·0	25·2	10·7
1980-81	14·8	30·5	13·3
1981-82	13·4	31·1	13·4
1982-83	15·5	36·3	16·2
1983-84	14·6	36·3	17·0
1984-85	15·0	37·9	17·5
1985-86*	15·9	39·6	19·8

* Estimate.

The above figures exclude redundancy payments met from recurrent grant. The figures are not comparable from year to year because of changes in funding arrangements, most notably adjustments made to reflect changes in the level of the home undergraduate tuition fee and the progressive withdrawal from 1980-81 of the subsidy for overseas students.

School Buildings

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what investigations have been conducted by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Schools during the last seven years into the state and design of school buildings; and what recommendations were issued as to improvements arising from such recommendations.

Sir Keith Joseph: Her Majesty's inspectors have not published separate reports on the state of school buildings.

However, this aspect of education is covered in a large number of reports by Her Majesty's inspectors on individual institutions and, in more detail, in their reports on the effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England. Since January 1983 all Her Majesty's inspectors reports have been published. Her Majesty's inspectors does not inspect or report on the design of schools, but its advice on the educational aspects of school building development is available to the Department's architects working in this field.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has (a) on the number of companies which have provided finance for undergraduate and postgraduate courses at universities and polytechnics in the west midlands in each of the last seven years, (b) on which specific courses were supported and (c) on what total finance has been provided in each year during the same period.

Mr. Walden: This information is not available centrally.

Special Education Needs

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many appeals he has received under section 8(6) of the Education Act 1981 in the 12 months ending 31 March 1986; and if he will (a) list the local education authorities concerned and give the number of appeals against each authority and (b) state in how many instances he has (i) confirmed the special educational provision specified in the statement, (ii) amended the statement and (iii) directed the local education authority to cease to maintain a statement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The information is as follows:

Appeals under section 8(6) of the Education Act 1981 received during the period 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986

My right hon. Friend has issued no directions to cease to maintain a statement under section 8(7)(c) of the Act.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many appeals he has received under section 5(6) of the Education Act 1981 in the 12 months ending 31 March 1986; and if he will (a) list the local education authorities concerned and give the number of appeals against each authority, (b) state in how many instances he has upheld the decision of the local education authority and (c) state in how many instances he has directed the local education authority to reconsider its decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The information is as follows:

Appeals under section 5(6) of the Education Act 1981 during the period 1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986

In four instances, Nottinghamshire (2), Bury (1), Hereford and Worcester (1) the LEA have agreed to reconsider their decision following informal discussions with the Department.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many special schools designated for physically handicapped children in the maintained, non-maintained and independent sectors, respectively, have closed since 1 April 1983.

Mr. Dunn: Seven maintained and three non-maintained special schools approved for physically handicapped (or physically handicapped and delicate) pupils have closed since 1 April 1983. Two independent schools which catered for physically handicapped children have also closed since that date.

Educational Projects (Grants)

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much expenditure on new projects related to educational needs in a multi-ethnic society will be supported through education support grants in 1986-87.

Mr. Chris Patten: Expenditure of £886,000 in 1986-87 has been approved for education support grant for new pilot projects to meet the educational needs of those from ethnic minorities, to promote harmony between different racial groups, or in other ways to prepare pupils and students for life in a multi-ethnic society. In addition eight such projects involving expenditure of £194,000 will be supported under the traditional urban programme.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EC (GATT Talks)

46. Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has held in the European Community Foreign Affairs Council concerning the general agreement on tariffs and trade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The forthcoming round of multilateral trade negotiations in the general agreement on tariffs and trade has been touched on in several recent meetings of the Foreign Affairs Council. This month's meeting of the FAC on 21 and 22 April is expected to consider a Commission working paper on the broad strategy to be adopted in preparing the launch of the new round.

PRIME MINISTER

Gaza Strip (Government Policy)

Mr. Latham asked the Prime Minister whether the public speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton), to the Anglo-Jewish Association on 27 February in London in so far as it related to sewage problems in the Gaza Strip, represents the policy of Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: Yes. We have consistently called on the Israeli authorities to implement their stated intention to improve conditions in the occupied territories, and are ourselves contributing £100,000 through the Save the Children Fund towards a sewage project in the Gaza Strip.

10 Downing Street

Mr. Meacher asked the Prime Minister what has been the cost of running No. 10 Downing street each year since 1979, both in current and constant prices; what has been the percentage increase annually in real terms; and what has been the annual cost since 1979 in foreign visits, entertainment, and allowances for accommodation.

The Prime Minister [pursuant to her reply, 8 April 1986, c. 5]: It is not possible without disproportionate expense to isolate all the costs of running No. 10 Downing street from Chequers. The costs of the Prime Minister's Office in the last six years are as follows:

Total costs

Year	Current prices	Constant prices (1984-85)	Year-on-year percentage variation
1979-80	1,409,101	2,144,750
1980-81	1,744,824	2,236,954	4·3
1981-82	2,415,301	2,815,036	25·8

*1985-86	4,146,721	3,949,258	8·3

* (Provisional).

The annual cost since 1979 of foreign visits, entertainment and accommodation allowances in respect of No. 10 Downing street is as follows:

Foreign visits

*1985-86	525,598	500,570	−1·2

* (Provisional).

See Note 3(ii) below.

Notes:

1. Salaries and wages, notional pension liability and administration costs and the grant-in-aid to the Chequers Trust are included. The salary of the Prime Minister and the cost of messengerial and cleaning services are excluded.

2. Billing delays prevent some costs from being shown in the financial year in which the goods and services were provided. The above figures, therefore, do not necessarily reflect when the expenditure was actually incurred.

3. The basis for the total costs changed in (i) 1981-82 when charging by Ministry of Defence for its aircraft was introduced; (ii) 1983-84, when the Property Services Agency introduced charging for buildings and services; and (iii) 1984-85, when Ministry of Defence introduced charging for the service staff at Chequers.

4. Following the abolition of the CPRS, the policy unit in the Prime Minister's Office was strengthened by four staff. In the last full year of its existence (1982-83) CPRS employed 35 people and cost £1,109,000 (£1,208,061 at 1984-85 prices). Thus, while the cost of the Prime Minister's Office increased as a result of the abolition of the CPRS, substantial net overall savings were made.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Water Cannon (Dye)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has arranged for any tests to be carried out on the use of dye in water cannon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 27 March, at column 543.

Police Officers (Fingerprinting)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on gratuities for police officers who are required to search and fingerprint badly decomposed, mutilated and extensively burnt bodies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Since 1972 a gratuity has been payable to police officers who are required to search or fingerprint dead bodies in an advanced state of decomposition. The present rates are £15.50 where a body is searched and fingerprinted by the same officer on the same occasion and £10.35 where the tasks of searching and fingerprinting have to be undertaken by different officers, or on separate occasions. My right hon. Friend recently approved a Police Negotiating Board agreement extending the payment of the gratuity to cases in which the body was mutilated, decomposed or extensively burnt.

Interception of Communications Act 1985

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been issued to the police on the investigation of offences under the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

Mr. Hurd: I have placed in the Library a copy of guidance which I issued to the police on 8 April. This draws the attention of chief officers to the new offence, established by section 1 of the Act, of improperly intercepting communications in the postal and public telecommunications systems and emphasises the importance of this new offence. It also reminds chief officers that they may seek the specialised technical assistance of British Telecom and the Post Office in investigating reported offences. Similar guidance is being issued to Scottish forces and to the RUC by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Family Law

Dame Judith Hart asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland when he expects the Court of Session to have defined new or amended procedural rules to meet the provisions of the Family Law (Scotland) Act 1985.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: It is the duty of the rules councils for the Court of Session and the sheriff court to submit to the Court of Session proposals for the procedural rules needed to take account of the Family Law (Scotland) Act 1985. It is understood that the Court of Session rules council has now finalised its proposals and the Sheriff Court rules council expects to do so shortly. The Court of Session and the rules councils are aware of the need to avoid delay in the preparation and making of the necessary Acts of Sederunt so that the main provisions of the 1985 Act can be brought into operation in the near future. I should add that my noble and learned Friend, the Lord Advocate, intends to bring into operation on the same day as that fixed for the main provisions of the 1985 Act the provisions of part IV of the Matrimonial and Family Proceedings Act 1984, dealing with financial provision in Scotland after overseas divorce.

TRANSPORT

Roads

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Transport which roads in the West Midlands county were found in the national road maintenance condition survey compiled by his department in co-operation with local authorities to have defects in respect of cracking, rutting and potholes; what was the level of participation by local authorities in the county in preparing this report; and what action he proposes to take as a result of the findings.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: County data for the national road maintenance condition survey are confidential. Results for the West Midlands region as a whole (five counties), and for metropolitan areas as a whole, will be published in a few weeks. Inspections for the West Midland county area in 1985 were carried out by the county council at 177 randomly selected sites on all-purpose trunk roads, principal roads, other classified roads, and unclassified roads.

At a national level, we have increased the public expenditure provision on both local and national road maintenance for 1986/87.

M25 (Traffic Flows)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on five-day and seven-day average traffic flows on a 16 and a 24-hour per day basis on each section of the M25; and when such counts have been undertaken.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is set out in the table. It relates to traffic flow in both directions. The figures for junctions 1-15 are the average flows for February 1986, and those for junctions 15-31 are the average flows for December 1985. In both cases the totals shown are the latest available. Figures marked with an asterisk are estimates.

The table has been compiled from information provided by continuous counting equipment installed in the road. The equipment is operational on 15 of the 30 sections of the motorway. A further eight installations will come into operation by the end of the year. In addition, the manual count undertaken in June 1985 on all open sections of the motorway is to be repeated this June. The Department also has access to the detailed information on traffic using the Dartford Tunnel.

National Bus Company

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received the National Bus Company's disposal programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: At the request of the National Bus Company, I have today given them directions under section 48(5) of the Transport Act 1985 as to the manner in which the company is to carry out its main objective of promoting fair and sustained competition in the preparation of its disposal programme. A copy of the directions has been laid before each House.

These directions require NBC to provide for each of its local bus operating subsidiaries to be sold individually or as part of a group of companies which contains no other bus operating subsidiary. As many of these sales as possible, particularly of subsidiaries for which NBC staff have indicated that they wish to mount an early buy-out, should be completed by 26 October 1986, the date of deregulation of the bus industry.

Since the new chairman of NBC, Mr. Rodney Lund, took up his position on 7 April, I have decided to extend from 6 April to 16 May the date by which the Company must submit to me its disposal programme. This will enable him to consider the proposals before they are finalised.

However, this revised timetable will not delay the privatisation programme. I am glad that many local managements and employees are already preparing bids for their subsidiaries and NBC has recently advertised all its subsidiaries in the press inviting expressions of interest from other parties.

Cross-Channel Ferries (Belgian Ports)

Mr. Peter Rees asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made over BFS access to Belgian ports; and what are his conclusions about his possible use of section 14 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1974.

Mr. Ridley: I met the Belgian Minister of Communications together with representatives of the other Belgian parties concerned in Brussels immediately before Easter to seek to resolve this question. This proved to be a constructive meeting at which a number of possibilities for an early BFS service to Belgium were discussed. BFS is free to start a service to the inner port of Zeebrugge immediately, and can start a service to the outer port as soon as new facilities have been completed. It was agreed that technical discussions between the commercial parties concerned were urgently required; and the Belgian Minister undertook to see how quickly BFS's requirements can be met. Both the Belgian Minister and I are confident that an acceptable solution can be found.

In these circumstances, I have concluded that it would not be appropriate to propose action under Section 14 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1974.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently on the YTS scheme in Cheltenham and Gloucestershire, respectively; and what will be the effect of the introduction of the recently launched two-year scheme in the same areas.

Mr. Trippier: At the end of February, the latest date for which statistics are available, there were 506 young people in training on YTS in the Cheltenham local authority district and 2,590 in training on the scheme in the county of Gloucestershire.

It is planned to provide 850 places in Cheltenham and 4,247 places in Gloucestershire for the new scheme. This will ensure opportunities for all eligible young people in the area.

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General how many people have completed the YTS in Cheltenham and Gloucestershire, respectively, since the scheme's inception; how many completers have found full or part-time employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Between the introduction of YTS in April 1983 and the end of February 1986, 3,856 young people in Gloucestershire completed schemes, including 782 in the Cheltenham local authority district. During the same period, a further 3,741 young people in Gloucestershire (and 800 in Cheltenham) left their schemes four or more weeks before the date on which they were due to complete.

The Manpower Services Commission conducts a regular follow-up survey of young people some three months after they leave YTS. The latest results cover young people who left YTS between April and September 1985. These show that of those completing schemes in Gloucestershire, 70 per cent. were in work. The comparable figure for the Cheltenham local authority district is 74 per cent.

Job Start Scheme

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General whether he will take steps to attract higher numbers of unemployed applicants to the job start scheme.

Mr. Lang: Yes. I have asked the Manpower Services Commission to look at ways in which this might be done.

MSC (West Midlands)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what proportion of the additional 2,000 staff who are to be recruited to the employment division of the Manpower Services Commission will be stationed in the west midlands region.

Mr. Lang: Regional employment managers of the Manpower Services Commission are still in the process of determining the allocation of additional staff between jobcentres, community programme offices, area offices and regional offices. There are, however, expected to be around 140 extra staff based in the west midlands.

Jobcentres

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General what plans he has to allow local jobcentres funds for training within their area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Manpower Services Commission's training budget is administered by the commission's training division, through its head office and network of local offices. In addition, the commission's employment division will be running restart courses for long-term unemployed people, which will be administered on a local basis.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General what is his policy on staff working in local jobcentres visiting firms and so on in their areas to keep staff aware of local employment; and how often such visits take place.

Mr. Lang: Jobcentre staff are required to visit firms in their area to keep aware of local market conditions. Visits are sometimes designed specifically for staff to enhance their industrial and occupational knowledge. More usually, however, visits are designed to combine the learning and information seeking processes with the opportunity to canvass current or future vacancies and to explain jobcentre services.

Jobcentre managers usually visit new firms as a priority and they respond to ad hoc requests to discuss individual queries or problems. The frequency of planned visits varies regionally as discretion is given to regional employment managers.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General what record is kept by jobcentres of all local industries in their areas.

Mr. Lang: Most jobcentres keep records of firms in their areas in the form of "business activity cards". These show information relating to the number and type of vacancies notified and placement figures. Additional information collected includes the type of business and product, the number of employees, the main occupations employed and where appropriate, the firms' position in relation to the employment of disabled people.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy on the purchase for the use of his Department or the recommendation for use in departmental establishments of computers or software which are subject to extra-territorial constraints as to their use, movement or resale or export; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency acts as contractual agent for almost all computer equipment purchased by the DHSS. The exceptions are generally minor hardware items worth less than £5,000, and software items worth less than £500.

Decisions about the purchase of these minor items are made on the basis of all the relevant circumtances at the time. This Department does not recognise the extra-territorial claim to jurisdiction implicit in the United States export control laws.

Sickle Cell Disease

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he is taking to sponsor research into the prevention and treatment of sickle cell disease; and what special initiatives the National Health Service has commenced in major cities to provide special screening and counselling facilities.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has recently funded a number of projects on disorders of haemoglobin, such as sickle cell disease. One, carried out at St. Batholomew's hospital, London, was concerned with the development of reference materials for the determination of haemoglobins. Another, at the Manchester Royal infirmary, was on evaluation of diagnostic kits for use in the identification of sickle cell. In addition, the Department is funding a national haemoglobinopathy reference service at Oxford.

Other work is being funded by the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the science vote of Department of Education and Science.

We fully accept the need for screening and counselling facilities but their organisation must be a matter for individual health authorities taking full account of local needs and priorities. Information about such programmes is not collected centrally.

Care in the Community

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the initiatives, apart from those Care in the Community pilot projects funded under the 1983 Care in the Community initiative, set up by his Department to advance the development of community care for people suffering from mental illness and people with mental handicap, stating, in each case, the funds allocated for each scheme.

Mr. Hayhoe: Specific initiatives being taken are:

(i) the provision of small, homely units in the community for mentally handicapped children who will continue to need health care (£10½ million);

(ii) matching £1 for £1 money raised by voluntary organisations to provide care in the community for mentally handicapped children coming out of hospital (£1 million);

(iii) three projects at Hackney, Salford and Southampton to develop co-ordinated aftercare systems for mentally ill people in the community (£120,000);

(iv) an advisory service, provided by the British Institute of Industrial Therapy, to encourage and support the development of viable and potentially self-financing community industrial therapy units for mentally ill people (£60,000);

(v) a series of development projects to provide services in the community for mentally ill people is being launched currently (of the order of £6 million).

In addition to these central initiatives annual support is given to a number of voluntary organisations which, amongst other things, provide community care facilities for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people (£2 million in 1985-86).

Babies (Drug Withdrawal Symptoms)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many babies have required medical treatment shortly or immediately after birth in each of the last seven years as a result of suffering from drug withdrawal symptoms.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information she seeks. It is not available centrally.

Heating Additions

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what level of allowances has been made available to elderly and disabled people in respect of heating assistance in each of the last seven years.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is as follows:

Supplementary Benefit heating additions (£)
(rates operative from November of each year)

† Originally introduced for householders over 75. Age limit reduced to 70 in 1980 and to 65 in 1984.

Where a claimant is eligible for a more beneficial rate of heating addition on grounds other than age or disability this is paid instead of the additions listed above.

Pensions and Benefits

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the increases in the rates of (a) the state retirement pension for single and married pensioners, (b) child benefit, (c) unemployment benefit and (d) supplementary benefits in each of the last seven years, and the total costs which have been incurred as a result of such increments in respect of each benefit.

Mr. Major: Details of the increases in the rates of benefit are contained in "Social Security Statistics 1985" (tables 13.01, 30.01, 1.01B and 34.01), a copy of which is in the Library. The costs of these increases are shown in the table:

The figures quoted for the November 1985 uprating are estimates.

Smoking (Health Risks)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to initiate a campaign aimed at publicising the dangers of smokers' habits to non-smokers.

Mr. Whitney: The Health Education Council has begun an advertising campaign on local independent radio drawing attention to the disadvantages and possible risks to health to non-smokers or breathing other people's tobacco smoke.

Nurses (General Manager Posts)

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many nurses have been appointed to general manager posts within the North-Western regional health authority area; and if he will provide similar figures for each health district within this region.

Mr. Hayhoe: Five nurses have been appointed to unit general manager posts within the North-Western regional health authority, one in each of the districts listed; none has been appointed to the regional or district general manager posts.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make it his policy in relation to the limited list to ensure that general practitioners may use the brand name of a drug on a prescription form when the use of its generic name might cause confusion;

(2) whether he will re-examine his policy to promote the prescribing of drugs on the limited list by a generic rather than a branded name where this policy has caused confusion amongst dispensing chemists;

(3) if he will permit general practitioners to prescribe drugs on the limited list by brand name where they enjoy patent protection;

(4) if he will make it his policy in relation to the limited list to ensure that general practitioners may use the brand name of a drug on a prescription form where the drug is the product of British research;

(5) whether he will permit general practitioners to prescribe drugs on the limited list by brand name where no generic equivalent exists.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am not aware of any instances of confusion through use of generic names in the selected list scheme. I am, however, currently reviewing the policy of requiring National Health Service prescription by generic name, where possible, in the light of representations made by pharmaceutical companies whose products have been affected.

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy in relation to the limited list to ensure that, where a dispensing chemist dispenses a drug on the authority of a prescription containing a brand name neither the dispensing chemist nor the prescribing general practitioner will be penalised.

Mr. Hayhoe: National Health Service contractors who write or dispense prescriptions for drugs listed in schedule 3A to the regulations are in breach of their terms of service and it is for their family practitioner committee to determine any action to be taken.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many persons aged under 26 years have now been moved on (i) after two weeks, (ii) after four weeks and (iii) after eight weeks (a) nationally and (b) by each region, under the Board and Lodging Regulations since April 1985;

(2) how many hotels, bed and breakfast establishments or other board and lodging establishments are known to exist within the area of each Department of Health and Social Services office operating the two, four or eight-week rules under the Board and Lodging Regulations, and of these, how many in each case make charges currently within the Department of Health and Social Services board and lodging limits and how many outside it by (i) less than £5 per week, (ii) £5 to £10 per week, (iii) £10 to £20 per week, (iv) £20 to £40 per week and (v) more than £40 per week.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will announce details of the appointment and reappointment of chairmen of special health authorities from 1 April.

Mr. Whitney: The term of office of six of the chairmen of the Special Health Authorities expired on 31 March 1986. Five have been reappointed and there is one new appointment, Mr. Tom Oakman, as chairman of the National Hospitals for Nervous Diseases. The details are as follows:

Special Health Authority	Chairman	Term of appointment (years)
The Hospitals for Sick Children	Mrs. Caroline Bond SRN SS St. J	2
National Hospitals for Nervous Diseases	Mr. Tom Oakman OBE	4
Moorfields Eye Hospital	Mr. Francis Cumberlege CBE	2

NATIONAL FINANCE

Johnson Matthey Bankers

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the outcome of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise investigations at Johnson Matthey Bankers.

Mr. Brooke: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise have completed their inquiries at Johnson Matthey Bankers in connection with possible VAT offences in relation to gold bullion. I am informed by the commissioners that there are no grounds for prosecuting Johnson Matthey Bankers or any of its employees.

EC Budget

Mr. Moynihan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to publish the White Paper on the 1986 Community budget.

Mr. Brooke: The Government's intention is to publish the statement on the 1986 Community budget as soon as practicable after the European Court of Justice has given judgment on the substance of the cases brought by the Council and certain member states against the European Parliament on the 1986 budget.

Government Contracts (Savings)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy regarding the payment of compensation to persons who have suffered significant financial loss as a result of supplying information to Her Majesty's Government which has led to Her Majesty's Government saving money on contracts.

Mr. MacGregor: Any proposal for such payment would be examined on its merits.

Tax Changes (Gains)

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will specify the distribution of gains in the Budget from each item where tax changes were made other than normal indexation, according to income bands as follows: less than £5,000 per year, £5,000 to £7,500, £7,500 to £10,000, £10,000 to £12,500, £12,500 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £30,000, £30,000 to £50,000 and above £50,000; and if he will indicate the percentage of total tax changes accruing to each group and the percentage of the total numbers of taxpayers that each group comprises;

(2) what is the gain to taxpayers at less than half, half to three quarters, three quarters to one, one to one and a half, one and a half to two, two to three, three to five and five to 10, and more than 10 times average earnings from the 1p cut in income tax; if he will specify these bands in pound sterling per year at current earnings; how many taxpayers are in each of these bands; and what percentage of the total number of taxpayers each group comprises.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Tax and National Insurance

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to the answer given on 7 February, Official Report, columns 277-8, about tax and national insurance contributions, he will show for 1986-87 those ranges of earnings within which the burden of income tax plus national insurance is less than in 1978-79.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986]: The table shows the ranges of earnings within which income tax plus national insurance contributions form a smaller proportion of gross earnings in 1986-87 than in 1978-79, assuming that earnings have risen in line with the national average.

At all income levels those whose earnings have risen in line with the national average have seen a real increase in their take home pay since 1978-79.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 4 February 1985, Official Report, column 397, he will publish and update the table on mortgage interest tax relief by income group for 1985-86.

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current distribution of mortgage interest tax relief by income bands under £5,000 a year, £5,000 to £10,000, £10,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £25,000, £25,000 to £30,000, £30,000 to £40,000, £40,000 to £50,000 and over £50,000; what is the number of taxpayers in each income band receiving this relief; what is the total relief per mortgagor in millions of pounds and as a percentage; and what is the average relief per mortgagor in each income band.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will detail the value of mortgage interest relief at the latest available date, giving the average relief per mortgagor, the numbers claiming relief, the total value of relief and the total number of taxpayers per income range for those with incomes under £3,000, £3,000 to £5,000, £5,000 to £7,500, £7,500 to £10,000, £10,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £25,000 and above £25,000.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his replies, 20 January, 14 February and 7 March 1986]: I regret the delay in providing this information. The latest estimates are given in the table. Following the introduction of the arrangements for giving mortgage interest relief at source from April 1983, it is no longer possible to estimate the distribution of mortgage interest relief from tax records (except for relief on mortgages outside the scope of MIRAS and relief given at rates in excess of the basic rate). The information by income range in the table is based on projections to 1985-86 of information in the 1983 family expenditure survey and the 1983-84 survey of personal incomes. The estimates include mortgages formerly under the option mortgage scheme (now subsumed under MIRAS). All estimates are provisional.

Due to small sample sizes some of the income ranges requested have been combined.

ENERGY

Sizewell

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce his decision on the building of a nuclear power station at Sizewell.

Mr. Goodlad: The Sizewell B inquiry inspector has told my right hon. Friend that he hopes to deliver his report in September. My right hon. Friend then intends to reach his decision as soon as he possibly can.

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether any civil plutonium exported from Britain to the United States of America is to be used in the testing of the Excalibur X-ray nuclear-pulsed laser programme undertaken by the United States Department of Energy at the Lawrence Livermore laboratories at the University of California; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, in the light of the plans set out in its 1987 fiscal appropriations by the United States Department of Energy to redesignate all plutonium in its civil programme as military, he intends to advise the United States Government that such a step in relation to the plutonium of British origin would be contrary to Her Majesty's Government's policy on the use of civil material in military programmes; if he will draw up special arrangements under the 1959 amendment to the 1958 Mutual Defence Agreement to prohibit any such future transfer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The United States' authorities have said that none of the plutonium exported prior to 1971 under the Mutual Defence Agreement has been used in weapons, and this continues to be their policy. Her Majesty's Government remain content to rest on these statements by the United States.

SCOTLAND

Glasgow Garden Festival Project

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what extra allocation of finance had been made available to the Scottish Development Agency in the next financial year to enable it to assist the Glasgow garden festival project.

Mr. Rifkind: In common with previous national garden festivals, no additional funds have been allocated specifically for the Glasgow garden festival, but the need for expenditure on the garden festival has been taken into account in determining the agency's financial provision for 1986-87.

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the expenditure of the Scottish Development Agency in the next financial year is directed towards the Glasgow garden festival project.

Mr. Rifkind: In the financial year 1986-87 the Scottish Development Agency anticipates spending on the Glasgow garden festival project about 8 per cent. of its gross provision for grant-in-aid expenditure.

Clydesdale

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure of the Scottish Development Agency was devoted in each of the last three years to projects in Clydesdale.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Development Agency's expenditure in Clydesdale over the last three financial years was as follows:

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what allocation of expenditure by the Scottish Development Agency is planned for projects in Clydesdale for which support has been requested by Clydesdale district council in the next financial year.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Development Agency is currently assessing the relative priority to be attached to a number of schemes presented by the district council for funding. It is not currently possible to identify specific projects which will be implemented in 1986-87, nor the total sum involved.

Housing

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the present extent of sub-standard housing stock in the local authority districts of the highland region; how this compares with the position in each of the preceding six years; what effect he anticipates the introduction of the proposals made in the consultation document "Home Improvement in Scotland — A New Approach" will have on the prevailing situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: It is for housing authorities to assess the extent of substandard housing in their areas. Returns made by each district council in the Highland region show its estimates of the number of houses below the tolerable standard at 31 March to be:

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Highland Region	5,902	5,728	5,453	5,515	5,143	5,538	*5,371

Sutherland	542	554	492	465	401	365	*365

* Latest available figure for Sutherland is as at 1984.

The proposals in the Green Paper "Home Improvement in Scotland — A New Approach" (Cmnd. 9677) are designed to strengthen the position of the householder by encouraging his responsibilities for his own property with help from others, including local authorities. The objective is to ensure that the resources available are directed to the people most in need of help and the properties most in need of attention. Progress in the improvement of the stock should continue. We are presently considering comments on the Green Paper.

DEFENCE

Auxiliary Oiler and Replenishment Ship

Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the order for the auxiliary oiler and replenishment ship for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Lee: Tenders from Harland & Wolff and Swan Hunters are still being evaluated. I hope to announce a decision shortly.

Housing (Lincolnshire)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of housing units in Lincolnshire transferred by his Department to the Property Services Agency for onward sale in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of quarters in Lincolnshire passed to the PSA for disposal, including those in the sales to service men scheme, are as follows:

	Numbers
1980	44
1981	150
1982	57
1983	84

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EC (Frauds Inquiry)

47. Mr. Skinner asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the European Economic Community inquiry into Mafia olive tree frauds and other illegalities in the European Economic Community to be concluded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: A report on the olive oil sector prepared by the European Court of Auditors was published in June 1985. Many of the recommendations contained in the report have been incorporated in revised rules on production and consumption aid and intervention arrangements.

Veal Crates and Stalls

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, following the code of recommendations 1983, he will take steps to prevent the use of veal crates and stalls; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The code of recommendations for the welfare of cattle already discourages producers from using veal crates. Loose housing systems are being increasingly used and most calves reared for veal are now kept in such systems.

The Government welcome this shift away from the veal crate system and will continue to encourage compliance with the recommendations of the welfare code. In these circumstances, I am not convinced that there is a need for the Government to take further steps.

Egg Production (Battery Cages)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement of his policy in regard to the battery cage system used for egg production.

Mrs. Fenner: My hon. Friend will be aware that the Council of Agriculture Ministers on 24-25 March adopted a directive setting minimum welfare standards for hens kept in battery cages. My right hon. Friend made it clear that, while it represented the best measure negotiable at the present time, it did not go far enough to protect the welfare of battery hens.

He also made it clear that the Commission's report on scientific developments, and appropriate amendments to the text, should if possible be submitted before the formal date in the directive of 1 January 1993.

Lancashire and Western Sea Fisheries Joint Committee

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the consequences for the work of the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee of the abolition of the Merseyside county council; what steps he is taking to seek to ensure its work continues; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have received representations from members and staff of the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee, from hon. Members and from noble Lords about the reduction in the committee's income and activities arising from the decisions by all but two of the district councils in Merseyside and Greater Manchester not to join the committee, following the abolition of the Merseyside and Greater Manchester county councils. While I am naturally concerned about the committee's problems, it is for the councils concerned to decide whether or not to join local sea fisheries committees and accept a share of the costs.

The basic work of the committee on enforcement of sea fisheries regulations will be maintained and it is re-assessing the scope for its other activities. An order to ensure the continued operation of the committee pending the determination of its long-term constitution was made on 7 March and came into operation on 1 April.

Salmon

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the main threats to British salmon stocks, apart from illegal fishing, together with the measures his Department has taken, since 1979, to counter their effect.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 34]: As I said in reply to my hon. Friend's question of 24 March, at column 344, the measures taken to regulate salmon fisheries in British waters and to promote the conservation and development of salmon stocks have prevented the decline in stock experienced by some other countries. Apart from illegal fishing, problems can be caused by a range of factors, including river pollution, barriers to the passage of salmon up the rivers, predation of migrating salmon by other creatures and the level of interception by high seas fisheries.

In England and Wales responsibility for the regulation, maintenance and development of salmon fisheries is placed on the water authorities by the Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries Act 1975. Since 1979 we have confirmed many byelaws and orders made by English water authorities to control salmon fishing and protect salmon stocks, and have approved 21 fish passes to assist adult salmon migrating upstream.

The enforcement of river pollution legislation is also the responsibility of water authorities. Since 1979 the Government have introduced provisions in part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 which strengthen these arrangements. Reduced pollution has led to improved water quality and the re-establishment of salmon stocks in a number of rivers. Moreover, in January 1985 my Department and the Welsh Office jointly issued the "Code of Good Agricultural Practice" designed both to minimise the risk of water pollution from farming practices and to give guidance on good agricultural practice for the purposes of section 31(2)(c) of the 1974 Act.

I am aware of no evidence that predation by birds represents at present a significant threat to salmon stocks in England and Wales. So far as predation by seals is concerned, I would refer my hon. Friend to the written reply I gave to him yesterday on that issue.

This Department participated in international negotiations which led to the establishment in 1981 of a salmon catch quota for the Faroese salmon fishery. Since then, further negotiations have secured reductions of this quota and also of the Greenland salmon catch quota. We supported the establishment of the North Atlantic Salmon Conservation Organisation in 1984 and have worked for agreement in that forum on the limitation of high seas fisheries.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Car Parks

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many car parks run by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) remain to be privatised.

Dr. Boyson: The Department presently owns 331 car parks, of which 29 are privately operated. Of the remaining 302, a further 72 will be considered for private operation in 1986-87.

Wages Inspectorate

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give for 1985 the information on wages councils for Northern Ireland in the same form as the answer to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher), Official Report, 4 April 1985, columns 779-86.

Dr. Boyson: The information requested is given in the following table. In Northern Ireland all checks of pay are made during visits. The amount of arrears assessed and the amount actually paid were the same, No prosecutions or civil proceedings were taken to recover arrears of wages. There are no separate divisions of the Wages Inspectorate in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish for each year since 1979 information from the Wages Inspectorate broken down to show (a) the number of firms inspected and the number of workers whose pay was checked, showing those by visit and those by other method, (b) the number of firms found to be underpaying, (c) the number of workers underpaid, (d) the total arrears assessed and (e) the total arrears actually recovered.

Dr. Boyson: In Northern Ireland all pay is checked by a visit. Figures for the number of firms inspected and the number of workers whose pay was checked are not readily available for 1979 and 1980 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. With these exceptions, the information requested is given in the table.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give a breakdown of Wages Inspectorate staff, showing separately those who are outdoor inspectors, on an establishment and in post basis, for each year since 1979.

Dr. Boyson: Since 1979 there have been in post two outdoor wages inspectors and five other inspectorate staff who also provide the secretariat for the nine wages councils in Northern Ireland. This is the full establishment.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish for 1970, 1974 and 1978 onwards (a) the number of wages councils establishments registered, (b) the proportion of these inspected by visits, (c) the proportion of firms inspected by visit found to be underpaying, (d) the total arrears assessed and (e) the total arrears paid.

Dr. Boyson: Figures for the proportion of establishments where pay was checked by visit and the proportion of such establishments found to be underpaying are not readily available for the years 1970, 1974 and 1978 to 1980 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. With these exceptions the information requested is given in the table.

Portadown

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recent violence in Portadown, County Armagh, on 31 March/1 April detailing the number of people injured and arrested.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 40]: during the disturbances in Portadown on 31 March/1 April 66 people (including 27 members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary) are known to have been injured. Ten people were arrested and the names of others were noted for possible prosecution.

Parades (Re-routeing)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has received from the Northern Ireland police authority, the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and elsewhere, to seek to prevent any bans or re-routeing of traditional parades from becoming a vehicle of disorder.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 553]: Representations are made to me on this topic from time to time. It is the responsibility for the RUC alone to decide whether to impose conditions such as re-routeing particular parades and marches and to consider the public order implications of such decisions. No one is better placed than the police to make such judgments. In deciding whether to use my power to prohibit a public procession, the likely impact on public order is among the factors which I consider and on which I am advised by the RUC.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mexico and Venezuela (Oil Prices)

9. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with the Governments of Mexico and Venezuela concerning the effect of lower oil prices on their economies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Cheaper oil should in due course benefit the world economy, but its immediate impact on the export earnings of major oil exporting debtors such as Mexico and Venezuela is serious. We have discussed these concerns in the course of our contacts with the Governments of both countries.

Central America

11. Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with the Government of Costa Rica on the Contadora initiative concerning the situation in central America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the Foreign Minister of Costa Rica at the Luxembourg meeting on central America last November. Subsequently my right hon. and noble Friend held meetings with the Costa Rican Government in January when she visited San Jose. They made clear our strong and continuing support for the Contadora process.

34. Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with the Contadora group concerning the situation in central America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend last held discussions with the countries of the Contadora group at the meeting of Foreign Ministers of the European Community, central America and the Contadora countries which was held at Luxembourg last November. Our strong and continuing support for the Contadora peace process was reaffirmed.

42. Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held with the United States concerning United States policy towards central America; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have regular discussions with the United States on a wide range of issues, including central America.

Chile

19. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to Chile concerning the human rights situation in Chile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We continue to make clear our concern about the Chilean Government's human rights record.

We supported both the resolution at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights criticising Chile's record on 14 March and the EC presidency statement expressing concern about restriction of freedoms in Chile on the 18 March.

Disarmament

21. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report progress at the various disarmament conferences.

Mr. Renton: The next round of the United States/Soviet nuclear and space talks will begin on 8 May. At the mutual and balanced force reductions talks in Vienna, we have made it clear to the East that their latest proposals represent an inadequate response to the major Western initiative of December 1985. At the conference on disarmament in Europe, we believe that agreement on substantial measures to build confidence and security will be possible if others are prepared to match our readiness to make progress. At the conference on disarmament in Geneva, work on the chemical weapons convention is proceeding under United Kingdom chairmanship.

China

22. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations with China.

Mr. Renton: Our relations with the People's Republic of China are excellent. Her Majesty The Queen will pay a State Visit to China in October; General Secretary Hu Yaobang will visit Britain in June. We are co-operating closely and effectively over the implementation of the joint declaration on Hong Kong. Exchanges in many fields including trade are at an unprecedented level and developing well.

European Economic Community (Foreign Affairs Council)

23. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have been held in the European Economic Community Foreign Affairs Council concerning expenditure in 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Motherwell, North (Mr. Hamilton).

Diplomatic Posts (Japan)

24. Mr. Philip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many personnel are employed on trade promotion activities in British diplomatic posts in Japan.

Mrs. Chalker: Thirty four. In Tokyo there are six United Kingdom-based and 20 locally engaged staff (of which eight are senior commercial officers and 12 are supporting staff). In Osaka there are two United Kingdom-based and six locally-engaged staff (of which three are senior commercial officers and three are supporting staff). Her Majesty's ambassador also devotes much of his time to trade prpmotion.

South Africa

25. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of talks between the South African authorities and the Commonwealth representative group.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Those taking part in the Commonwealth group are acting independently and not as representatives of Governments. We are encouraged by the fact that the group described its recent visit to South Africa as "a useful and constructive first round of discussions".

We continue to regard this as an important initiative to which we are giving our full support.

Test Ban Treaty

26. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest progress towards conclusion of a test ban treaty.

Mr. Renton: The Conference on Disarmament at Geneva is currently holding its 1986 session. As last year, we are seeking agreement on a non-negotiating mandate for an ad hoc committee to examine problems which stand in the way of progress towards a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Meanwhile the ad hoc group of scientific experts met in Geneva in the week beginning 17 March.

Iran-Iraq War

27. Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has as to the extent of the use of chemical weapons by either side in the Iran-Iraq war; and what information he has as to the sources of supply of such weapons.

Mr. Renton: The report of the United Nations Secretary-General, to which I referred in the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for York (Mr. Gregory) on 25 March at column 412 concluded that chemical weapons had been used by Iraq against Iranian forces.

We understand that the chemical weapons used by the Iraqi forces were manufactured in Iraq. The United Kingdom has at no time supplied chemical weapons to either side in the conflict.

Philippines

28. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to visit the Philippines.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has at present no plans to do so. But the United Kingdom will be represented at ministerial level at the annual dialogue meeting between the European Community and the Association of South-East Asian Nations to be held in Manila in mid-1986. We look forward to the opportunities this will present for exchanges with members of the new Philippines Government.

Nicaragua-Costa Rica (Border Patrols)

29. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with European Economic Community or Latin American countries concerning the make-up and financing of the proposed border patrol between Nicaragua and Costa Rica: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Nicaragua

30. Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the European Economic Community to the United States Administration about military aid to the Contra forces in Nicaragua.

31. Mr. Ron Davis asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by the European Economic Community about the implications for the Contadora process posed by United States military aid to the Contras in Nicaragua.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: None.

41. Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community will next discuss its policy towards Nicaragua.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Within the framework of European political co-operation there is regular discussion of questions relating to central America. The next meeting of Foreign Ministers is on 21 April.

European Community (Expenditure)

32. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will propose to the Council of Foreign Ministers that it holds a final meeting with the Council of Finance Ministers in terms of the 4 December 1984 agreement to review the spending of the Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I have no such plans at present but will keep my hon. Friend's suggestion in mind.

Tamils

33. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what encouragement has been given by Her Majesty's Government to the Sri Lankan Government to find a peaceful solution to the Tamil problem.

Mr. Eggar: We have taken every opportunity in our contacts with the Sri Lankan Government, as with Tamil leaders, to urge an end to the violence and settlement of Sri Lanka's problems through negotiation.

European Community (Policy Development)

35. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the development of Community policies in the European Community.

Mrs. Chalker: As I told my hon. Friend on 5 February we shall continue to work for early completion of the common market, improvements in world trade rules, reform of the common agricultural policy and strengthened co-operation in foreign policy.

Soviet-United States Summit

36. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has had any discussions with the United States Government or the Soviet Government concerning the proposed summit between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The two Governments directly concerned are both aware of the importance we attach to successful high-level meetings between them, as a means of increasing confidence and achieving progress in arms control, over regional issues, and in respect by the Soviet Union for human rights. We share Mr. Reagan's hope that Mr. Gorbachev will make his expected visit to the United States this year.

Soviet Union

37. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current relations with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Renton: We continue to seek a more productive and soundly based relationship with the Soviet Union. My right hon. and learned Friend looks forward to welcoming Mr. Shevardnadze to London and to the full programme of bilateral exchanges with the Soviet Union for this year. This includes a visit to the Soviet Union by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy later this month, and another by the British group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, led by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council.

Chile

38. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's current relations with Chile.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery) on 5 March at column 175.

EC (Internal Market)

39. Mr. Ryman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what studies he has commissioned as to the effect on the United Kingdom of European Community proposals to complete the internal market; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The Commission's 1985 White Paper lists over 300 proposals for the completion of the internal market. A substantial proportion of these have not yet been formally submitted to the Council.

The implications for the United Kingdom of each proposal already put forward are set out in the explanatory memoranda to Commission document No. 7674/85 a copy of which is in the Library of the House. These implications are fully explored as proposals are discussed. The best judge of the effect of completing the internal market is British industry itself which has strongly supported the fulfilment of this outstanding obligation under the EC Treaty.

EC (Political Co-operation)

40. Mr. Bob Edwards asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards political co-operation among European Economic Community countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the evidence on European Political Co-operation which my right hon. and learned Friend gave the Foreign Affairs Committee of this House on 11 December, which has now been published. The House will have an opportunity to consider the new treaty provisions on European political co-operation when the Single European Act and the European Communities (Amendment) Bill are before it on the occasion of the Second Reading of the Bill.

Apartheid

43. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the South African Government on the policy of apartheid; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: On 25 February Her Majesty's ambassador raised with the South African Deputy Foreign Minister our concern at the enlargement and projected "independence" of KwaNdebele homeland; the shootings in Alexandra; the detentions of Venda community leaders and the case of the Sharpeville six.

EC (Policy Priorities)

44. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the priorities which the Government intend to pursue during their Presidency of the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Miss Maynard) on 5 March, at column 176.

Falkland Islands

45. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of the people of the Falkland Islands regarding schemes for compensation should any islanders wish resettlement outwith the islands.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: None. The attachment of the Islanders to their way of life has repeatedly been made clear to Ministers, most recently to my right hon. and noble Friend during her visit in February. The results of a recent survey of islander opinion conducted on behalf of the United Kingdom Falkland Islands Committee by Marplan confirms that the overwhelming majority of the islanders want to remain under British Sovereignty.

Sri Lanka

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report the statement made on the position of Sri Lanka in the Human Rights Commission in Geneva in March by the British representative in the commission.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. Details are:

"Like other delegations who have spoken in this debate, Mr. Chairman, we are concerned by the situation in Sri Lanka and the human rights abuses that are being committed by the security forces. We have consistently pressed on the Sri Lankan Government the need for a political rather than a military solution to the ethnic tensions in Sri Lanka. We will continue to do so, and to discourage them from the idea that the Tamil insurgency can or should be dealt with by military means. We will also continue to urge on the Sri Lankan Government the urgent need to take firm action to stop human rights abuses by the security forces. Similarly we will continue to emphasise in our contacts with opposition leaders in Sri Lanka that a negotiated settlement is the only solution. We are disappointed that there have so far been no signs of progress towards such a settlement."

Palestine Liberation Organisation

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the meeting in March between officials of his Department and Faruk Quddumi in London; and what requests were made by his officials that the Palestine Liberation Organisation should explicitly accept United Nations Security Council resolutions 242 and 338.

Mr. Renton: Officials in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office met Mr. Quddumi informally on 19 March, in line with our long-standing policy of maintaining official level contact with the Palestine Liberation Organisation. The PLO are well aware of our view that they should accept SCRs 242 and 338.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held, or intends to hold, with King Hussein about his speech in Amman on 19 February about political co-operation with the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met King Hussein since his 19 February speech, but we continue to keep in close touch with him about developments in the Middle East.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what report he has received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Baghdad about the policy statement on United Nations Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 made by the Palestine Liberation Organisation on 12 March.

Mr. Renton: The Voice of Palestine, broadcasting from Baghdad on 12 March, reported rejection by "the Fatah organisation inside the occupied land" of United Nations Security Council resolutions 242 and 338.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Tunisia regarding the statement of the executive committee of the Palestine Liberation Organisation on 7 March in Tunis concerning Israel and Jordan; and whether his officials discussed this statement with Faruk Quddumi.

Mr. Renton: Her Majesty's Ambassador in Tunis reported fully on the PLO statement of 7 March; Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials discussed this and other recent developments with Mr. Quddumi on 19 March.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what report he has received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Iraq about the claim by the Palestine Liberation Organisation on 18 March in Baghdad that it had placed incendiary bombs in a factory near Tel Aviv, and killed Israeli civilians; and whether his officials raised this incident with Faruk Quddumi at the recent meeting in London.

Mr. Renton: None. The text of this claim, broadcast by the Voice of Palestine in Baghdad, was published in the BBC "Summary of World Broadcasts" on 20 March, the day after the Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met Mr. Quddumi.

Middle East

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's ambassador in Morocco will seek clarification from King Hassan about his proposal on 24 March that the Arab Heads of State should nominate one of their number to meet an Israeli official at summit level; and whether the United Kingdom will give support to this proposal.

Mr. Renton: King Hassan's proposal is quite clear, as is our support for realistic initiatives for a just and lasting settlement of the Arab/Israel dispute.

Syria

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he protested to the Syrian Foreign Minister during his visit to Britain about the tone and content, and their effect on the peace process, of recent speeches by President Hafez Al Assad; and what response he received.

Mr. Renton: No. My right hon. and learned Friend underlined the need for all parties to exercise restraint and commit themselves to the negotiation of a just and lasting settlement of the Arab/Israel disputes. Mr. Shara' responded that Syria also sought a just and lasting settlement.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list his engagements during his recent visit to Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement on his discussions whilst in that country.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend visited Yugoslavia on 23 and 24 March. He had talks with the Foreign Minister; called on the President of the Presidency, acting Prime Minister and Prime Minister designate; and met a broad cross-section of Yugoslavs. His talks were friendly and substantive, and reflected Yugoslavia's unique position in world affairs. They covered bilateral and international issues.

India

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement of his recent visit to India.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to India.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I visited India from 31 March to 2 April at the invitation of the Indian Minister for External Affairs. As well as my host, Mr. Bhagat, I also met the Indian President Giani Zail Singh, the Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, members of his Government and leading figures in various walks of Indian public life. Our discussions covered the full range of international and bilateral subjects; in particular our joint recognition of the need to deal severely with terrorism and to control international trafficking in narcotics. I reaffirmed our determination to continue to support India's economy and development through our aid programme, and our desire to maintain and develop our commercial relationship.

Pakistan

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Pakistan.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I visited Pakistan from 2-5 April at the invitation of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. In addition to my host, Mr. Yaqub Khan, I met President Zia, the Prime Minister Mr. Junego, members of his Government and other leading figures in Islamabad, Lahore and Karachi. I was glad to be able to visit Pakistan so soon after the lifting of martial law and to see for myself the encouraging steps being taken towards the restoration of full democracy. My discussions with my hosts covered a wide range of international and bilateral issues; including in particular the joint action being taken by both our Governments to control drug trafficking. I also had a full exchange of views with the Pakistan Government on the situation in Afghanistan. We agreed that the key to a solution of that tragic problem is the early withdrawal of Soviet troops to allow self-determination for Afghanistan and the return of the refugees to their homeland, as called for in successive United Nations resolutions. I was able to reaffirm our commitment to supporting Pakistan's economic development through our aid programme and to the strengthening of our commercial relations.

ENVIRONMENT

Sports Sponsorship

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the level of sports sponsorship by (a) tobacco companies, and (b) all other companies for each of the last 10 years; and what percentage the level of sponsorship by tobacco companies represents of that of all other companies for each of those years.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer this question shortly.

Derelict Land Grants

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what schemes, totalling what sums, are to be included in next year's programme of derelict land grant schemes in the Camborne-Redruth sector of Kerrier district.

Sir George Young: The 1986-87 grant programme for the south-west region will be decided shortly. I will then write to my hon. Friend.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 10 April 1986

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Numeracy

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to improve standards of numeracy of school leavers.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government's policies are designed to secure improvements in the standards achieved by pupils of all abilities across the whole of the school curriculum. In mathematics, measures taken in the four years since the Cockcroft report was published include dissemination of the report's findings; the publication of the White Paper "Better Schools" in March 1985, chapter 2 of which sets out the Government's policies on the school curriculum 5 to 16, including mathematics; support from September 1985, under the education support grant scheme, for additional advisers and advisory teachers in almost all LEAs; the inclusion of mathematics in the in-service training grants scheme; and sponsorship of research and development work. The introduction of the GCSE examination will encourage further improvements in this subject.

Open University

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with the Open University regarding sustaining its range of courses; what action his Department is taking to maintain the science and technology areas of the work of the Open University; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend last met the vice chancellor and the chairman of the council of the Open University on 9 December 1985. The Government have demonstrated their commitment to increasing activity in the science and technology areas of the university's work by providing additional funds for that purpose, most recently as part of the engineering and technology programme.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science to what he attributes recent increases in the number of people refusing the offer of a place on the undergraduate programme of the Open University; if he will consider introducing special grants where such refusals are caused by unavoidable poverty or disability, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The number of applicants turning down the offer of a place on the Open University's undergraduate programme has decreased slightly in recent years. The university provides financial assistance from within its recurrent grant for those students who are most in need. Since 1982 the Government have earmarked sums (£0·6 million in 1986) to enable the university substantially to reduce the fees for unemployed students. In order to meet the additional costs of providing services to the increased numbers of disabled students the Government have, from 1986, made baseline additions to the university's recurrent grant.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to increase the grants to the Open University if there has been an underestimate in the grant assumptions about inflation; what assessment he makes of the implications of such underestimations on undergraduate programmes at the Open University; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: No. Decisions on the level of grants to the Open University and other centrally funded institutions take into account the availability of resources and include an allowance for inflation. Institutions must manage their operations within the moneys available to them from all sources.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what support his Department is giving to the work of the Open University in developing adult continuing and distance education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The Open University's recurrent grant for 1986 has been set at £59·325 million. This will be used primarily to maintain the undergraduate programme. The continuing education programme is intended to be self-financing by means of fee income and grants from sponsoring bodies, and has expanded rapidly in recent years. The Government welcome this development. In order to promote the further growth of its professional, industrial and commercial updating programme, loans totalling £2·5 million, made available to the university in the years 1982 to 1984, have, from the beginning of the financial year 1986-87, been converted to grant.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from parents and teachers concerning the implementation of the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department has received many representations about the GCSE from parents and teachers. The main concerns have been about the national programme of training for teachers, the provision of adequate resources for books and equipment and the availability of GCSE syllabuses. The measures which my right hon. Friend announced on 13 March met these concerns by enabling all teachers to take part in the training programme and by proposing to direct £20 million of expenditure to books and equipment for the GCSE. On the availability of syllabuses, the Secondary Examinations Council has approved some 170 draft syllabuses and is on course to approve the remainder by the end of this month. Some syllabuses have already been sent to schools and the GCSE examining groups plan to distribute the others as soon as possible. But the draft syllabuses, in schools for several months, and the GCSE national criteria, in schools for a year, have enabled teachers to plan sensibly for the first GCSE courses.

Government-run Schools

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration has been given to setting up schools run directly by central Government.

Mr. Dunn: The Government continue to consider all possibilities for improving school education. If and when decisions are made about possible changes, they will be announced and discussed with the partners in the education service in the usual way.

Student Grants

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what studies he has commissioned of the living costs of students at (a) universities and (b) polytechnics (i) in London and (ii) outside London, for the assessment of student grants.

Mr. Walden: None. As I said in my reply of 27 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor), at column 366, the level of student grant represents a balance between covering students' needs and the total expenditure which taxpayers and ratepayers can reasonably be asked to meet given other claims on scarce resources. The actual living costs of all students in and outside London are obviously kept clearly in mind.

Student Costs

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the figures, in real terms, relating to the cost per full-time equivalent student, each year from 1979-80 to 1984-85 for nursery, primary, secondary and special schools, adult education, further education excluding polytechnics and universities and polytechnics, both separately.

Sir Keith Joseph: The information is as follows:

*Net institutional expenditure per pupil-FTE student

	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	‡1984-85

* Coverage. Universities in Great Britain, otherwise England.
† Price basis. The cash figures for each year have been repriced to 1984-85 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.
‡ The 1984-85 figures, where available, are provisional.

Scottish Universities

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to privatise any of Scotland's universities.

Mr. Walden: It was made clear in "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s" (Cmnd. 9524) that whilst an increase in universities' income from private sources would be desirable the Government had concluded, with regret, that no substantial part of established public funding responsibilities for higher education could be shed. That remains our view.

Speech Science

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what information he has on the numbers of staff engaged in full or part-time teaching on courses leading to degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy and their places of employment;

(2) what information he has as to the number of students, and their place of study, sitting for examinations for degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy in 1983, 1984 and 1985 and the classification of honours awarded where appropriate;

(3) what information he has as to the numbers and location of courses at universities, polytechnics or other institutions leading to degrees in speech science, speech pathology or speech therapy.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 444]: The table published with my reply was incorrect. Revised information on the numbers of speech science, speech pathology and speech therapy graduates is as follows:

Speech science, speech pathology and speech therapy courses and numbers of graduates

ENERGY

"Plan for Coal"

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current status (a) as regards the National Coal Board and (b) as regards his policies towards the mining industry of the "Plan for Coal."

Mr. David Hunt: Developments within the coal industry since 1974 have overtaken the "Plan for Coal." The NCB's new approach is set out in its memorandum "New Strategy for Coal", made available to the unions in the coal industry last October. The Government welcome its approach.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Devon and Cornwall Development Bureau

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what level of support has been decided for the Devon and Cornwall development bureau for 1986-87; andhow this compares as a total and as a percentage with each of the years 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Subject to the voting of funds by Parliament, my Department will make available up to a maximum of £305,000 to the Devon and Cornwall development bureau for 1986-87. Grants paid in the preceding five financial years, as a total and as a percentage of £305,000, were as follows:

	£	Percentage
1981-82	55,000	18
1982-83	60,000	20
1983-84	110,000	36
1984-85	152,000	50
1985-86	210,000	69

Textiles and Clothing (Purchase Grants)

Mrs. Kellett-Bowman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he intends to introduce a scheme to assist universities and colleges to purchase textile and clothing equipment.

Mr. Channon: I intend within the next few months to introduce a £4½ million scheme to help centres of higher and further education to buy advanced textile and clothing machinery. Although all institutions running appropriate courses will be eligible to apply, we intend to concentrate assistance upon those universities, polytechnics and colleges which provide a particularly wide range of education in this area. The rate of grant will be 50 per cent. of equipment costs.

Preparations for the introduction of the scheme have yet to be completed; but centres of education will no doubt wish to start thinking about possible applications under the scheme and the likely availability of supporting finance from other sources.

British Leyland

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest position regarding the future of British Leyland.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I hope that the improvement in BL's performance in 1985 will continue. The Government will continue to support BL's efforts to increase competitiveness. The Government believe that the long-term future of the business is in private ownership and intend that the various operating companies be privatised at the appropriate time.

Discussions are taking place with potential purchasers of Land Rover and Freight Rover with a view to securing the best future for the businesses. The BL board also hopes to consider proposals relating to the future of Leyland Bus during April. For Leyland Trucks, the board will continue to examine possibilities for collaboration with other manufacturers and other ways to sustain its improving trend in performance.

There are no proposals at present to privatise Austin Rover and the company will continue to devote its efforts to the further development and growth of its business, building on the creditable progress already achieved.

Separate discussions are continuing with a view to the privatisation of Unipart by the early placement of shares with United Kingdom financial institutions.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the value of each service which has entered into the United Kingdom invisible trade with Yugoslavia in each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: Estimates of the United Kingdom's invisible transactions with Yugoslavia are not available.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the commodities which entered into the United Kingdom's import and export trade with Yugoslavia in each year since 1979 and the total value of each commodity.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom Imports from Yugoslavia: 1979-85

Bankruptcies (Merseyside)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bankruptcies were handled by the county courts on Merseyside during each of the years 1980 to 1985 inclusive.

Mr. Howard: Bankruptcies handled by the county courts on Merseyside were as follows:

	Number
1980	108
1981	135
1982	153
1983	179
1985	218

The figures include receiving orders and administration orders and the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions.

British Shipbuilders (Pensions)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes have been proposed to him for British Shipbuilders pension arrangements.

Mr. Peter Morrison: British Shipbuilders has made its pension arrangements open to any company in the shipbuilding industries. Accordingly, it has appointed Hadrian Trustees Ltd. as the independent trustee of its scheme, renamed the shipbuilding industries pension scheme. The Secretary of State has given his consent to British Shipbuilders to transfer the share capital of British Shipbuilders Pension Trustee Ltd. to Hadrian Trustees Ltd. This change will not affect the pension rights of British Shipbuilders' pensioners or continuing employees or the rights of the employees of those privatised yards that opt to remain in the scheme.

Conference Trade (Dutch Subsidies)

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to refer to the European Commission the subsidies being offered to the conference trade in the Netherlands by the Dutch Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have received representations about these subsidies. We are considering the possibility of asking the Commission to investigate them.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Welsh Business

Mr. Best asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will state for each of the last six years the number of (a) Welsh debates, (b) meetings of the Welsh Grand Committee and (c) statements on matters relating to Wales; and if he will give similar information in respect of Scotland.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 4 March 1986, c. 96]: Since my earlier reply, a number of other debates have also been identified. The figures for the period 1979-80 to 1984-85 should now read as follows:

Session	*Welsh debates	*Scottish debates
1979-80	14	22
1980-81	5	24
1981-82	10	21
1982-83	5	13
1983-84	12	23

* Excluding debates on various stages of legislation, ten-minute Bills, money resolutions, SO No. 10 applications and PNQs, but including inter alia daily Adjournment debates, debates on statutory instruments and Consolidated Fund Bill debates.

It should be noted, however, that in view of the difficulty of defining precisely what constitutes "Welsh debates" and "Scottish debates", this table may not be comprehensive.

HOME DEPARTMENT

CS Gas

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has arranged for any tests to be carried out to establish the extent of any carcinogenic properties of CS gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. Following the "Report of the Enquiry into the Medical and Toxicological Aspects of CS (Orthoclorobenzylidene malononitrile) (Cmnd. 4775), a number of scientific studies in this area have been published. I understand that no positive correlation between CS and cancer has been demonstrated.

Independent Broadcasting Authority

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what control he exercises over the work of the Independent Broadcasting Authority.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Independent Broadcasting Authority is a body corporate established by Parliament to provide broadcasting services within the United Kingdom. The Home Secretary is responsible for appointing the chairman and members of the authority, and has various reserve powers with regard to the operations of the authority. He does not exercise day-to-day control over the work of the authority.

Farriers (Registration) Acts

Mr. Ryder asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to seek to repeal the Farriers (Registration) Act 1975 and 1977; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have at present no plans for legislation in this field.

Strip Searches, Brixton Prison

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the frequency of strip searches of women prisoners in Brixton prison, London.

Mr. Mellor: Strip searching is a routine security measure to which all prisoners—male and female (and including those on remand) — are subject. Such searching is essential to detect small items of contraband —such as weapons and drugs—which can easily be concealed about the person and which cannot be detected by other means of searching. Because of the nature and circumstances of the offences with which they have been charged, the three women prisoners on remand in Brixton prison have been provisionally placed in the highest security category, category A, which is reserved for those prisoners whose escape would be highly dangerous to the public, or to the police, or to the security of the state. In accordance with standard practice, they are strip searched before and after court appearances, after visits, at the time of cell changes, and during wing and cell searches. They are being treated no differently from male category A prisoners. My right hon. Friend has taken a personal interest in the cases of the three women. He is satisfied that they have not been subject to an unreasonable number of strip searches; and that they are being treated fairly and reasonably and in accordance with the prison rules.

Easter Day (Draft Orders)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of the weather conditions experienced over the Easter weekend, he will now undertake the necessary consultation with the Churches with a view to laying draft orders before both Houses of Parliament to invoke the provisions of the Easter Act 1928 providing that Easter Day shall be the first Sunday after the second Saturday in April.

Mr. Mellor: No. Inquiries undertaken by the Government in 1984 showed that there was no early prospect of the orthodox Churches adopting a common date for Easter. It would not be desirable to act without consensus on this issue.

Youth Community Forums

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, when he next meets Her Majesty's Inspectors of Constabulary to discuss police and community forums, he will suggest that separate youth community forums be set up to improve relations between young people and the police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Under section 106 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 responsibility for obtaining the views of the local community on matters concerning policing rests with the police authority in consultation with the chief constable. Home Office guidelines contained in circular 2/1985 provide for the inclusion of representatives of youth organisations in consultation arrangements. The establishment of separate forums is a matter for local decision, and I am glad to inform my hon. Friend that consideration is being given to this by the group in north Bradford.

Winson Green Prison

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will detail the number of educational classes at Her Majesty's prison, Winson Green (a) due to be held and (b) cancelled, giving reasons for any such cancellations, in each week from September 1985 to February 1986 and stating the number of prisoners in each week due to undertake educational classes.

Mr. Mellor: The information is as follows:

Week commencing	Day classes		Evening classes
	Planned	Cancelled	Planned	Cancelled
9 September 1985	50	50	27	18
16 September 1985	50	40	27	0

27 January 1986	50	20	27	0
3 February 1986	50	10	27	0
10 February 1986	50	40	27	0
17 February 1986	50	40	27	0
24 February 1986	50	10	27	0

*Half term (no classes planned).

In all cases day classes were cancelled because of a shortage of prison officers to perform escort and supervisory duties. Evening classes were cancelled on 9 September 1985 as a precaution in response to riots in Birmingham and on 6 January 1986 because teachers were absent as a result of adverse weather conditions.

In common with other local prisons, the transient nature of the population at Birmingham influences the day-to-day size of education classes, and the precise number of prisoners who were due to attend classes in each week could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. it is estimated that, in a normal week with a full schedule of classes, an average total of 60 prisoners would attend day classes and 150 prisoners would attend evening classes.

Oxford Air Training School (Libyan Nationals)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of those Libyans currently training at the Oxford air training school, Kidlington.

Mr. Waddington: Immigration Department records do not normally identify individuals by place of study or employment, but I understand that there are 27 Libyan nationals at the Oxford air training school, Kidlington. It would be contrary to normal practice on disclosure of personal information to publish their names.

Immigration Rules

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the amendments to the immigration rules (HC 503) will be incorporated with the other immigration rules (HC 169).

Mr. Waddington: The Government have no plans at present to incorporate these changes in a new statement of the immigration rules. But following the undertaking given by my noble Friend during the debate on the statement of changes in immigration rules in another place on 23 October 1985, what is in effect a consolidated version of the immigration rules has been placed in the Library.

WALES

District Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether the Welsh Office makes any inquiries as to the possible membership of, or identification with, any political parties when making appointments to district health authorities in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Such inquiries are not made. In making appointments to district health authorities our policy is to select the best person for the job. Sometimes a nominee's curriculum vitae includes political affiliations, but more often these are not known.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the percentage increase between the actual outturn expenditure of each of the nine district health authorities in Wales in 1984-85 and their provisional forecast of outturn for 1986-87.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is as follows:

	Percentage increase
Clwyd	12·57
East Dyfed	9·32
Gwent	10·63
Gwynedd	7·72
Mid Glamorgan	12·34
Pembrokeshire	13·43
Powys	10·77
South Glamorgan	9·08
West Glamorgan	20·41

The figures for 1986-87 used to produce these percentage increases are provisional forecasts of outturn, since they do not take account of all the income which might be generated locally, possible movements in balances, and a further £13 million which will be allocated for centrally funded developments during the course of the year.

From 1 April 1985 the responsibility for family practioner services was transferred from health authorities to independent family practitioner committees. Expenditure on these services has therefore been excluded from the calculations.

These figures cannot be taken as indicative of the increase in discretionary provision made available to the authorities over the period in question, since they include recurrent revenue provision in respect of centrally funded developments and non-recurrent capital expenditure associated with major capital schemes.

PRIME MINISTER

York

Q12. Mr. Gregory asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to make an official visit to York.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 April

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 April.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 April.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 10 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what Her Majesty's Government's involvement was in the meeting in Washington on 25 March involving 50 British companies and the strategic defence initiative organisation at the Pentagon.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 26 March 1986, at columns 494-95.

EC (Intergovernmental Agreement)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister who signed the 1985 European Economic Community intergovernmental agreement on Britain's behalf.

The Prime Minister: The 1985 intergovernmental agreement was concluded at the Foreign Affairs Council on 17-21 March 1985. The United Kingdom was represented by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. In accordance with practice at such meetings the assent of the member states was given not by formal signature but by by their acceptance of the undertaking during the meeting.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Land Registry

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General if he will publish an analysis of, and an explanation for, the increase in the number of persons employed by the Land Registry between 1979 and 1985.

The Attorney-General: The number of staff employed by the Land Registry between 31 March 1979 and 31 March 1985 increased by 1,607 (29 per cent.). This increase has been necessary to deal with a 52 per cent. increase in applications and transactions during that period. This increase arose primarily owing to the continuing growth in owner-occupation, increased property market activity and the further extension of compulsory registration of title in England and Wales.

9 Signals Regiment (Prosecution)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General on what date he decided to bring a prosecution against junior airmen and Army service men from 9 Signals Regiment based in Cyprus, who were subsequently acquitted in October 1985.

The Attorney-General: I consented to the prosecution of 7 service men on 11 April 1984 and to the prosecution of an eighth service man on 1 June 1984.

EMPLOYMENT

Enterprise Allowance

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General what has been the total number of entrants to date to the enterprise allowance scheme in the Cheltenham area; and at what cost to his Department.

Mr. Trippier: The figures are not available in the form requested. However, in the Gloucestershire and Wiltshire area, which includes Cheltenham, 1,838 people entered the enterprise allowance scheme between its inception in August 1983 and the end of March 1986 at an estimated cost of £2·865 million in allowances.

Job Release Scheme

Mr. Mudd asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans for the phasing out or termination of the job release scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: There are currently no plans to phase out or terminate the full-time job release scheme, which in common with all employment measures is kept under review.

Redundancies (Coventry)

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General if he will list the redundancies which occurred in Coventry of which his Department was notified from April 1983 to the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Lang [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 17]: A provisional total of 8,155 redundancies were confirmed by the Manpower Services Commission as due to occur in the Coventry jobcentre area between April 1983 and February 1986.

The names of the firms suffering redundancies cannot be disclosed, as this information is treated in confidence by the Department.

TRANSPORT

Blind Persons (Pedestrian Crossing)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet received a report assessing, in the light of experience, the suitability for blind persons of the surface area of the pavement at the pedestrian crossing in Abingdon street near Parliament square; if he will institute consultations on the suitability of this surface and publish the outcome in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Assessment of the textured surface at the pedestrian crossing in Abingdon street and at other sites around the country has now been completed. The trials have demonstrated that the surface is helpful in assisting visually handicapped people to locate and use pedestrian crossings at which the kerb has been ramped for the benefit of people in wheelchairs. A report on the trials is being prepared and a copy will be placed in the Library when it is published.

Following consultation with local authority associations the Department will be issuing advice to highway authorities on the purpose, design and layout of the surface.

M40 (Traffic Flows)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to traffic flows on the following sections of the M40 motorway: (a) between the M25 motorway and Beaconsfield, (b) between Beaconsfield and Wycombe East, (c) between Wycombe East and Handy Cross and (d) between Handy Cross and Stokenchurch; what information he has in particular as to five-day and seven-day average traffic flows; and what counts have been undertaken.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is set out in the table. For the sections from Wycombe East to Stokenchurch, it is derived from either continuous count equipment or manual traffic counts in December 1985. For the other sections, where no counts have been taken since March 1984 at the latest, an estimate has been made of the average daily flow in December 1985 on a seven-day, 24-hour basis.

Average daily two-way flow

Section of M40	5-day flows		7-day flows
	16-hour	24-hour	16-hour	24-hour
M25 to Beaconsfield	—	—	—	*39,000
Beaconsfield to Wycombe East	—	—	—	*38,000
Wycombe East to Handy Cross	38,000	40,000	36,000	38,000
Handy Cross to Stokenchurch	29,000	31,000	28,000	30,000

* Estimate.

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport what forecasts he has made of traffic flows on the M40 motorway in the year 2000 (a) without and (b) with the extension of the motorway to Birmingham.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The forecasts for the existing lengths of M40 in the year 2000 are given in the table. They are based on forecasts made in the context of the extension proposals and up-dated to reflect subsequent developments. The ranges show flows on the basis of both low and high growth assumptions.

Two-way average daily flow
(5-day 24-hour flows)

Section of M40	Without M40 extension	With M40 extension
Denham to Beaconsfield	50,000 to 60,000	64,000 to 77,000
Beaconsfield to Wycombe East	49,000 to 58,000	64,000 to 76,000
Wycombe East to Handy Cross	49,000 to 58,000	64,000 to 76,000
Handy Cross to Stokenchurch	39,000 to 46,000	56,000 to 67,000
Stokenchurch to Lewknor	44,000 to 53,000	62,000 to 75,000
Lewknor to Milton Common	33,000 to 40,000	54,000 to 66,000
Milton Common to A40	31,000 to 37,000	53,000 to 64,000

Test Certificates

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many Department of Transport test certificates were printed in 1985; and how many tests were undertaken in each of the past three years and to date.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: About 14 million test certificates are printed annually.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer on the number of tests undertaken given to him on 25 March, at column 419.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency plans there are to enable Department of Transport vehicle tests to be undertaken in the absence of certificates: and if he will make a statement on the availability of test certificates.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Authorised garages know that they should apply for certificates at least 14 days before their existing stock runs out.

Although regrettably there has been some delay recently in the issue of test certificates to garages, the turnround in the Department has now been reduced to about two days from receipt of application.

If, for any reason, an authorised garage is unable to issue an MoT certificate, a motorist should take his vehicle to another of the 17,000 test centres distributed throughout the country.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects that all licensed garage testing centres will be in possession of MoT certificates.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Now and always.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Greek Cypriots

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what representations he has made to the Turkish Government about the Greek Cypriots missing after the events of 20 July 1974.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley on 24 February at column 441.

Greece

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwelath Affairs whether he raised the refusal of the Greek authorities to allow entry into Greece by United Kingdom citizens carrying British passports, which had been stamped by the authorities of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, during his recent visit to Athens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Greek authorities have indicated that this practice has now been discontinued.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Greek authorities will now allow entry into Greece by United Kingdom citizens carrying British passports previously stamped by the authorities of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: That is our understanding. We welcome this development.

Falkland Islands (Fishing)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what stage has been reached in the study by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation of fishing in the south-west Atlantic; what is the United Kingdom part in this study; and whether he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement about the agreement with the Japanese to limit their fishing of Falkland islands and South Georgia waters; and whether he intends to seek other such agreements.

Mr. Eggar: It is encouraging that all the Governments concerned have agreed to participate in the FAO study. FAO experts are compiling data and have recently visited capitals for discussions. The United Kingdom is making a major contribution; we have provided technical data and held talks with FAO officials. We have urged all nations involved to co-operate fully.

Pending completion of the study we have asked fishing nations to take account of our conservation concerns by exercising self-restraint, limiting their 1986 operations to 1985 levels. There has been a positive response. The Japanese authorities have undertaken to keep their fishing effort at the 1985 level by reducing their fishing season and limiting the number of their vessels fishing within the Falkland Islands Protection zone.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what check is kept, and what records are maintained, of the nationality and numbers of fishing vessels in the exclusion zone around the Falklands.

Mr. Eggar: Daily patrols of the Falkland Islands Protection Zone are carried out by the RAF and the Royal Navy. These provide fisheries surveillance reports which incorporate information on the nationalities and numbers of fishing vessels sighted. These reports are analysed regularly by the Falkland Islands Development Corporation in Port Stanley and by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Gibraltar (Naval Incident)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the incident which occurred in United Kingdom territorial waters off the Dependent Territory of Gibraltar on 20-21 March involving the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo;

(2) what representations were made to the Spanish Government regarding the entry into United Kingdom territorial waters off the Dependent Territory of Gibraltar by the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo on 20-21 March; and what reply was received.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the encroachment into Gibraltar's territorial waters by the flagship of the Spanish navy Dedalo on 20 March; if he will detail the extent of representations made by Her Majesty's Government to the Spanish Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo entered Gibraltarian waters at 2344 hours on the night of 20-21 March and departed 15 minutes later at 2359 hours. During that time two helicopters were launched from the vessel. Her Majesty's embassy in Madrid was instructed to protest to the Spanish Government about this incident. This was done after the Easter holiday on 2 April. A Spanish reply was received on 3 April. I am satisfied that the United Kingdom's position has been properly safeguarded.

Libya (Bombing Threat)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been (a) made by Her Majesty's Government to Libya and (b) received by Her Majesty's Government from the United States, following the recent threat by a Libyan trainee pilot that American bases in the United Kingdom might be bombed.

Mr. Renton: None.

Zimbabwe (Release of Funds)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 361, he will make a statement on the concrete outcome of the discussions he held with the Zimbabwean Foreign Minister on the release of funds of former Zimbabwe residents.

Mrs. Chalker: When my right hon. and learned Friend discussed the problem of the blocked funds of former Zimbabwe residents with the Zimbabwean Foreign Minister in February he asked for cases involving blocked remittances to be handled sympathetically, especially when hardship had occurred. The Minister expressed the hope that favourable developments in Zimbabwe's balance of payments could lead to some improvement in the situation.

Pakistan (Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Pakistan.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on 9 April, at column 142.

UNITA (Angola)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards UNITA in Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: We recognise the state of Angola and have diplomatic relations with its Government. Officials have had contact with UNITA for humanitarian purposes, most recently in March to facilitate the release of four British citizens taken captive by UNITA in Angola.

Afghanistan

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of other states concerning the situation in Afghanistan; if he has any plans aimed at seeking to bring about an end to foreign interference in the internal affairs of that country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has frequent and detailed discussions about the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan with our European Community partners and NATO allies and with many other countries. Most recently he discussed the subject in depth with the Government of Pakistan during his recent visit there. My right hon. and learned Friend made clear to them that we fully support their firm and principled stand and the hospitality and help they are providing to the Afghan refugees who have sought refuge in their country. We are in full agreement that the key to peace in Afghanistan is the withdrawal of Soviet troops. To that end we fully support the United Nations Secretary General's efforts to find a solution on the basis of the principles set out in successive United Nations resolutions.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to assist in mediation moves to seek to bring a peaceful solution to the conflict between the communities in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have not been asked, neither would we wish, to become involved in Sri Lanka's internal problems. But we fully support any efforts which encourage direct talks between the Sri Lankan Government and representatives of the Tamil separatist movements. We have continued to make clear to all the parties involved that a negotiated settlement offers the best route to lasting peace and reconciliation in Sri Lanka.

Mongolia

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the main features of Anglo-Mongolian relations.

Mr. Renton: The promotion of trade and cultural exchanges. Recent visits by the chairman of the Mongolian state bank and by a Mongolian state buying mission have improved the prospects for increased bilateral trade. The Anglo-Mongolian cultural exchange programme was renewed in April 1985 for a further two years.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what purpose the United Kingdom maintains a mission in the Mongolian People's Republic; how many people are in post; and what is the annual cost of the mission.

Mr. Renton: The United Kingdom maintains a mission in Ulan Bator to conduct political relations with the Mongolian People's Republic, to promote trade, to help to implement the cultural exchange programme, and to provide consular assistance to British tourists. The embassy has four United Kingdom-based staff and seven locally-engaged staff, and cost £203,000 in 1984-85.

Diplomatic Service

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of the universities from which staff were recruited into the administrative group of the diplomatic service during each of the years 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Eggar: The breakdown is as follows:

1984
Cambridge	7
Dundee	1
Leeds	2
London	1
Oxford	12
Stirling	1
	24
1985
Aberdeen	2
Bath	1
Bristol	1
Cambridge	7
Edinburgh	1
London	1
Newcastle	1
Oxford	6
St. Andrews	1
Southampton	1
Sussex	1

Irish Sailors and Soldiers Land Trust

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer of 12 November, Official Report, column 146, he will make a further statement on the future of the Irish Sailors and Soldiers Land Trust.

Mr. Eggar: In view of increased pressure of Parliamentary business, it has been decided to drop the Bill from the current legislative programme.

ENVIRONMENT

Touring Caravans

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to the answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 47, concerning the licensing controls on touring caravans, he will now state what will be the form and timescale of further public consultation on this issue.

Mrs. Rumbold: Further public consultation would be on the proposals for a future Bill, but this is unlikely to happen this year.

Sewage Plants

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has as to the effluent discharge standard at each sewage treatment plant in the Thames water authority;

(2) what information he has as to the number of occasions on which sewage plants failed to achieve their set standards in 1984-85 and as to which plants were involved.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Thames Water Authority

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many items or projects by the Thames water authority fell into the following investment or expenditure categories in the last year for which figures are available : (a) £2,000 to £10,000, (b) £10,000 to £20,000, (c) £20,000 to £30,000, (d) £30,000 to £40,000, (e) £40,000 to £50,000, (f) £50,000 to £60,000, (g) £60,000 to £70,000, (h) £70,000 to £80,000, (i) £80,000 to £90,000, (j) £90,000 to £100,000 and (k) £100,000 or more.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not held by my Department. Thames water authority has some 50 schemes in progress which cost over £1 million.

Merseyside Residuary Body

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the current members of the Merseyside Residuary Body, indicating each member's occupation.

Mr. Tracey: The current membership of the Merseyside Residuary Body comprises the following:

Mr. Norman Brodrick (Chairman)—Retired local agent for Bank of England
Mr. Duncan Forbes—Retired chairman of shipping line
Mr. John Hill—Retired local government officer
Mr. William Hughes—Retired local government officer
Mr. Leslie Jones—Retired civil servant
Councillor James Lloyd—Manager in industry: leader of Knowsley Borough Council
Mr. Barry Marsh—Solicitor
Mr. Kenneth Medlock—Retired businessman

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with NIREX about the proposals for nuclear dumps since the receipt of the list of recommendations.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave on 11 March at columns 431-32, to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Cleethorpes (Mr. Brown).

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what relevant geological exploratory work he is aware of on the Killingholme Central Electricity Generating Board site supported by NIREX as a possible nuclear dump.

Mr. Waldegrave: I understand that earlier geological exploratory works undertaken by the CEGB in connection with the possible development of a power station on the Killingholme site were insufficient for NIREX's purposes. The site investigations now proposed by NIREX will establish whether the site would be geologically suitable for development as a disposal facility.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards replying to correspondence, meeting deputations and receiving representations from those in the areas affected by the proposals for nuclear waste disposal before the special development order is published; and whether he intends to set any final date for this process.

Mr. Waldegrave: My ministerial colleagues and I have made it clear that we are willing to meet representatives of the areas concerned to discuss the draft special development order. With my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State I have already met such delegations led by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Lyell) and my hon. Friends the Members for Bedfordshire, South-West (Mr. Madel) and for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Hickmet) and the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell). Matters of civil nuclear policy in general are, of course, largely a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy. It is clear that the proper occasion for the detailed examination of proposals for any particular site must await the public inquiry.

Meanwhile, my right hon. Friend and I will consider on their merits all representations concerned with the planning and other implications of the proposals now the subject of the draft SDO.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the special development order for exploratory work on nuclear dumps.

Mr. Waldegrave: As soon as all the matters raised during the consultation period have been fully considered.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what population lives within a (a) five-mile radius and (b) 10-mile radius of each of the four sites supported by NIREX for nuclear dumps; and what are the drainage boards, the water authorities and the district authorities into which they fall.

Mr. Waldegrave: Population levels for these precise areas are not readily available. However the following approximate population levels are derived from the 1981 census:

	Radius
	5 km	15 km
South Killingholme	10,000	288,000
Elstow	40,000	130,000
Fulbeck	3,500	76,000
Bradwell	8,000	75,000

All four sites are within the area of the Anglian water authority. South Killingholme falls within the area of Glanford borough council and North East Lindsey internal drainage board.

Elstow falls within the areas of Mid Bedfordshire district council, North Bedfordshire borough council and the Bedfordshire and River Ivel internal drainage board.

Fulbeck falls within the areas of South Kesteven district council, North Kesteven district council and Witham internal drainage board.

Bradwell falls within the area of Maldon district council. This site is not within the area of any drainage board.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what budget is allocated to NIREX for informing public opinion on nuclear dumping; and from what sources the money is allocated.

Mr. Waldegrave: I understand from UK NIREX Ltd. that it has allocated £896,000 to its publicity budget for 1986-87. NIREX is funded by the four shareholders: British Nuclear Fuels Ltd., the United Atomic Energy Authority, the Central Electricity Generating Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy holds a special share, nominally valued at £1.

Merseyside Task Force

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present size and establishment of the Merseyside task force; and what its cost has been to central Government in each year since it was appointed.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The number of staff employed at the Department of the Environment's Merseyside task force is 49. The task force was set up in October 1981. On 8 July 1983 the then Secretary of State announced that a more permanent office would be established on Merseyside. This new establishment became operative on 3 January 1984.

The costs to my Department of salaries and accommodation, including telephone expenses in each year, have been as follows:

Financial Year	£000s
1982-83	181·9

* Part.

For subsequent years I am able to give more comprehensive costs. These are as follows:

Financial Year	£000s
1983-84	243·7
1984-85	608·7
1985-86	*647·6

* Projected outturn.

Voluntary Organisation, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from voluntary organisations on Merseyside with regard to their funding following the abolition of the Merseyside county council; and if he will list those organisations.

Mr. Tracey: We have not received any representations from voluntary organisations on Merseyside with regard to their future funding since abolition of the Merseyside county council.

Fish (Mercury Levels)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to seek a reduction in the European Community's environmental quality standard for mercury levels in fish; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Sports Sponsorship

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the level of sports sponsorship by (a) tobacco companies, and (b) all other companies for each of the last 10 years; and what percentage the level of sponsorship by tobacco companies represents of that of all other companies for each of those years.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1986, c. 142]: Under the terms of the voluntary agreement on the sponsorship of sport by tobacco companies, the industry informs my Department of its annual expenditure on sports sponsorship on a confidential basis. I cannot, therefore, make these figures available.

The level of sports sponsorship by all companies has been estimated by the Sports Council only for the last five years; the figures are £35 million (1980), £50 million (1981), £84·7 million (1982), £100·2 million (1983), £112 million (1984) and £128 million (1985).

Since the voluntary agreement limits the tobacco companies' expenditure to the 1976 in real terms, the increase in the overall level of commercial sponsorship means that the tobacco industry's expenditure is decreasing each year as a proportion of all sponsorship. Current independent estimates place that proportion at less than 10 per cent.

SCOTLAND

Forestry Commisson

33. Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's future plans for the management and ownership of the Forestry Commission.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on this subject on 20 February 1986, at column 347.

Afforestation

34. Mr. McKelvey asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to prohibit private forestry companies undertaking afforestation without Forestry Commission approval.

Mr. John MacKay: There have only been two significant cases of planting without approval since the Forestry Commission's present consultation procedures were introduced in 1974. We would have to think very carefully, therefore, before imposing further controls on forestry.

Primary Schools

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of open-plan designed primary schools in Scotland; and what assessment has been made of the success of this design.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Information on the number of open-plan designed primary schools in Scotland is not held centrally. The Scottish Council for Research in Education and various colleges of education have carried out assessments of aspects of teaching and learning in open-plan primary schools in Scotland, of which the most recent is contained in SCRE's "Management and Organisation in a Variety of Open-Plan Primary Schools" (1982).

Joint Liaison Committees

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) which joint liaison committees between health boards and local authorities have amended their constitutions in response to the proposals for changes contained in the April 1985 Scottish Office circular, "Community Care: Joint Planning and Support Finance";

(2) which joint liaison committees now have meetings which are open to the press and to the public;

(3) which joint liaison committees now have voluntary sector representatives as a full and regular part of their membership; and which committees have them in membership but only on a partial or restricted basis;

(4) what are the various mechanisms which joint liaison committees have adopted for contact with, and for seeking representations from, the voluntary sector.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on the practices and constitution of individual joint liaison committees is not collected centrally. We have no reason to believe, however, that such committees are not following the guidance set out in the April 1985 circular.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the statutory authority for the proposals in his recent circular that (a) specify that joint liaison committees should be established and in what circumstances, (b) specify the overall role and functions that should be given to the joint liaison committees, (c) specify the membership of joint liaison committees, (d) specify the methods of operation of joint liaison committees, including the publishing of committee papers and the holding of meetings open to the public and (e) require that reports on the work of joint liaison committees be submitted to the Scottish Office at regular intervals to facilitate the monitoring of progress.

Mr. John MacKay: Section 13 of the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978 imposes a statutory responsibility on health boards and local authorities to co-operate with one another in order to secure and advance the health of the people of Scotland. The proposals in the 1985 circular give administrative guidance to the bodies concerned as to how such co-operation should operate in the areas of joint planning and support finance.

Community Care

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland which joint liaison committees had prepared any of the four joint 10-year plans requested in the April 1985 Scottish Office circular, "Community Care: Joint Planning and Support Finance," by the deadline of 31 March 1986 specified in the circular;

(2) if he will list by the four priority categories, and by health board area, the joint plans that had been submitted to the Scottish Office by 31 March 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: Both Shetland and Orkney health boards have prepared the plans requested. Health boards were not formally required to submit copies of their plans to the Secretary of State, but Shetland health board has sent a copy of its plan, which covers all four priority groups, to the Scottish Home and Health Department.

The majority of the remaining boards have indicated informally that the plans for their areas are well advanced or nearing completion.

Privatisation

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Sir James Goold, chairman of the conservative party in Scotland, concerning the privatisation of functions currently carried out by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: None.

DEFENCE

IBM Computers

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has agreed the terms and conditions attached to the purchase of IBM computers and expressed in the document entitled "Supplement to Agreement for Sale of IBM machines (on order) form 7-242 (7/80)", whether he will comply with the movement restriction in the United Kingdom this imposes on IBM 3083 main frames; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No. The document does not form part of the terms and conditions negotiated with IBM by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency governing aquisition of computer equipment for administrative and general scientific purposes for the Ministry of Defence.

Gibraltar (Naval Incident)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he received a report that the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo entered United Kingdom waters off the dependent territory of Gibraltar on 20-21 March; and what action he instructed.

Mr. Stanley: I received a report on the incident on Friday 21 March. On the Government's response to the incident, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs today.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what action was taken by the deputy fortress commander of the British forces in Gibraltar when the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo entered United Kingdom territorial waters on 20-21 March off that dependent territory; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what action was taken by the Royal Air Force commander at North Front, Gibraltar, when the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo entered United Kingdom territorial waters off Gibraltar on 20-21 March;

(3) what steps were taken by Royal Air Force Gibraltar to intercept the helicopters which took off within United Kingdom waters off Gibraltar from the Spanish aircraft carrier Dedalo on 20-21 March; what assessment he has made of the dangers this incursion could have caused; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: It would not be in the public interest to provide operational information of this nature. The flight safety implications have been assessed and conveyed to the Spanish Government.

China

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has recently had with the People's Republic of China; and what results he expects to flow from these discussions.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I visited the People's Republic of China from 2-6 April 1986. The prime objective of my visit was to explore the scope for increasing collaboration on defence procurement matters. My discussions in China provide a useful basis for the continuing dialogue with the Chinese on procurement related topics.

Foreign Service Allowance

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much the foreign service allowance was in 1978, 1981 and 1985, respectively, at 1985 prices; and what was the equivalent in deutschmarks at the forces fixed rate of exchange.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

I assume that the hon. Member is interested in rates of foreign service allowance paid to United Kingdom-based civilian staff in Germany who work in support of the British forces Germany. There are different rates of FSA for staff serving in other countries and other parts of Germany.

The rates of FSA paid to such staff in each year in question are as follows with their equivalents in deutschmarks at the average of the forces fixed rates of exchange which were effective in each of those years. The figures have been adjusted to 1985 prices to reflect inflation in Germany. The rates of FSA are for United Kingdom-based civilian staff at clerical officer (FSA band 5) level and at principal level and above (FSA band 1) who are single, or married and accompanied by their spouse and one child.

	£	DM	£	DM	£	DM
Band 5
Single	1,753	7,275	1,047	4,554	155	597
Married	2,949	12,238	2,163	9,409	1,420	5,467
Band 1
Single	2,099	8,711	1,047	4,554	155	597
Married	4,914	20,393	3,512	15,277	1,420	5,467

However, FSA is calculated as a supplement to Civil Service pay and ought not to be viewed in isolation. Comparable figures showing what has happened to Civil Service pay plus FSA in Germany over the period in question are as follows:

	1978		1981		1985
	£	DM	£	DM	£	DM
Band 5
Single	4,901	20,339	5,075	22,076	5,532	21,298
Married	6,401	26,564	6,651	28,932	7,480	28,798
Band 1

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Quotas

24. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the current state of distribution of milk quotas between landlords and tenants.

Mr. Soames asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the position of tenant dairy farmers in respect of milk quotas when they leave their farms.

Mr. Jopling: Under Community rules, when a tenancy ends, the milk quota passes to the new occupier. There is at present no provision under which the outgoing tenant can claim any compensation for the money, time and effort which he may have put into building up the level of milk production on which the quota is based. Tenants' representatives argue that this is unfair. Against this, it has to be recognised that landlords' interests have also been directly affected by the introduction of quotas.

I have had intensive discussions about this problem with representatives of both landlords and tenants. It has not proved possible to find an agreed solution. Individual circumstances range from the case where the tenant has started dairying and done everything to build up the enterprise, through to the situation where he has taken over an established dairy farm and let the level of production run down. With the introduction of quotas, tenants' potential profits and landlords' expectation of future rents have both been diminished and there is no ready-made formula to determine their respective rights.

My colleagues and I have decided to introduce a measure of statutory compensation for tenants and I am today tabling amendments to the Agriculture Bill which make provision for this. So far as England and Wales are concerned, the arrangements will be as follows:

Compensation will normally be payable at the end of the tenancy and if there is a statutory succession will be deferred until the end of the chain of such successions.

Tenants will be eligible if they occupy the land to which the tenancy relates when the proposed arrangements come into force and have been allocated quota already. Landlords will be free to recover the payment from incoming tenants who know what they are accepting.

The calculation of compensation will be based upon the concept of a standard quota. This is the quota which a tenant of reasonable competence might have been expected to achieve. Therefore, any quota allocated over this figure will be credited entirely to the tenant. This will recognise the special efforts which some farmers have made in maintaining a high level of milk production and attracting quota.

The standard quota will have been earned both by the tenant and by the landlord. The tenant's share will be based on the value of tenant's improvements and the rent will provide the measure of the landlord's contribution.

If the tenant has less than standard quota, his share of the value will be reduced proportionately. The purpose here is to avoid over-compensating those who failed to maintain, before the introduction of quotas, the level of milk production that might reasonably have been expected.

I have listened carefully to the arguments of all parties and believe that this is as fair an arrangement as can be devised.

Where the landlord and tenant do not agree on the compensation payable, the question will go to arbitration. The amount of compensation will then be a matter for the arbitrator's professional judgment, within the framework of the general rules laid down.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland will be laying comparable amendments in time for consideration in the other place.

Home Grown Cereals Authority

12. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to introduce an increased environmental dimension into the responsibilities of the Home Grown Cereals Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have included a provision in the Agriculture Bill to give statutory backing to the integration of environmental and other objectives into agricultural policy. This will confirm the need, which I already recognise, for environmental concerns to be taken into account in our dealings with the authority.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

13. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to announce his decision on the selection of environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Jopling: We are currently consulting the Countryside Commission and the Nature Conservancy Council over the selection of areas. We expect to receive their final advice by the end of this month. Announcements will be made as soon as possible after that following consultation with the Secretary of State for the Environment and other interested parties.

Intervention Stores

14. Mr. Strang asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received that the addresses of stores holding surplus food financed by the Intervention Board should be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of requests from hon. Members and members of the public. In reply I have explained that this information is restricted on grounds of commercial confidence.

EC Price Review

15. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in the EEC discussions on the price review; and if he will make a statement.

17. Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about negotiations relating to agricultural prices following the meeting of the European Council of Agriculture Ministers scheduled for 24 March.

Mr. Jopling: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan) on 26 March.

Confectionery Industry

16. Mr. Gregory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what aspects of the confectionery industry he answers parliamentary questions.

Mrs. Fenner: My right hon. Friend is responsible for questions relating to his sponsorship of the confectionery industry, including product labelling and compositional standards.

Outgoers Scheme

18. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further progress he has made in allocating compensation between landlord and tenant under the European Economic Community outgoers scheme for dairy farmers.

Mr. Livsey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress of his discussions with the Country Landowners Association and farmers organisations concerning the allocation of quotas on the milk outgoers scheme.

25. Sir Hector Monro asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has come to an agreement with the National Farmers Union and the Country Landowners Association on the milk outgoers scheme.

Mr. Gummer: We have discussed with the representatives of landlords and tenants how compensation payable under an eventual Community outgoers scheme might be apportioned between landlord and tenant. We have also considered the circumstances in which it might be reasonable for a landlord to withhold his consent to a tenant wishing to enter the scheme. The final outcome will depend on the result of discussions in the Council of Ministers, but I do not consider that the Commission's present proposal balances the interests of landlord and tenant proposals. We shall be seeking during the negotiations to persuade our Community colleagues of the need to amend the proposal so that it allows for the differing land tenure systems in member states.

Fisheries Protection

19. Mr. Torney asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the total boardings of the British fishery protection fleet for the month of January 1986 was on British fishing vessels.

Mr. Gummer: A little under half. Britain is constantly demanding that other countries keep tight control on their own nationals' fishing activities, and therefore we have a duty to set a good example.

Farmers (Less-favoured and Marginal Areas)

20. Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new proposals he has received from the European Commission under the structures and less-favoured areas directives to enhance the incomes of farmers in less-favoured and marginal areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The Commission is expected to publish a new package of structures measures shortly.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

21. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has sought from the Nature Conservancy Council while reviewing the hill livestock compensatory allowances.

Mr. Gummer: The Nature Conservancy Council was one of the organisations consulted about the Government's proposals for giving effect to the new European Community structures regulation (797/85) under which the hill livestock compensatory allowances are paid. In so far as the Council's comments related to the HLCAs, these were taken into account in the review which preceded the determination of the 1968 rates, the outcome of which my right hon. Friend announced on 28 November 1985.

Farm Woodlands

22. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to implement the findings resulting from his consultations on farm woodlands.

Mrs. Fenner: My right hon. Friends are considering the very full, detailed and largely positive responses which we received on our consultation paper at the end of last year. Developments in the wider context also need to be taken into account, in particular the EC Commission's discussion paper on Community action in the forestry sector which deals with some of the issues covered in the "Woodland as a Farm Crop" report.

Sea Fish Industry Authority (Grants)

26. Mr. Weetch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of Sea Fish Industry Authority grants is allocated to English and Welsh ports.

Mr. Gummer: As I said in reply to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Dr. Thomas) on 6 March, at column 259, these grants are not proportionally allocated but are available for approved projects throughout the United Kingdom. In the financial year 1985-86 a total of 682 projects in England and Wales were approved, and this represents 42 per cent. of the total.

Falkland Islands

27. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to make any alteration to the incentives available to United Kingdom fishing vessels to fish in the waters around the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Government will be seeking the views of the United Kingdom fishing industry on whether the Community incentive to those embarking on joint ventures or exploratory voyages which are available under regulation 2909/83 should continue unaltered beyond the end of this year.

Cereals

28. Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the scale of the price cut he proposed on 24 February for cereals under the common agricultural policy, in order to reduce surplus production.

Mr. Jopling: As I told the House on 10 March, I am pressing for a price cut of 3 per cent. in place of the Commission's proposed co-responsibility levy. This is in the context of a range of measures proposed by the Commission that would indirectly reduce cereal prices by considerably more.

Agricultural Development and Advisory Service

29. Mr. Clelland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what current responsibility the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service has for giving conservation advice to farmers.

Mrs. Fenner: Under section 41(1) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 we are required to make provision for advice on the conservation and enhancement of the natural beauty and amenity of the countryside to be given free of charge to persons carrying on agricultural businesses. This advice is provided by the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service.

In addition, section 11 of the Countryside Act 1968 imposes on Ministers and Government Departments a general duty to have regard to the desirability of conserving the natural beauty and amenity of the countryside. The Agricultural Development and Advisory Service is required to have this duty in mind when giving advice to farmers.

Sheepmeat

30. Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he is having in the Council of Agriculture Ministers of the European Economic Community in respect of the future of the sheepmeat producing sector of the agriculture industry.

Mr. Gummer: In the Council discussions of the Commission's proposals for this year's price fixing I have made it clear that we are opposed to the proposal that eligibility for sheep annual premium should be restricted to the first 500 ewes in any flock (or 1,000 in the less-favoured areas) which would not only unfairly discriminate against the United Kingdom, but would tend to penalise efficiency and inhibit progress towards structural improvements within the Community. I have also expressed our opposition to the proposal to amalgamate Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland into one region for the purposes of the regime.

Milk Marketing Board

31. Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is yet in a position to say what plans the Government have for the future of the Milk Marketing Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: As indicated in my right hon. Friend's reply of 28 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Wantage (Mr. Jackson), we have received the management consultant's report on Dairy Crest, the Milk Marketing Board's commercial arm. We are still discussing the consultants' findings with interested parties and an announcement will be made in due course.

Herds and Flocks (Disease Surveillance)

Sir David Price asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what effects he estimates the reductions of staff and funding in the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service, the State Veterinary Service and the Veterinary Investigation Service will have upon the level of disease surveillance of Britain's animal herds and flocks.

Mrs. Fenner: The overall economies and post losses in the Agricultrual Development and Advisory Service which my right hon. Friend the Minister announced on 27 February 1986 are not such as to call into question the viability of present policies on the prevention and eradication of the major animal diseases.

Liverpool Bay (Mercury Levels)

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to seek to ensure that mercury levels in Liverpool Bay fish are held within the European Economic Community's environmental quality standard; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 17 February 1986, at column 3.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Derelict Housing

Mr. Budgen asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy in relation to derelict flats and other similar single-use units built by the Housing Executive in the 1960s which have proven to be unsuitable in design, materials and method of construction; whether that policy has recently been changed or modified; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Proposals for dealing with unoccupied Housing Executive dwellings of whatever type, age or condition are considered on their individual merits by the Housing Executive and by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland where Departmental approval is necessary. In considering individual cases a full range of options is examined including rehabilitation, disposal by sale to the private sector or a housing association or, as a last resort, demolition.

Training Centres

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many of the chief instructors employed within Government training centres are Catholics; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many of the seven assistant managers employed within Government training centres at TS03 grade are Catholics; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many of the managers and assistant managers employed at TS01 and TS02 grades within Government training centres are Catholics; and if he will make a statement;

(4) how many of those promoted to the rank of chief instructor within Government training centres at the last promotion boards were Catholics; and if he will make a statement;

(5) how many of the six senior posts in the Newry Government training centre are held by Catholics; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Boyson: Information on the religious affiliation of non-industrial staff in Northern Ireland Civil Service was collected last year to enable equality of opportunity to be monitored. I shall be considering, in accordance with the code of practice agreed with the trade unions, how far the data should be disaggregated to provide information on groups such as the staff of Government training centres.

I would ask the hon. Gentleman to await the publication of the first monitoring report which I expect to be available before the summer recess.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers of each rank have applied for transfer from the Royal Ulster Constabulary, or for early retirement, since November 1985.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to establish which Ministers in his Department take part in radio and television programmes relating to current Government policy towards the Anglo-Irish agreement; and how many Ministers in his Department have taken part in such programmes in the last three weeks and how frequently.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the level of fees applicable in Great Britain to the holding of firearms in comparison with what is proposed for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 39-40]: Firearms fees payable in Great Britain are:

(a)	For the issue of a firearm certificate	25
(b)	For the renewal, variation or replacement of a firearm certificate	20
(c)	For the issue of a shotgun certificate	12
(d)	For the renewal or replacement of a shotgun certificate	8
(e)	For registration as a firearms dealer	58
(f)	For renewal of registration as a firearms dealer	36

In Northern Ireland, a firearm certificate is required before any firearm may be held and the scale of fees, which was introduced with effect from 1 January 1986, is:

(a)	For the issue of a firearms certificate	33
(b)	For the renewal, variation or replacement of a firearm certificate	21
(c)	For registration as a firearms dealer	126
(d)	For renewal of registration as a firearms dealer	41

SOCIAL SERVICES

Food (Irradiation)

Mr. Dorrell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is yet in a position to publish the report on the safety and wholesomeness of irradiated foods by the advisory committee on irradiated and novel foods; and if he will make a statement.

32. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a further statement on his consideration of proposals to seek to change the law relating to irradiation of food.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods, chaired by Sir Arnold Burgen, has presented to Health and Agriculture Ministers its "Report on the Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods". I should like to place on record our appreciation of the thorough reviews which have been carried out by the advisory committee, by those specialist bodies which it consulted, and by the Food Advisory Committee which dealt with the labelling aspects of irradiated foods.

The report advises that ionising irradiation up to an overall average dose of 10 kilogray, correctly applied, provides an efficacious food preservation treatment which will not lead to a significant change in the natural radioactivity of the food or prejudice the safety and wholesomeness of the food; that there is no justification on public health grounds for the process not to be permitted within the dose range advised; and that the benefits offered by the process present strong grounds for a general clearance to be granted to this extent. The Food Advisory Committee recommends that irradiated foods and food containing irradiated ingredients should be clearly indicated as such throughout manufacture and at the point of sale.

My colleagues and I have decided that, in order to stimulate public debate on the subject, the report should be published. Copies are available from Her Majesty's Stationery Office and booksellers from today (price £4·50). A copy has been placed in the Library of the House. Interested organisations and individuals wishing to make comments on the report should send them in writing to my Department to arrive not later than the end of July. Comments received will be taken fully into account when Ministers formally consider the advice contained in the report.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received about the irradiation of food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: A few representations about food irradiation have been received recently from hon. Members, organisations and members of the public. These and the representations to be received on the "Report on the Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods," the publication of which I announced today will be fully considered in the light of the report.

Schoolchildren (Diet)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to publish the report on the dietary intake of schoolchildren.

Mr. Whitney: A preliminary report of the nutritional findings of the survey is being published today. Copies have been placed in the Library, and are available from the Department (price £4·50). The large amount of dietary data collected in the survey has still to be fully analysed and the results interpreted before a final report can be produced.

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to reply to the question asked by the hon. Member for Swindon on 17 February on the publication of the report on the dietary intake of schoolchildren.

Mr. Whitney: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish an analysis indicating, in relation to the decrease in staff of his Department between 1979 and 1985, how this loss of posts was distributed between (a) his Department's central offices and local offices and (b) between the various standard regions in which these local offices are located; and if he will indicate what changes in functions or services there have been in his Department as a result of this loss of jobs.

Mr. Newton: Changes in the staffing levels in the Department from 1979 to 1985 indicating the distribution between central and local offices and between the various regions in which local offices are located are set out in the following tables.

Notes:

(1) All figures are as at 1 April for each year shown, rounded to nearest whole-time equivalent.

(2) A major restructuring of the regional organisation which included boundary changes and a reduction in the number of regions from 12 to seven took place during 1982-83. The figures in tables 2 and 3 are therefore not wholly and directly comparable with each other.

Staffing levels are kept under continuous review so that resources available match the requirements of the work load. The main factors which influenced staffing levels between 1979 and 1985 were changes in the levels of claims to social security benefits, improvements in procedural and organisational efficiency including computerisation, the results of periodic staff inspections, changes in the structure of benefits and for 1985 the recovery work arising from an industrial dispute at Newcastle central office. The implementation of statutory sick pay and housing benefit in April 1983 together with the introduction of postal claim forms represent the main changes in functions and services from which staff savings arose.

London South Region

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table setting out the percentage annual turnover of staff in each office of his Department located in the London south region for the latest year for which figures are available and the three previous years.

Mr. Major: The detailed information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The following is the breakdown of percentage of total staff in the grades of clerical assistant, local officer I and local officer II who left the Department or the London south region (including those who retired) by office, for the year ending 30 September 1985, and a regional summary of the percentage of leavers in the same grades for the three years 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Autistic Children (Mobility Allowance)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to amend regulation 3 of the Mobility Allowance Regulations (SI No. 1573, 1975, as amended) following recent cases involving severely autistic children seeking mobility allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have no plans to do so. Entitlement to mobility allowance is related to walking ability and not to specific disabilities. Recent decisions by the House of Lords and a tribunal of social security commissioners have clarified the law in various respects and should help the adjudicating authorities in their assessment of walking ability.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to seek to amend section 6 of the Supplementary Benefits Act 1976 to allow a school leaver to claim supplementary benefit for the initial period of first employment, for which remuneration is paid, retrospectively.

Mr. Newton: A young person cannot receive supplementary benefit in his own right until fixed dates at the end of the holiday following the term in which his non-advanced education was completed. We have at present no plans to amend the legislation governing the supplementary benefit entitlement of school leavers.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many supplementary benefit appeals are outstanding in the Merseyside region; to what extent the number of tribunal sittings has increased; and if he will make a statement on the current position.

Mr. Major: At the end of March 1985, the latest date for which national statistics are available, there were 5,216 supplementary benefit appeals in the north-western region which had been lodged but not yet heard by a tribunal. The local DHSS offices had forwarded submissions to the tribunal clerk in respect of 3,854 of these appeals. I understand that since then the number of tribunal sittings has been increased and are now running at some 130 sittings a week in the region. The president of Social Security Appeal Tribunals is responsible for the administration of these tribunals, and any further information may be obtained from his office.

Family Credit

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will itemise the extra work projected to fall on employers as a result of the introduction of family credit.

Mr. Newton: Any extra work falling on employers will be broadly as follows:

1. Providing information to DHSS about earnings, when a claim is made for family credit. Such inquiries are already made in the vast majority of claims under the existing family income supplement scheme.

2. Paying the family credit by adding it to net wages and including it in the pay packet. DHSS will deal with the claims and will notify employers who is to be paid, the weekly amount, and for what period.

3. Obtaining reimbursement of the family credit paid out by making appropriate recoveries, each month, from the total amount of national insurance contributions collected from all the employees. Employers already use this arrangement to recoup payments of statutory sick pay.

4. Stopping payment of family credit if the payee leaves the employment before the end of the period of entitlement, and notifying DHSS of this. Withholding payment for particular weeks in certain situations where the payee is absent from work.

5. Record keeping. Family Credit will become a further item to be shown on deduction records and in the associated returns made to the Collector of Taxes.

Nurse Practitioners

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the roles and responsibilities being adopted by nurse practitioners; and what guidance his Department has given on duties undertaken by nurse practitioners.

Mr. Hayhoe: The concept of a nurse practitioner performing an extended nursing role originated in the United States of America, but this form of specialisation is rare in the United Kingdom. No guidance has been issued by my Department.

The report of the community nursing review which is to be issued shortly will provide the opportunity for a full discussion on the best way of using nursing skills within the community.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pharmaceutical dispensing errors have occurred since the introduction of the limited list of products on the list arising from confusion over the names of drugs.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am not aware of any such errors.

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in what circumstances the regulations governing the limited list of drugs permit general practitioners to use a brand name on a prescription form; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Drugs are available on the National Health Service by their brand names if those names are not shown in schedules 3A and 3B to the National Health Service (General Medical and Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 1974 (as amended) which have been compiled on the basis of expert medical and pharmaceutical advice.

Prescription Charges

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will list the total number of prescriptions filled in each of the last four years; and set out those categories of persons who are exempt from paying prescription charges and analysing in percentage terms the number of prescriptions where no contribution to prescription charges is made by the patient in the exempted categories.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested for the last four years is in the following tables.

Table 1
Percentage of all items supplied to exempt categories

	1985 (January-September)	1984	1983	1982
Number of items dispensed (millions)	237	320	315	311
Percentage of items that are exempt	73	70	70	68
Women aged 60 or over, men aged 65 or over	40	38	37	36
Under age 16	12	12	12	13
DHSS exempt	10	10	9	8
FPC exempt	5	5	5	5
War/Service pensioners	*	*	*	*
No declaration or declaration not specific	6	5	6	5

Notes:

(i) * Figure would be less than ½ per cent.
(ii) Percentages are based on sample data and rounded to the nearest figure where appropriate.
(iii) No charge contraceptives are not included; these account for around another 2 per cent. of all items.
(iv) The category "FPC Exempt" covers those exempt on medical grounds, pregnant women and women who have had a child within the preceding 12 months;
(v) The category "DHSS exempt" includes people receiving supplementary benefit or family income supplement and their dependants and people exempt on low income grounds.
(vi) Another 5 to 6 per cent. of all items go to holders of "Season Tickets" (prescription pre-payment certificates).

Table 2

Exemptions from prescription charges is available to people in the following categories. The list includes those medical conditions which confer entitlement to exemption.

1. Children under 16.
2. Men aged 65 or over and women aged 60 or over.
3. Pregnant women or women who have had a baby within the preceding 12 months.
4. People who get supplementary benefit, family income supplement or housing benefit supplement, their partners and dependants.
5. War or service pensioners (for items for their accepted disablement only).
6. People who qualify on low income grounds, their partners and dependants.
7. People who have—
   i. a permanent fistula (including caecostomy, colostomy, laryngostomy or ileostomy) requiring continuous surgical dressing or an appliance;
   ii. one of the following disorders for which specific substitution therapy is essential:
   Addison's disease and other forms of hypoadrenalism, diabetes insipidus and other forms of hypopituitarism, diabetes mellitus,
   hypoparathyroidism,
   myasthenia gravis,
   myxoedema;
   iii. epilepsy requiring continuous anti-convulsive therapy;
   iv. a continuing physical disability which prevents the patient from leaving his residence without the help of another person.

Opren

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library a copy of CSMF06S Adverse Reactions on Opren.

Mr. Hayhoe: Yes. I have included with it a copy of a note from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on points which must be taken into account when considering the FO6s computer print out.

Medicinal Products (Tests)

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will set down the criteria used to test the safety, efficacy and quality of medicinal products under section 19 of the Medicines Act 1968.

Mr. Hayhoe: The licensing authority does not carry out tests of samples in connection with applications for medicinal product licences but requires applicants to submit data on the safety, efficacy and quality of their products in accordance with comprehensive guide lines. These data are evaluated by the licensing authority. It is not possible to set down precise criteria for this evaluation as they will depend on proposed use and and the conditions they are intended to treat, ranging from minor ailments to life-threatening conditions. In reaching decisions on particular applications, the licensing authority is able to call upon the advice of one of the specialist advisory committees established under section 4 of the Medicines Act.

Aristolochia

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the homeopathic remedy Aristolochia was refused a licence at a dilution of 1 part in 1 million.

Mr. Whitney: There is clear evidence that Aristolochia can cause cancer in animals, even in high dilutions of one part in a million. The Medicines Commission carefully considered the available evidence and concluded that the potential risks of Aristolochia were such that dilutions of one part in a million posed a significant safety hazard. This safety hazard had to be set against the lack of proven evidence of benefit for these products. For these reasons the Department decided that Medicines Act product licences should be refused for all strengths except those of a very much higher dilution.

NHS Hospitals (Smoking Restrictions)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether there are any areas utilised by patients in National Health Service hospitals in which there are no restrictions on smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: It is for health authorities to establish their own policies about smoking in their hospitals. Guidance issued last year by the Department suggests that non-smoking should be normal practice on health service premises, but that if smoking areas are permitted they should be arranged so that non-smoking patients, staff and visitors can be assured a smoke-free environment.

Benefits

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much a single 22-year-old male (a) living with parents and (b) living in a council flat received in benefit if he was unemployed on 1 April in each year between 1979 and 1986; and if he will express these payments in real terms, taking 100 as the base for 1 April 1979.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has so far received in support of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill; how many he has received opposing the Bill; and how many he has received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the Government's proposed amendments to the Bill.

Mr. Hayhoe: About 200 letters have been received about the Bill. About 100 of these were sent in response to the Government's consultation paper about possible amendments, and many expressed no specific view on the provisions of the Bill as it stands. In any case, correspondents were selective in their comments and it is not possible to draw a clear distinction between those supporting and those opposing either the Bill or the Government's proposals as a whole. Of those who commented on the consultation paper, however, most expressed reservations about some or all of the Government's proposals for amendments. A number of the points made have been taken into account in the Government amendments which have now been tabled, and others are still under consideration.

Cancer

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the cancer rates for each of the health authority areas in the United Kingdom (a) by age, (b) by sex and (c) by type of cancer.

Mr. Hayhoe: The latest available information on registrations of newly diagnosed cases of cancer in England and Wales is published in "Cancer Statistics: registrations, England and Wales, 1982, Series MB1 Number 14", a copy of which is in the Library. This gives registration rates per 100,000 population and (for ages under 75) standardised registration ratios for specific sites of cancer for regional health authorities. These data are not published by age or for smaller health areas; such data could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Data on cancer registrations in Scotland are published in "Scottish Health Statistics 1984", a copy of which is in the Library. This publication gives cancer registration data for specific sites of cancer, for 1982 for Scotland as a whole.

Information on cancer registrations in Northern Ireland is not published.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about action taken by local authorities in Tyne and Wear on cases referred to them in accordance with his Department's circular S12/85 on substandard board and lodging accommodation during the period September 1985 to March 1986.

Mr. Newton: I understand that local authorities in the Tyne and Wear area have taken action in one case following reference to them in accordance with the Department's circular S12/85 during the period of September 1985 to March 1986. The details of any such action are, of course, the responsibility of the local authority concerned—Newcastle city council—and the hon. Member may therefore wish to consult it directly.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons aged under 26 years have now been moved on (i) after two weeks, (ii) after four weeks and (iii) after eight weeks (a) nationally and (b) by each region, under the board and lodging regulations since April 1985.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1986, c. 122-23]: I assume the hon. Member is referring to those boarders who are subject to a reduction in benefit after a given period: it does not follow that they have moved. Information is not available in the form requested. The number of ordinary boarders in the relevant age groups during the period April to July 1985 drawn from special returns submitted by local offices is set out in the table. It is estimated that about a quarter of the under 26-year-olds overall were exempt from the restrictions on payment as a boarder. Similar special returns have not been maintained for later periods.

Cases subject to the Board and Lodging Regulations between 29 April and 30 July 1985

Region	Total cases
London North	11,600
London South	13,300
Wales and South West	12,000
Midlands	9,200
North West	6,000
North East	6,400
Scotland	5,900
TOTAL	64,300

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hotels, bed and breakfast establishments or other board and lodging establishments are known to exist within the area of each Department of Health and Social Security office operating the two-, four- or eight-week rules under the board and lodging regulations, and, of these, how many in each case make charges currently within the Department of Health and Social Security board and lodging limits and how many outside it by (i) less than £5 per week, (ii) £5 to £10 per week, (iii) £10 to £20 per week, (iv) £20 to £40 per week and (v) more than £40 per week.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 9 April 1986, c. 122-23]: I regret that comprehensive information on the number and charges of board and lodging establishments in each local social security office area is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The charges made in a sample of different types of boarder accommodation throughout the country are currently being analysed as part of the review of board and lodging limits.

Spastic Children (Education)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what active measures he is taking to introduce the Peto's conductive education system for spastic children and to increase collaboration in this field between the British and Hungarian National Health Service administrations.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has received an application from the Spastics Society for funds to support a study of current provision of conductive education and an evaluation of the implications of wider development of the system in this country. Our officials and officials from the Department of Education and Science will be discussing this application with the Spastics Society in the near future. If this project comes to fruition, we would then consider in the light of the outcome what, if any, steps were desirable to develop conductive education further in this country.

Housewives (Invalidity Benefits)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many disabled married women became entitled to receive the housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension in each of the years since its inception; and how many of these are currently in receipt of severe disablement allowance;

(2) how many disabled married women have become entitled to receive the severe disablement allowance since November 1984 who did not have reserved rights because of their entitlement to the housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension before that date.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his reply of 11 December 1984, Official Report, columns 456-8, to show for 1985-86 the number of people who paid tax at the standard rate and each of the higher rate bands.

Mr. Moore: The information is as follows. The figures relate to tax units, that is counting married couples as one. Estimates for 1983-84 onwards are provisional. Due to rounding, the individual figures in the table do not in all cases sum to the total.

Taxpayers

Thousands

Rate per cent.*	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
30	19,800	19,600	19,500	19,300
40	435	355	350	390
45	245	245	250	270
50	155	140	145	160
55	65	55	60	70
60	80	65	75	90
Total	20,800	20,500	20,400	20,300

* Ignoring any liability to investment income surcharge.

Acts (Printing)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average waiting time before the publication of Acts of Parliament after Royal Assent by Her Majesty's Stationery Office; how is the quantity to be published judged; and, when reprinting is required, how long a time elapses before the publication is available to the public.

Mr. Brooke: In 1985 waiting time averaged nine working days. The HMSO decision on the number of copies to be published is based on their experience of sales of similar legislation and of sales of the Bills leading up to the Act. Where demand is outstripping current stocks HMSO aims to obtain reprints before stocks are exhausted so that the Act remains available to the public.

Personal Income

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the latest figures for the personal income per capita before taxation for Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland, for England as a whole, and for each of the standard regions of England.

Mr. MacGregor: The latest estimates were published in table 4 (page 92) of the appendix to the article "Regional Accounts 1984" in the November 1985 issue of Economic Trends (No. 385).

Bankruptcy

Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the number of bankruptcy proceedings instituted through the courts at the request and instigation of the Inland Revenue Department in the last two full years for which figures are available; how many of these actions involved private individuals as opposed to companies; and in how many cases the Inland Revenue applied for compulsory disposal of the taxpayers' matrimonial home.

Mr. Moore: The last two full years for which figures are available are 1984 and 1985. The number of bankruptcy and company winding-up orders obtained by the Inland Revenue was:

	1984	1985
Receiving orders following petition (individuals)	1,099	734
Winding-up orders following petition (companies)	277	263

These figures do not include orders where the Inland Revenue did not institute the proceedings but supported another creditor in his action.

The disposal of the assets of a bankrupt's estate is a matter for the appointed trustee in bankruptcy and the Inland Revenue have no entitlement to apply for disposal of such assets.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his latest estimate of the loss to the Exchequer in each financial year since 1978-79 arising from value added tax evasion; and what has been the size of the staff employed on control duties in each of these years;

(2) if he will estimate the cost of collecting value-added tax in each financial year since 1978-79; and if he will express the cost as a percentage of value added tax revenue raised in each of these years.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Personal Taxation (Gains)

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the gain from all the measures contained in the Budget statements from 1979 to 1986, inclusive, for the top 1 per cent., 5 per cent., 10 per cent., 20 per cent., 50 per cent., and the remaining 50 per cent., of the population; how many taxpayers are in each of these categories; and what has been the gain per taxpayer in each category.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Income Tax

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of reducing the standard rate of income tax to 25 per cent., and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986, column 428]: The direct revenue cost would be about £4·7 billion in a full year at 1986-87 income levels.

Taxation

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will express, in percentage terms, changes in the combined effect of tax and national insurance contributions in 1978-79, and the latest available date, taking 1956-57 tax year as the base for those on two-thirds average earnings, average earnings, twice, five and 10 times average earnings.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 7 March 1986, c. 284]: Information is given in the following tables.

THE ARTS

Music Festivals (London)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Minister for the Arts if he will list all the annual international music festivals held in London.

Mr. Luce: Festivals held on a regular basis are:

The Almeida festival
The BBC Henry Wood promenade concerts
The City of London festival
The Early music centre festival
The English Bach festival
The Spitalfields festival

National Youth Orchestra

Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the financial resources available to the National Youth Orchestra for the forthcoming financial year; and if he will list the representations he has received in respect of the future of the orchestra.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 589]: The amdministrator of the orchestra wrote to me in February to ask for my support, because one of its sponsors had ceased to trade. I have brought the orchestra's difficulties to the attention of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, who provides some funding to the orchestra.

Friday 11 April 1986

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Gerry Gable

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on any action taken by the Metropolitan Police to protect Mr. Gerry Gable of Searchlight magazine in the light of threats to intimidate, kidnap or murder him.

Mr. Giles Shaw: These allegations relate to an incident which occurred in 1984. No direct threats were made against Mr. Gable and in the light of police investigations it was not considered necessary to provide him with personal protection.

Entry Refusals

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people attempting to enter the United Kingdom who were refused entry and detained were subsequently given admission, temporary or otherwise, on production of cash security by themselves or a sponsor in each of the past five years.

Mr. Waddington: On production of cash security, none.

The hon. Member may, however, have in mind the power of an adjudicator to grant bail, on entering into a recognizance, or in Scotland a bail bond, to a person who has been detained pending examination. Statistics of the number of such cases are not maintained.

Prison Officers Houses (Culcheth and Risley)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers' houses there are in Culcheth and Risley area; where they are located; how many are empty and where they are located; how long they have been empty; and what action is being taken in relation to them.

Mr. Mellor: The total stock of prison officers' quarters held by Risley remand centre at the present time numbers 184. These are located at Woolston (five miles from the establishment), Culcheth (two miles), Croft (three miles) and Leigh (seven miles). Forty-nine of these quarters, all located at Culcheth, are currently empty and the bulk of these have been empty for four to five years. Negotiations are in hand to dispose of between 34 and 40 properties to a private developer and the remainder are to be refurbished for use by prison officers posted to Risley. The quarters have not been placed on the market earlier than this for a variety of reasons. Firstly, the prison department had to determine whether any of the properties would be required for staff appointed to the new prison at Thorn Cross. Secondly, it was necessary to await the outcome of negotiations with the Prison Officers' Association on the question of "discount sales" to their members and finally there were problems to overcome concerning the sewage pumping station and the adoption of certain roads on the estate. Now that all these problems appear to have been resolved, the sale of these properties can go ahead.

Water Cannon

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the reply of 27 March, Official Report, column 543, what additives are currently under consideration for use in the two prototype water cannon currently being assessed by the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There are no current plans to use water cannon operationally with or without additives. But as part of the assessment coloured markers are to be added to show water distribution patterns.

Metropolitan Police (Complaints)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 20 March, Official Report, column 270, if he will detail the nature of each successful complaint against the Metropolitan Police involving civil action by the complainant.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Joseph Bennett

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the manner in which court appearances of Mr. Joseph Bennett are timed and arranged;

(2) if he will make it his policy that future appearances in court of Mr. Joseph Bennett are announced in the normal way and arranged for days when the court normally sits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Arrangements for court hearings, including arrangements for public notice of such hearings, are the responsibility of the courts, and it would not be right for my right hon. Friend to intervene in matters of kind.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Social Work Training

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations took place between his Department and the National Advisory Body for Higher Education prior to the guidance issued by the latter to polytechnics and colleges to give courses in social work training low priority status.

Mr. Walden: Pending ministerial decisions on the level of funding for public sector higher education (due later this year) my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State invited NAB to plan on the basis of a range of assumptions about the level of resources likely to be available. The NAB declined to do this, proceeding instead on the basis of a single assumption—initially that the total would be 1 per cent. higher than in 1986-87 and then, in response to a suggestion from my right hon. Friend, that the total might rise by some 3·5 per cent., in line with the forecast GDP deflator.

Using this figure of a 3½ per cent. increase in funding, NAB has argued that intakes should be reduced on average by 7 per cent. in 1987-88 and has instructed its secretariat to discuss possible student target numbers with institutions on that basis. Within the overall reduction of 7 per cent, some programmes have been identified for a relatively greater and other for a relatively smaller reduction than the average. The programme area that includes social work training is among those that would reduce by more than the average.

The assumptions adopted by NAB for its planning exercise, including the categorisation of programmes, have been the subject of discussion by the NAB board, on which officials of the Department and members of Her Majesty's Inspectorate are represented, and by the NAB committee, which I chair as the Department's sole representative. They have not, however, been submitted to my right hon. Friend for his approval. Formal recommendations on the disposition of academic provision in 1987-88 will be formulated by NAB later this year in the light of the resources actually available (to be announced in the autumn) and should be submitted to my right hon. Friend for decision in December 1986.

It will be for institutions, within the target numbers eventually allocated to them for individual programmes, to decide what priority to give to particular courses, including social work training courses.

Schools (Management)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to improve the government and management of schools in England and Wales.

Mr. Dunn: The Education Act 1980 introduced elected parent and teacher governors and provided for school governing bodies generally to be more effective by bringing an end to the previously widespread practice of grouping many schools together under a single governing body. Building on this base, the Education Bill currently before Parliament aims fully to re-establish governing bodies as the force for good in the life of individual schools always intended under the 1944 Act. It proposes to remove the present scope for local education authorities to dominate governing bodies by appointing a majority of the members. Instead there will be a more balanced membership, with a stronger voice for parents. At the same time, the Bill provides a clear framework of functions to enable the governing body to play its full part in the running of its school.

Schools (Examinations System)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to improve the examination system in schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Since 1979, the Government have taken the following initiatives designed to improve the examinations system in schools:

— in 1983 they established the Secondary Examinations Council as a source of independent and authoritative advice on school examinations which is charged inter alia with the tasks of approving syllabuses and monitoring examination standards; — in March 1983 they announced the introduction from September 1985 of the certificate of pre-vocational education as an additional option in the range of courses preparing young people for the world of work. CPVE is available in both schools and colleges.

— in April 1984 they announced their objective to introduce records of achievement for all school leavers by the end of the decade. To that end, they are currently financing nine pilot schemes under the oversight of a national steering committee;

— in June 1984 they announced the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education from September 1986 to replace GCE O-level, CSE and joint 16-plus examinations. The new examination system is designed to support the Government's overall objective of raising all pupils' standards of attainment. All syllabuses and examination procedures will comply with nationally agreed criteria which build upon best practice in present examining;

— in March 1985 they announced the introduction of advanced supplementary levels designed to broaden the education of students taking A-levels. The first courses will begin in September 1987;

— in April 1985 they established the working party on criteria for pre-vocational courses pre-16 under the chairmanship of Mr. R. S. Johnson, director of education, Leeds. It is intended that the resulting criteria will enable SEC to approve and monitor all pre-vocational and vocationally oriented courses offered to pupils in the compulsory years of secondary education;

— in April 1985 they announced that the certificate of extended education and alternative ordinary levels should be replaced by specifically designed GCSE mature syllabuses or, in a few instances, by AS levels where that form of provision is more appropriate;

— in March of this year they announced the reform of A-level grading, based upon recommendations from the SEC, designed to resolve the long-standing problems arising from the narrow range of marks spanning grade C. The new system will be used for the first time in summer 1987 and will be fairer than the existing one.

Core Curriculum

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to promote a core curriculum throughout all secondary schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government's policies for the primary and secondary curriculum are set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469), which also describes the actions taken in pursuit of those policies since 1979.

Science Teaching

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to ensure that science teaching will have potential applications to industry.

Mr. Chris Patten: "The School Curriculum", published in March 1981, announced the Government's objective of securing more effective science teaching in primary schools, and of making the main areas of science a component of the education of all pupils through the first five years of secondary education. The White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) and the policy statement "Science 5-16", published in March 1985 set out the Government's policies for achieving that objective; these emphasise the need for the science curriculum to be relevant, so that what is included is of value to pupils in their adult life.

Science is an aspect of the curriculum in which there is particularly close co-operation between industry and education. The Department of Trade and Industry's Industry education unit seeks to encourage more of the country's young people, including the more able, to develop an interest in manufacturing careers and in the subjects and further and higher education courses that can lead to them; and it grant-aids the Standing Conference on Schools Science and Technology which promotes developments in schools to enhance young people's understanding of science, engineering, industry and technology. The standing conference also sponsors the science and technology regional organisations (SATROS) which promote closer links between schools and the outside world at a local level; the Department of Education and Science funds the post of SATRO national co-ordinator.

Schools (Violence and Disorder)

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what steps he is taking, and what advice he has given to local authorities, to seek to counteract and to minimise violence against teaching staff in maintained schools;

(2) whether he will initiate discussions with the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers to seek to identify measures to minimise violence and disorder in maintained schools in England and Wales;

(3) if he will collect statistics of violent incidents resulting in injuries to teachers arising from violence and disorder in state schools;

(4) if he will make a statement on his policy towards the maintenance of discipline in schools, in the light of the report of the National Association of Schoolmasters and Union of Women Teachers entitled, "Pupil Violence and Serious Disorder in Schools," a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Chris Patten: It is essential that good order is maintained in schools. The Government's White Paper "Better Schools" drew attention to the poor standards of behaviour found in a small minority of schools and urged local education authorities and schools to tackle this problem urgently. My right hon. Friend has frequent meetings with the teachers' associations but, since effective action can only be taken by those responsible at local level, has no plans to convene a meeting with the National Association of Schoolmasters and Union of Women Teachers on this matter, nor to collect national statistics on injuries to teachers. Swift and firm action at local level is preferable to a statistical exercise by central Government.

Huntcliff School, Cleveland

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the decision by the Cleveland county council to resubmit proposals for the closure of Huntcliff school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I understand that the Cleveland local education authority has not yet decided whether to publish proposals for the closure of Huntcliff school. If such proposals are published and subsequently come before my right hon. Friend, he will consider them on their merits in accordance with his powers under section 12 of the Education Act 1980.

Student Grant

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how much of the current student grant is scheduled for purchases of books by students;

(2) what percentage increase is being made in the share of student grants for book purposes in 1986-87.

Mr. Walden: In the current academic year there is a notional sum of £181 within the student grant for books and equipment. The equivalent figure for 1986-87 has not yet been decided. A notional sum for books is not identified separately.

Town Planning

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what effects on the profession of town planning he expects to result from the cuts in town planning education.

Mr. Walden: In 1985 the University Grants Committee, the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education and the Scottish Education Department set up a transbinary town and country planning working group to review the incidence, nature and scale of degree and postgraduate courses in town and country planning in the United Kingdom. The working group's final report has recently been published. It will be considered by the UGC and the NAB, which will in due course advise the Secretary of State for Education and Science on the allocation of resources and student numbers in the universities and the public sector of higher education.

Intakes for 1986 were determined at a level consistent with the maintenance of levels of provision in 1985. No decisions have been taken in relation to provision for town planning education from 1987.

Hungary

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what visits have been made (a) by Ministers and (b) by officials in his Department to Hungary to see conductive education projects in the last five years; what was the outcome in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: No such visits have been made.

Spastics Society (Conductive Education)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what discussions he has had with the Spastics Society about conductive education; what financial support it has (a) asked for and (b) been given for work in this area; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he is taking to evaluate the Hungarian experience of conductive education for mentally and physically handicapped children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: A proposal has been put forward by the Spastics Society for a study of current provision of conductive education in England and Wales and an evaluation of the educational and other implications which would result if the system were to be developed in this country. A meeting to discuss possible central Government funding of this research project is expected to be held in the near future between representatives of the society and officials of the DES and DHSS.

Conductive Education

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children currently receive conductive education in the United Kingdom; what assessment he makes of the total numbers who might be expected to benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Information about children currently in receipt of conductive education is not collected centrally. There is thus no basis on which my right hon. Friend could make a reliable estimate of the total numbers who might be expected to benefit from this method.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he has not hitherto taken steps to introduce further conductive education projects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: It is not the responsibility of my right hon. Friend to initiate developments in particular forms of educational provision. These are essentially matters for decision by local education authorities and individual schools.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will instruct officials in his Department to seek to visit Hungary to study progress being made on conductive education for mentally and physically handicapped children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The need for further information on this method will be taken into account in the course of the consideration currently being given to the Spastics Society's proposed study.

Science Budget

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will respond to the report of the Education, Science and Arts Committee on the science budget published in July 1985.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend hopes to respond to the report around the end of May.

ENERGY

Radioactive Material

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place in the Library copies of the relevant British Nuclear Fuels Ltd., operating instructions for certifying the transfer or diversion of radioactive liquors relating to the discharge made from Sellafield on 23 January.

Mr. Goodlad: I am informed by BNFL that the material discharged on 23 January followed a malfunction in the uranium finishing plant which includes equipment to monitor the amount of uranium in the effluent. I have asked BNFL to provide the hon. Member with an extract of the relevant operating instructions.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place in the Library copies of the accountancy records for the reprocessing batch from which the liquor discharged from Sellafield on 23 January originated.

Mr. Goodlad: No.

Sellafield

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the value to British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. of the uranium contained in the discharge made from Sellafield to the Irish Sea on 23 January.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by BNFL that the material discharged to sea on 23 January had an intrisic uranium value of about £5,000.

WALES

Action on Alcohol Abuse

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has received any application for public funds from Action on Alcohol Abuse; what has been his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The Welsh Office has not received an application for funding from Action on Alcohol Abuse but we do have under consideration an application for grant aid from Alcohol Concern Wales. In addition I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Grist) on 24 March, at column 600-1.

Beef Premium Scheme

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the effect on the stability of beef prices if currently discussed changes in the beef premium scheme are undertaken.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It is not possible to quantify the effect on the stability of beef prices if EC proposals to end the beef premium scheme are implemented.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of farmers in Wales who will be affected by the proposed changes in the beef premium scheme.

Mr. Mark Robinson: All beefl producers in Wales would be affected to some extent by the proposed discontinuation of the beef premium scheme. The June 1985 annual census recorded 11,093 main holdings in Wales with beef cows of which 2,320 were predominantly involved in a beef production enterprise. The Government fully recognise the importance of the beef variable premium scheme to both producers and consumers and will press in the common agricultural policy price negotiations for continuation of the scheme.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the average budgets of community health councils in Wales; and if he will estimate the change in the value of these budget allocations, in real terms, over the last five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The overall allocation for 1986-87 is £550,000 which represents an average budget of £25,000 per community health council in Wales. This provides growth of 7·9 per cent. over the last five years after adjustment for inflation.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

European Community (Spanish Accession)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 8 April what accelerated rate of reduction of import duties is available under the provisions of article 75(4) of the treaty of Spanish accession; how quickly the procedure could reduce duties on frozen vegetables to their previous level if it is invoked; what reply he has received to his representations for activating the clause; and whether he considered requesting that duties be restored to their previous level.

Mrs. Fenner: Article 75(4) of the treaty of accession allows, inter alia, for Spanish import duties on certain products including frozen vegetables from the Ten to be abolished or reduced by management committee procedure, but only if Spain agrees. In principle, action could be taken very quickly, but so far, while the Commission has been sympathetic, Spain has not accepted the case for action. The principal objective must be to place United Kingdom exporters on at least as favourable terms as those in other countries.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 8 April, when the British Government first made representations to the Spanish Government to reduce the duty on frozen vegetables from Britain into Spain to its pre-accession level of 4·1 per cent.; whether the need for urgency to protect jobs was impressed on the Spanish Government; and what reply has been received.

Mrs. Fenner: Representations for a reduction in the Spanish import duty on frozen peas imported from the Ten were made to Spanish officials in Madrid on 3 April. All relevant economic considerations were stressed. No definite explicit reply was received.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 8 April why duty on frozen foods from Britain to Spain was increased by the Spanish treaty of accession; what representations were made to Spain and the Commission by Her Majesty's Government to resist that increase before it was accepted; and what other items covered by that Treaty were also increased in duty.

Mrs. Fenner: For certain products for which Spain had previously applied import restrictions in addition to tariffs, including frozen vegetables, the Common Customs Tariff was adopted as the starting point for tariff dismantlement rather than the rate actually in force before accession. As I previously informed the hon. Member a United Kingdom objection was registered to tariff increases during the accession negoltiations. however, this was not successful. The full list of food items subject to the system described above is set out in Annex VIII to the 1985 treaty of Spanish accession.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the United Kingdom can export frozen peas to Spain under the European Free Trade Association tariff of 4·5 per cent. instead of under the tariff of 15·7 per cent. which applies to fellow European Economic Community members.

Mrs. Fenner: The United Kingdom is not a member of the European Free Trade Association so this possibility does not arise.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the level of British exports of frozen peas, quantity and value, to Spain in each of the last three available years.

Mrs. Fenner: The figures requested are as follows:

Year	Quantity Thousand tonnes	Value £ Thousand
1983	6,604	2,428
1984	5,094	2,237
1985	5,782	2,564

NATIONAL FINANCE

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what records will be kept by the Inland Revenue when personal data are disclosed to it via the non-disclosure provisions of the Data Protection Act; and what written statement will be sent to the data user by the Inland Revenue to show that the disclosure of personal data was by that route.

Mr. Moore: Disclosure to the Inland Revenue may take place if either that Department is shown in the registration entry of a data user as an organisation to which data might be disclosed or the data are exempt from the non-disclosure provisions. It is not intended to retain statistical records of receipts of such data. The data user will be aware of the circumstances under which a disclosure is made.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of the Central Computer Telecommunications Agency regarding the purchase or the receipt of tenders for computers and software from companies which seek to impose extraterritorial controls on the movement and re-sale of their products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his similar question on 8 April at column 95.

Income Tax

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of raising personal tax allowances by 10 per cent., 20 per cent. and 30 per cent. respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986, c. 428]: The direct revenue costs in a full year at 1986-87 income levels would be about £2,150 million, £4,200 million and £6,200 million, respectively.

Structural Funds

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the payments received from the United Kingdom for each of the structural funds from 1975 for each year for (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 605]: The information requested is as follows. Scotland benefits considerably from the European social fund, but the bulk of receipts are in respect of national employment and training schemes and information on them cannot be readily provided on a regional basis.

EC Budget

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the most up-to-date figures for the United Kingdom contribution to the EEC budget in each year from 1975 (a) at current prices and (b) at 1985 prices.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 605]: The information requested is set out in the table. The figure of £1,871 million for 1985 compares with the estimate of £1,212 million given in my reply to the hon. Member on 11 December 1985 at column 653. The figure of £1,871 million is an outturn figure. The main reason why it is higher than the earlier estimate is that most (£493 million) of the 1,000 mecu (£605 million) abatement payable in respect of our excessive net contribution to the 1984 Community budget was received in the first few days of 1986 rather than in December 1985, as assumed in the earlier answer. Further information on the 1985 outturn is contained in my answer of 3 March 1986 at columns 31-2 to the hon. Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden).

Treasury

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his latest estimate of the loss to the Exchequer in each financial year since 1978-79 arising from value added tax evasion; and what has been the size of the staff employed on control duties in each of these years;

(2) if he will estimate the cost of collecting value added tax in each financial year since 1978-79; and if he will express the cost as a percentage of value added tax revenue raised in each of these years.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his replies, 10 April 1986]: By the very nature of tax evasion, it is not possible to give a reliable estimate of the tax lost. Customs and Excise has, however, indicated that undetected underdeclarations of value added tax may total between £300 million and £500 million a year. Given this imprecision, a statistical series of the kind requested would not be meaningful. Details of the staff employed on the collection and control of VAT and of the cost of collection are contained in the table on page 13 of the report of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise for the year ended 31 March 1985. There is a copy in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Chief Planning Adviser

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many candidates from the private sector applied for the post of chief planning adviser in his Department.

Mr. Tracey: Eleven.

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the job specification of the newly-appointed chief planning adviser in his Department.

Mr. Tracey: The Civil Service Commission's recruitment regulations for this post described the job as follows:

The principal function will be assist in the formulation of planning policies and in the review of the planning system, and to bring to those tasks practical experience of land use planning and the operation of the planning system by local planning authorities.

The person appointed will be designated "Chief Planning Adviser" and would have administrative charge of two headquarter divisions (dealing with planning research and information and minerals planning respectively), and of the departmental cartographic services.

Key Departmental tasks in the next two years, where the availability of advice from the Chief Planning Adviser will be of great benefit, will be in the implementation of the new arrangements for planning in Greater London and the metropolitan county areas following the abolition of the Greater London council/metropolitan county councils; and the carrying forward of the Government's further consideration of the planning aspects of the White Paper on deregulation. The Chief Planning Adviser's advice will also be relevant to the implementation of Departmental policies on inner cities, urban renewal and derelict land reclamation.

Chief Planning Inspector

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, what is the job specification of his Department's chief planning inspector.

Mr. Tracey: The chief planning inspector's duties comprise:

—responsibility for the efficient and effective processing of planning appeals made under sections 36 and 37 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 and listed building consent appeals under section 56 of the same Act, including the administration procedures, the arrangements for hearings and site visits, the issue of decision letters where appeals are decided by Inspectors or the submission of reports where jurisdiction rests with the Secretary of State, and work arising from post-decision challenges to planning appeal decisions;

—arrangements for and conduct of public inquiries and site visits for all other casework undertaken by Inspectors and the subsequent submission and content of reports and decision letters. This includes casework under the planning acts (eg enforcement appeals, Section 35 'call-in cases' local plans) housing acts (slum clearance orders), Wildlife and Countryside Act (eg rights of way orders, nature conservation orders), highway acts (eg trunk and classified road schemes);

—setting and maintaining standards of professional conduct for Inspectors, their training and career development;

—contributing to the development and implementation of improved procedures and practice in connection with planning appeals and other casework;

—management of the Inspectorate with a total staff of 373, approximately 50 per cent. of whom are Inspectors and 50 per cent. administrative staff. 10 salaried Inspectors working for the Welsh Office also come under the control of the Chief Planning Inspector. In addition to salaried Inspectors, there are about 200 part time fee-paid Inspectors.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance is given to the planning inspectorate about the need to expedite planning appeals: and what steps are being taken to monitor the performance of individual inspectors in this regard.

Mr. Tracey: The planning inspectorate's first objective is to ensure that planning appeals are dealt with fairly and thoroughly, but as quickly and efficiently as possible. Inspectors are issued with all Governmemt Circulars which stress the need for promptness in dealing with planning applications and appeals. They are fully aware of the need to impose times for handling appeals. However, we continue to seek a significant improvement in overall performance, and in May 1985 set up an efficiency scrutiny to examine ways of accelerating handling times. An action plan will soon be published, in which an objective will be set of reducing median times for handling appeals dealt with by written representations. This median time has already been reduced from 22 weeks in the last quarter of 1984 to 19 weeks in the same period in 1985. By administrative and legislative action, and the introduction of modern technology, the aim is to reduce the median time to 11 weeks by 1988. A complementary study of the handling of appeals dealt with by local inquiries is expected to result in similar improvements in performance.

Individual inspectors' performance is monitored by the scrutiny of weekly returns submitted by every inspector. A computer-based management information system is currently being established which, among other things, will facilitate regular checks on the attainment of pre-set targets by individual inspectors.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the estimated value of the services that will be provided to the London Residuary Body from April 1986 until April 1987 for which his Department receives no money;

(2) what is estimated to be the total cost to the Exchequer of providing goods and services to the London Residuary Body from April 1986 to April 1987.

Mr. Tracey: The Department has provided office furniture on free loan until the end of April 1986. The cost of this loan cannot be quantified. The Property Services Agency provides office accommodation at St. Vincent house, for which the LRB will pay a net rental of £85,000 in 1986-87.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much has been allowed in the budget of the London Residuary Body for consultants' fees associated with the disposal of county hall;

(2) how much has been spent on consultants' fees by the London Residuary Body since its creation; and how many consultants were involved;

(3) what proposals are currently being considered by the London Residuary Body for the removal of Greater London council insignia from buildings, vehicles and publications;

(4) how many staff have given notice of their intention to terminate employment with the London Residuary Body since 1 April;

(5) what arrangements are being made by the London Residuary Body to keep entrances and car parks at county hall free from rubbish and fly-tipping;

(6) how much has been spent by the London Residuary Body in removing the insignia of the Greater London council from county hall; what has been removed; and where the items removed are now located.

Mr. Tracey: These are matters for the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment by what means members of the public may gain information regarding decisions of the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tracey: Subject to statutory requirements, including those governing public access to their annual reports and accounts, it is a matter for residuary bodies to decide the information they make available to members of the public.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what instruction or advice he has issued to the chairman of the London Residuary Body regarding statements by the chairman of a party political nature.

Mr. Tracey: None.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment by what means decisions of the London Residuary Body are conveyed to his Department.

Mr. Tracey: The Department is in regular contact with the London Residuary Body about the discharge of its functions.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what directions he has given to the London Residuary Body since 1 April.

Mr. Tracey: None.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has given any instructions to the London Residuary Body regarding the future of county hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: No such instructions have been given.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the London Residuary Body that no proposals for the disposal of county hall will be accepted if demolition of part or whole of the building is involved.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to appoint further members to the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to make any further appointments to the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment who is responsible for auditing the accounts of the London Residuary Body; and if the accounts will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Tracey: By virtue of section 79 of the Local Government Act 1985 the accounts of each residuary body are required to be audited in accordance with part III of the Local Government Finance Act 1982, that is, by auditors appointed by the Audit Commission. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is required to lay the statement of accounts and any auditor's report before Parliament.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment by what means he intends Parliament to be in a position to scrutinise the affairs of the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will lay before Parliament the annual report and statement of accounts of each residuary body.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if minutes of the London Residuary Body will be made available to Members in the Library.

Mr. Tracey: The availability of its minutes is a matter for the London Residuary Body to decide.

Rate Support Grant (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the exact amount of the rate support grant for Gloucestershire county council in (a) 1985-86 and (b) 1986-87, showing for 1986-87 what it was (i) before and (ii) after the grant recycling.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall answer this question shortly.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will receive a delegation from the new national organisation Britain Against Nuclar Dumping; and if he will delay the proposed special development order until it has had the opportunity to put the case against any such order.

Mr. Waldegrave: I or one of my hon. Friends, will be happy to receive on behalf of my right hon. Friend, a delegation led by the hon. Member, if possible before the SDO is laid before the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of a special development order allowing exploration for nuclear waste dumps on the development and industrial prospects of the areas concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I would not expect geological explorations to have adverse effects on the areas concerned. These works do not commit NIREX or the Government to the development of a disposal facility. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 8 April at column 29.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet in a position to say when he proposes to reply to the report of the Environment Committee on nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government's response to the Environment Committee's Report will be made as soon as possible.

Spectrum Centre, Birchwood, Warrington

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the annual running costs and the debt charges of the Spectrum Centre, Birchwood, Warrington, owned by Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation.

Mr. Tracey: The Spectrum Centre, Birchwood, Warrington is owned leasehold by the Birchwood Project (Warrington) Ltd. The Warrington and Runcorn Development Corporation retains the freehold. My Department has received the published accounts of the company to December 1984 and will shortly receive those to December 1985. We have also received the management accounts for 1985 and budget for 1986. These documents contain details of the annual running costs and debt charges of the Birchwood Project (Warrington) Ltd.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the period allowed to councils to comment on the special development order on nuclear waste dumps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have extended the consultation period by one week, until 18 April.

Local Government Reform (Residuary Bodies)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names of members of each of the residuary bodies following the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Tracey: The information is as follows:

London Residuary Body
Sir Godfrey Taylor (Chairman)
Mr. Alan Blakemore, CBE
Cllr Peter Bowness
Mr. Jack Esling
Mr. Wallace Mackenzie, OBE
Mr. Michael Roberts
Mr. Jack Wolkind, CBE

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Gerry Gable

Mr. Dubs asked the Attorney-General if he will now prosecute those involved in the alleged plan to intimidate, kidnap or murder Mr. Gerry Gable of Searchlight magazine.

The Attorney-General: I understand that the editor of Searchlight magazine was interviewed by police officers in 1984 in response to an approach from him. However, the facts alleged by the editor did not disclose the commission of any criminal offence. If the hon. Member has evidence tending to show the commission of an offence such as is mentioned in the question or any other offence, the proper course is for him to make that evidence available to the police.

Supergrass System (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Soley asked the Attorney-General whether, in the light of the case of Mr. Joseph Bennett, he has any plans to review the supergrass system in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The practice of the Director of Public prosecutions in relation to the evidence of accomplices in criminal trials and the granting of an immunity to accomplices was set out fully in my answer to a question from my hon. and learned Friend, the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer) on 24 October 1983. I see no reason to review the criteria applied, and the practice followed, by the Director of Public Prosecutions described in my answer.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Creation, Cheltenham

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General how many new jobs have been created in the Cheltenham travel-to-work area during the last five years.

Mr. Lang: I regret that the information is not available. Net changes in the numbers of jobs may be calculated by comparing employment figures at different dates, but these are not available for areas smaller than regions except for dates when censuses of employmemt are taken. The latest available figures are from the September 1981 census. More up-to-date employment estimates for travel-to-work areas will become available following publication of the 1984 census of employment results later this year.

MSC Counselling Initiative

Mr. Lord asked the Paymaster General what percentage of those long-term unemployed so far approached under the Manpower Services Commission's counselling initiative have responded to the approach; and what percentage have been placed in one of the various openings available to them under the scheme.

Mr. Lang: Eighty-seven per cent. of those so far approached have responded positively by attending for interview. Of those:

18 per cent. have been submitted to a job;
21 per cent. to a community programme place;
1 per cent. to a voluntary project programme opportunity;
5 per cent. for entry into a Jobclub;

14 per cent. to an opportunity for further training;
14 per cent. to a place upon a restart course;
5 per cent. to an information session about starting their own business under the enterprise allowance scheme;
9 per cent. have been referred to other agencies or to specialist Manpower Services Commission services.

Baking Industry (Working Hours)

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General if he plans to seek to amend or repeal the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Sex Discrimination Bill currently under discussion in the other place contains proposals for the repeal of the Baking Industry (Hours of Work) Act 1954.

European Employment Conference

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Paymaster General if he was invited to participate in the European employment conference taking place in Leeds from 14 to 17 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: No.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the draft recommendation of the Commission of the European Communities on the employment of disabled people in the European Community.

Mr. Lang: The Government welcome the Commission's initiative in this area and believe a recommendation is an appropriate instrument. It supports the idea of a code of practice—an important feature of the Commission's proposals. Many of the proposed measures mirror current United Kingdom provision and practice, and the Government are hopeful that within the next few months agreement on the precise terms of the instrument can be reached between the EC member states.

British Leyland, Bathgate

Mr. Dalyell asked the Paymaster General what facilities his Department is making available to assist in finding employment for those losing their jobs following the rundown of British Leyland, Bathgate.

Mr. Lang: The employment manager responsible for the Lothian and Borders area has contacted the company and made available the full range of services provided by the Manpower Services Commission.

A vacancy and information display has already been set up within the factory and the placing of a staff member in the plant for one half day each week is currently being considered.

Use Classes order

Mr. Mudd asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the results of his consultations on the use classes order.

Mr. Tracey: I have been asked to reply.

We are carefully considering the large number of responses received following publication of the Property Advisory Group sub-group's report on the order. My right hon. Friend is not yet ready to make a statement.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

St. Helena

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in teaching deaf and dumb children on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: A specialist visited St. Helena in June and July 1985 under ODA auspices to identify the needs of such children; to draw up a programme for their education over a one year period in consultation with parents, schools and the hospital, and to provide guidance and training for teachers and parents.

The specialist is visiting the island again at present to review and extend for a further year the programme which has been making encouraging progress.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in improving the water supply on St. Helena; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Early in 1985 a project was approved to provide for the installation of storage reservoirs and distribution facilities at key points on St. Helena both for domestic supplies and irrigation. The project is for completion over a period of four years at an estimated cost of £920,000. Two new reservoirs have already been completed and brought into use, and a third is under construction.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Family Support

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the expected overall net increase in expenditure on income support for families with children as a result of his social security reform proposals (a) including and (b) excluding the November 1985 cut in the real value of child benefit.

Mr. Newton: On the assumptions made in the technical annex, including 20 per cent. contribution towards rates, but not taking account of any proposals for rate reforms, the income support rates illustrated would imply a net increase of some £100 million in weekly expenditure on all families with children compared to present rates of supplementary benefit and weekly additions. Since the actual child benefit in payment is deducted from the supplementary benefit income support scale rates for children, the amount of child benefit makes no difference to such families.

GP Fees

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to adjust general practitioners' consultation fees so as to give greater payment for patients over the age of 65 years.

Mr. Hayhoe: There are no firm plans to increase standard capitation fees for patients over the age of 65 but the relative levels of such fees are under consideration.

District Health Authorities (Red Alerts)

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each district health authority in Great Britain the number of weeks in each of the last five years that each district health authority has issued red alerts within its hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 11 December 1985 at columns 686-87 and to the further replies from my right hon. Friend the Minister for Health on 3 February at columns 86-87.

Information for health authorities in Scotland and in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for those countries.

Nursing Education

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when was the last date by which local health authorities were required to submit consultation responses on the future of nursing education to the National Health Service management board; how many replies have now been received; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities were asked to respond by 15 November 1985 to the National Health Service management board's consultation on the cost and manpower implications of proposals for changes to nurse education and training put forward by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. All 14 Regional Health Authorities have responded with their own views and the collated views of their Districts, and, in addition a number of district health authorities who had been invited to take part in a more detailed costing exercise responded direct.

In its consideration of the responses the management board will have to bear in mind that the proposals will have to be taken within the content of Project 2000, which was set up by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting and which I understand is expected to publish its report shortly.

Night Nursing

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of reference and objectives of his Departmental inquiry into night nursing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The terms of reference of the review of night nursing are:

"To obtain detailed and comprehensive information about the range of night nursing responsibilities/tasks from a sample of general ward-based nursing staff and nurse managers in District General Hospitals, taking into account the night support available from professional and hotel services staff and where appropriate the input of administrative staff.

To submit a report that will provide the first stage of guidance to enable nurse managers to measure the adequacy of resources and the effectiveness of the organisation of those resources.

To identify areas which may require further research."

The Department has for some time been concerned about the lack of objective information about night nursing services. The purpose of the review is to develop a profile of ward-based nursing services at night which could be used as the basis for more substantive research to be directed at the quality of care hospitalised patients receive at night; and to suggest ways in which night nursing services could be improved in terms of the organisation and use of resources in relation to work loads.

Hospital Pharmacists

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why hospital pharmacists do not receive a payment for being on call; if he will now introduce such payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: This is a matter for the pharmaceutical Whitley council. I understand that the management side made a revised pay offer to the Staff Side on 10 April which would encompass on-call duties.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients in each of the last three years were exempted from paying for National Health Service prescriptions.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the average budgets of community health councils in each of the English health regions; and if he will estimate the change in the value of these budget allocations, in real terms, over the last five years.

Mr. Hayhoe: The available information on community health council expenditure is set out in the following table. It is not possible to provide comparable data for the years prior to 1982-83 because of the changes in health authority and community health council boundaries in 1982.

Community Health Council Expenditure

Family and Child Department, Tavistock Institute

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will ensure the funding of the family and child department of the Tavistock Institute, London NW6; and if he will make a statement about his policy towards its future.

Mr. Whitney: Hampstead health authority is responsible for funding the Tavistock clinic and for the allocation of resources between its various departments. Following expressions of concern from the District about the present funding arrangement, we commissioned an independent report on the role of the clinic as a whole to form the basis of any decisions on changes to the future level or source of funding. The report is currently the subject of consultation with relevant bodies and we shall be considering the results shortly.

NHS (Administrative and Clerical Pay)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to authorise the management side of the Administrative and Clerical Whitley Council to make an offer on pay operative from 1 April.

Mr. Hayhoe: Negotiations are a matter for the Whitley council and it is for the management side to determine when it is in a position to make offers.

School Leavers (Benefits)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has taken any action to inform Easter school leavers of their possible changed entitlement to benefit in the current year; and if he will mount a publicity campaign to this effect.

Mr. Newton: The question of a school leaver's entitlement to supplementary benefit remains to be decided by the independent adjudicating authorities on the facts of the individual case. A social security commissioners' decision in March 1985 indicated that in some circumstances a school leaver with exams to take might be entitled to benefit. Leaflet FB20 gives advice to school leavers on how to claim benefit, and young people under 18 are required to register with the careers service, whose officers are aware of the benefit position and will refer them to DHSS local offices for advice. We believe that adequate information is available by these means.

Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate in each case the occupation and political allegiance where known of the new district health authority chairmen, a list of whom he has placed in the Library.

Mr. Hayhoe: Chairmen of health authorities are appointed for their personal qualities, not because of any position they may hold nor by virtue of political considerations. Political affiliations may be known in some cases but that information is not specifically sought. Similarly, no attempt is made to refine or update any occupational details provided. I regret therefore that the information sought by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Medroxyprogesterone Acetate

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will now collect information on the numbers of girls in the care of local authorities being prescribed Medroxyprogesterone acetate.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have no plans to collect such information.

DEFENCE

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling university.

Mr. Norman Lamont: To the best of our knowledge, no.

Microlight Aircraft

Viscount Cranborne asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has any plans to train the Territorial Army to operate flex-wing microlight aircraft in support of the roles for which it was responsible in Exercise Brave Defender;

(2) if he has any plans to replace helicopters with flex-wing micro light aircraft in visual reconnaissance on border patrols in Northern Ireland and perimeter patrols at cruise missile bases in England;

(3) if he has any plans to assess the potential contribution of flex-wing microlight aircraft flown by infantrymen to essential reconnaissance in support of rear area security in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's central region;

(4) whether he has any plans to assess over the past two years the role of flex-wing microlight aircraft in the deployment of man-portable anti-tank guided weapons in manoeuvre warfare;

(5) whether he has any plans to use flex-wing microlight aircraft as a replacement for light helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft in the armed services.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

RIMPAC Exercise

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the fire on board HMS Illustrious will restrict the Royal Navy's participation in the US Navy's RIMPAC exercise; and whether the British contingent will now take part in the bombing and shelling of Kaho'olawe;

(2) whether, in view of the request by the Hawaiian State Government to the United States Government to cease all bombing and shelling of Kaho'olawe, he will ensure that the British contingent does not take part in this element of the RIMPAC exercise.

Mr. Stanley: Following the fire on board, HMS Illustrious has been withdrawn from exercise RIMPAC 86. However, Her Majesty's Ships Beaver, Manchester and Amazon and the RFA's Olmeda, Bayleaf and Fort Grange will, on present plans, continue to take part. The Royal Navy will not be taking part in the shelling of land targets during RIMPAC 86.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the role of Royal Fleet Auxiliary Fort Grange in the US Navy's RIMPAC exercise.

Mr. Stanley: RFA Fort Grange is one the ships taking part in the Royal Navy task group deployment GLOBAL 86, all of which will, on present plans, be taking part in exercise RIMPAC 86 also.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether, in view of the decisions by Australia and New Zealand in 1982 and 1984, and Japan in 1984, not to take part in the bombing and shelling of Kaho'olawe during the US Navy's RIMPAC exercise, he is satisfied that British participation will have no adverse consequences for relationships with these countries and co-operation with them.

Mr. Stanley: Yes.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence on which previous occasions the Royal Navy has participated in the United States Navy's RIMPAC exercise in the Pacific ocean.

Mr. Stanley: None.

GLOBAL '86

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the deployment of her Majesty's ships taking part in GLOBAL '86 to the Pacific will have on the United Kingdom's commitment to the north Atlantic; and whether North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies have made any representations on this matter.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 21 February at column 378. I am not aware of any such representations.

THE ARTS

South Bank Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts how much is being spent by the South Bank board on the South Bank celebrations to commemorate 35 years of music at the Royal Festival hall.

Mr. Luce: The figure is £46,000 offset by income.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, what proposals the South Bank board has for Bookspace.

Mr. Luce: The South Bank board will be looking at the possible relocation of Bookspace in its plans for increasing the presence of literature on the South Bank.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what proposals the South Bank board has for the bust of Nelson Mandela outside the Royal Festival hall.

Mr. Luce: The proposal is for the bust to remain in its present location.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he intends to appoint any further members to the South Bank board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The composition of the South Bank board remains open for consideration.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts to which Arts Council body the South Bank board reports; how this is done; and whether the board's decisions are subject to any sanctions.

Mr. Luce: The chairman of the South Bank board is a member of the Arts Council and reports to his colleagues. In addition, the minutes of the South Bank board are circulated to the council, which has delegated authority to the board in respect of the day-to-day running of the South Bank.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what dates during the next 12 months are designated for meetings of the South Bank board.

Mr. Luce: A forward schedule of meetings for the next 12 months is currently being prepared.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if minutes of the South Bank board will be made available to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Yes. Under existing arrangements such material would normally be released after three years.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if the meetings of the South Bank board will be open to the press and the public.

Mr. Luce: Meetings of committees of the Arts Council are not normally open to the public.

South Bank Sounds

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if it is the intention of the South Bank board to continue the productions of South Bank Sounds for the visually handicapped.

Mr. Luce: I understand that the South Bank board will continue productions for the visually handicapped.

Greater London Council (Insignia)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what was the cost of removing the insignia of the Greater London council from the South Bank concert halls; what was removed; and where the items removed are now located.

Mr. Luce: The cost of removing GLC insignia from the South Bank concert halls was £3,164.

The insignia included identification signs and crests from the exterior of the buildings, and GLC letters and crests from the auditoria and foyers of the concert halls.

The insignia are in storage at the South Bank centre and at the offices of the removal contractor.

South Bank Concert Halls (Staff)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts how many staff now working in the South Bank concert halls previously worked for the Greater London council.

Mr. Luce: Currently 113 ex-Greater London council staff are employed by the South Bank concert halls.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to the answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 86, when the hon. Member for Newham, North-West can expect an answer to his question on the number of staff from the South Bank concert halls who failed to secure employment in the halls following abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply within the next two weeks.

Goya Portrait (Auction)

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether, in the light of the representations made by the Spanish Government, he has communicated with Messrs. Christie's with regard to its auction sale for Friday 11 April in respect of Goya's portrait of the Marquesa de Santa Cruz; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Yes. Christie's has kept me informed of developments. Agreement has been reached that the painting will be acquired by the Kingdom of Spain. It will therefore not be auctioned.

Jubilee Gardens

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when he expects the lease to be agreed between the London Residuary Body and the South Bank Board in respect of Jubilee gardens.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 590.]: The intention is that the South Bank board will hold Jubilee gardens under an agency agreement, and it is expected that that agreement will be signed shortly.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members have resigned from the Royal Ulster Constabulary since 15 November 1985.

Mr. Scott: Sixty-three members have resigned from the Royal Ulster Constabulary and full-time reserve during the period from 15 November 1985 to 6 April 1986.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Military Forces (Europe)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, further to the answer of 19 February to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn, Official Report, column 172, he will state when it is expected that drafting of the proposals for confidence-building measures in military activities will be complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We hope that a worthwhile agreement covering the exchange of information, annual forecasts, notification and observation of military activities, and adequate verification procedures covering these points, will have been concluded by the time the Stockholm conference adjourns on 19 September.

We shall be working hard for such a result when the next session of the conference opens on 15 April.

Single European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the procedures under which those parts of the Single European Act relating to co-operation in the field of foreign policy will be implemented.

Mrs. Chalker: The parts of the Single European Act relating to co-operation in the field of foreign policy will be implemented once the Act has been ratified by the member states of the EC and has entered into force. The procedures of European political co-operation will remain, as they are now, entirely separate from the Community treaties. As article 1 of the Single European Act makes clear the existing procedures will be confirmed and supplemented by the provisions in title III.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the dates on which each member state of the European Economic Community signed the Single European Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom signed the Single European Act on 17 February 1986. Denmark, Greece and Italy signed it on 28 February 1986.

European Employment Conference

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he was invited to participate in the European employment conference taking place in Leeds from 14 to 17 April; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: No.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what acreage of land on the Falkland Islands Her Majesty's Government own; who is the largest other owner and what is the acreage; and what were the corresponding figures five years ago.

Mr. Eggar I have asked the Falkland Islands Government to provide me with the information requested. As soon as it is available I will write to the hon. Member and arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Pakistan (Human Rights)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's ambassador has made to the Pakistan Government about human rights.

Mr. Eggar: We have on several occasions drawn the attention of the Government of Pakistan to the public and parliamentary concern in this country about violations of human rights. My right hon. and learned Friend did so again during his recent visit to Pakistan.

European Community (Spanish Accession)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he is satisfied with the discharge of his responsibilities for the promotion of British food exports by the agricultural attaché at Her Majesty's embassy in Madrid during the negotiations on Spanish accession.

Mrs. Chalker: The accession negotiations between the Community and Spain were conducted in Brussels. The agricultural attaché at Madrid was appointed in response to a recommendation from the Select Committee on Agriculture (Fifth Report 1984-85, No. 310-1) and took up the post in February 1986.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

GIOTTO Programme

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the expected benefits to future research arising out of the GIOTTO programme.

Mr. Pattie: GIOTTO, ESA's mission to Halley's comet, has given European scientists a wealth of high-quality scientific data. Whilst the results will take several years to analyse fully, it is already clear that they will revolutionise the understanding of the origin, evolution and structure of comets, and of the evolution of the solar system.

The benefits from this mission extend even wider than these very important scientific results. GIOTTO was Europe's first major interplanetary probe. Through this mission, Europe has demonstrated that it is capable of planning and executing a scientific interplanetary mission which required many new advances in technology and accurate orbit management. British Aerospace, which was the prime contractor for GIOTTO, can take much credit for this success, as can the Mullard space science laboratory, the university of Kent and the Rutherford Appleton laboratory, the United Kingdom groups which built two out of the 10 scientific instruments on board.

European Employment Conference, Leeds

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he was invited to participate in the European employment conference taking place in Leeds from 14 to 17 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: No.

Pyramid Selling

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he is satisfied with the workings of the Fair Trading Act 1973 with regard to pyramid selling and similar trading schemes; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: My Department is currently reviewing part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973 which regulates the activities of those promoting or participating in pyramid selling and similar trading schemes.

TRANSPORT

Pilotage Exemption Certificates

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many pilotage exemption certificates covering United Kingdom territorial waters are in existence.

Mr. Ridley: On 31 December 1984, the latest date for which figures are available, 993 pilotage certificates were in force in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing the range of charges levied by port authorities on holders of pilotage exemption certificates.

Mr. Ridley: In many pilotage districts, the pilotage authority made charges as at 31 December 1984 for the holding or use of pilotage certificates on one of the following bases: a fixed annual fee per vessel, ranging from £3·15 to £100 (in one case, £200 per certificate); a fixed charge per visit or movement, ranging from £5 to £15; or a percentage of the pilotage charge that would otherwise be payable, ranging from 5 per cent. to 33·5 per cent. Districts where no certificates were in force on 31 December 1984 have been excluded from this summary. In some cases charges vary according to the size of the vessel, and in some a maximum number of charges are payable within a given period to time. Most pilotage authorities also make charges for examinaton for certificates, and for their issue, renewal, alteration or transfer.

Gatwick-Heathrow Helicopter Link

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make his decision on the future of the Gatwick-Heathrow helicopter link.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I expect a decision to be announced within a few weeks.

PRIME MINISTER

Schools (Violence and Disorder)

Mr. Weetch asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Education and Science and the Home Department on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the reduction of violence and serious disorder in schools.

The Prime Minister: There is good co-ordination between the two Departments at all levels. The policy of the Government is that violence and serious disorder in schools cannot be tolerated and must be tackled firmly and quickly by those responsible at local level.

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister whether she has been notified of any accidents in the United Kingdom involving cruise missiles; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have not been notified of any accidents in the United Kingdom involving ground-launched cruise missiles.

Royal Palaces

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Prime Minister whether she will list the royal palaces which are managed by the Property Services Agency; whether she will estimate these properties' current value; whether buildings and contents are covered by any form of insurance; and, where no insurance is held, whether cover has ever been sought.

The Prime Minister: The Department of the Environment manages the palaces occupied by Her Majesty The Queen and the royal family and the Tower of London, Hampton Court palace, those parts of Kensington palace open to the public, Kew palace and the banqueting house. No estimate of the value of these properties is available. The approach to insuring such buildings, except in very special circumstances, is for the Crown to cover its own risks and outside cover has not therefore been sought in recent times.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Commonwealth Development Corporation has been authorised to extend its area of operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: I have decided to give approval to CDC undertaking activities in India. This is subject to consultation between CDC and my Department on the scale and content of CDC's intended investment programme in that country.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Primary Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil at primary schools in England in each year since 1978-79; and what are the comparable figures for primary schools in Staffordshire.

Mr. Dunn: The information is as follows:

Net Institutional Expenditure per Primary Pupil. £(1984-85 prices) (1)

	England	Staffordshire
1978-79	650	655
1979-80	655	655
1980-81	700	710
1981-82	725	745
1982-83	740	760
1983-84	760	790
1984-85	765	775

Note 1. The cash figures for each year have been repriced to 1984-85 prices using the Gross Domestic Product (Market Prices) Deflator.

Essays and Theses (Payments)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will introduce legislation to prohibit the offering of writing essays and theses for students for payment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce such legislation. It is for the institutions that award degrees and other qualifications to satisfy themselves that the essays and theses they assess are the work of the students concerned.

University Students (Drop-outs)

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the latest available figures for the rate of drop out for students on first degree courses at universities, for each year of the course, and give the comparable figures for 1965.

Mr. Walden: The most recently available information was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton North-East (Mrs. Short) on 9 December 1985 at columns 449-50.

GCSE

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities which have refused to co-operate in the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Chris Patten: No local education authority has made representations to the Department to this effect.

Student Support

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science with reference to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, columns 66-68, publishing a table comprising two measures of student support in the United Kingdom and elsewhere for 1982, if he will publish a table relating to the years 1983, 1984 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Figures for the United Kingdom for 1983 are as follows, but are not yet available for 1984 and 1985. No further information is available yet for other countries.

United Kingdom

Student support averaged over all students 1983	Student support as a percentage of GNP 1983
1,459*	0·25
†921	—

* Based on full-time home students.
† Based on full-time and part-time home students.

Teachers' Superannuation

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations he has had with the Professional Association of Teachers about the steps he is taking to amend the teachers' superannuation scheme to provide for equality of benefits and contributions for male and female teachers, as announced on 17 March, Official Report, columns 3-4.

Mr. Chris Patten: None. Consultation has taken place within the teachers' superannuation working party, on which PAT is not represented. Union representation in the working party is a matter for the teachers' panel and PAT may wish to approach it on this subject.

Nursery and Infant Teachers (Newham)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will ask Her Majesty's inspectors to investigate the implications for educational efficiency of the current shortage of nursery and infant teachers in the London borough of Newham; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: The Government are aware that some local education authorities have had difficulties recently in recruiting enough teachers to meet the particular needs of nursery and infant pupils. An expansion of the primary training system was begun in 1982 in anticipation of the upturn in the total primary population due this year, and we have sought to encourage more of those new students to specialise in the teaching of younger pupils. Recent information suggests that the supply of such specialists should now be increasing nationally although I accept that in some areas additional local initiatives may be necessary in order to boost supply.

The programme of work of Her Majesty's inspectorate is for it to determine, taking into account its own judgments about national and local inspection needs, its responsibility to advise the holder of my office, and others, on the health of theeducation system generally, and the many calls upon its manpower and time. I do not seek directly to intervene in the drawing up of the inspection programme. I have, however, brought the hon. Member's concerns to the attention of the senior chief inspector.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will ask Her Majesty's inspectors to conduct an investigation into the implications for educational standards and efficiency at Nelson junior school, Newham, of the current shortage of teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: I have received a complaint under sections 68 and 99 of the Education Act 1944 about staffing problems at the school. This is being followed up in the normal way by the Department. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the investigations are completed.

London Allowance

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to increase the London allowance for teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: London allowances are negotiated in the Burnham committees. To date, no claim has been made in either the primary and secondary or the further education committee for an increase in London allowances with effect from 1 April 1985. I have no power to change the London allowance for teachers other than as may be agreed in the Burnham committees.

Primary Teacher Training

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to reinstate primary teacher training at the North-East London polytechnic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The allocations of intakes to initial teacher training courses at public sector institutions for 1987-89 are being reviewed by the Department. My right hon. Friend has no plans to allocate places to institutions which no longer admit students to initial teacher training and which have given no indication that they wish to do so. He has received no proposals from North-East London polytechnic.

School Closures

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the release of information, if asked for, which is supplied by local education authorities concerning school closures upon which his decision is required.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend's policy on this matter is set out in paragraph 15 of administrative memorandum 4/84, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his practice to give reasons for his decision regarding the closure of schools.

Mr. Dunn: It is the Secretary of State's policy to give his reason whenever he rejects proposals made under sections 12 to 15 of the Education Act 1980. It is not his practice to give reasons for approving proposals, but it is implicit in such a decision that he has concluded that the case put forward by the proposers outweighs that made out by objectors. He has no plans to change these arrangements.

Assisted Places

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average annual cost to his Department of an assisted places secondary school place for the academic year 1985-86; and how this compares with the average annual capitation for a maintained sector secondary school place.

Mr. Dunn: The estimated average cost of an assisted place in the academic year 1985-86 is £1,600. The latest available figure for the average net expenditure per maintained secondary school pupil relates to the 1984-85 financial year, and is £1,273.

Observatories (Amalgamation)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment has been made with regard to the costs and employment consequences of the possible amalgamation of the Royal Greenwich Observatory and the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh on the Blackford Hill site in Edinburgh; whether further analysis on the merits of this proposal are planned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The Science and Engineering Research Council is investigating in detail the merits and practicalities of moving the Royal Greenwich Observatory from its existing site at Herstmonceux to the Royal Observatory Edinburgh site at Blackford Hill, along with similar detailed studies of the implications of moving it to the campuses of Cambridge or Manchester universities. These studies will include a consideration of the costs and employment consequences.

The council has already stated that the move must be self-financing over five years and each of the three options is expected to meet this criterion. The council expects to resolve the issue at its meeting in June.

Research Councils

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of staff employed by (a) the Agricultural and Food Research Council, (b) the Economic and Social Research Council, (c) the Medical Research Council, (d) the Natural Environment Research Council and (e) the Science and Engineering Council in 1979 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Walden: The information requested is as follows:

Number of staff employed

	1979	1985
Agricultural and Food Research Council*	5,770	5,221
Economic and Social Research Council*	247	116
Medical Research Council†	3,974	3,915

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Defence (Carmarthen)

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent discussions between the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Pudsey (Mr. Shaw), and members of the Carmarthen district council, following the escalation of the original estimated costs, on the financial support given by his Department to the construction of an emergency control centre by that council.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I met members of Carmarthen district council on 3 March to discuss the construction of an emergency centre at Carmarthen, which has been delayed by a continuing series of demonstrations. I welcomed their determination to fulfil their statutory civil defence duties in the face of very difficult circumstances. Civil defence grant aid at the normal rate of 75 per cent. will be paid on the capital costs of the construction of the centre and on the cost of the security measures that have been necessary to ensure that the work can be completed.

Teachers (Criminal Injuries)

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminal injuries have been recorded relating to teachers in maintained schools in England and Wales in each of the years of the most recent five-yearly period for which statistics are available;

(2) how many convictions have been secured before the courts in England and Wales relating to criminal injuries to teachers in maintained schools in England and Wales, in each of the years in the most recent five-yearly period for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: Information in the form requested is not collected centrally.

Metropolitan Police (Computer)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what items of hardware to enhance the Metropolitan police C department computer it is proposed to purchase over the next year; at what estimated cost; and to what purpose they will be put.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that he is presently negotiating with suppliers for the supply of equipment for the specialist operations (previously 'C') department computer to maintain the operational reliability of the system and to allow some additional terminals to be connected to it. He is not prepared to give an estimate of costs while negotiations are continuing.

Mr. Alan Parker

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) why he has not yet replied to the letter of 6 November 1985 from the hon. Member for Woolwich on behalf of Mr. Alan Parker, currently in Her Majesty's prison, Maidstone; and when he now expects to provide a substantive reply;

(2) in what circumstances inmates of Her Majesty's prisons are allowed to have their photopgraphs taken at their own expense; and why such facilities have been denied Mr. Alan Parker at Her Majesty's prison, Maidstone.

Mr. Mellor: Present policy is not to allow applications by inmates to have their photographs taken to send outside prison, save in exceptional compassionate circumstances, for example where a relative is unable to visit because of infirmity, disability or residence overseas. We have recently commenced a review of this policy but it is too early to say what the outcome will be.

My noble Friend has written to the hon. Member about the case of Mr. Alan Parker.

Hong Kong

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he intends to lay a Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order before Parliament.

Mr. Waddington: The date is not yet settled, but we hope to lay the order soon.

Dagenham Fire Station

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are any proposals to relax the current requirements at the Dagenham fire station that staffing levels should be maintained on all occasions.

Mr. Giles Shaw: None of which I am aware.

London Fire Brigade

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the audit review of the London Fire Brigade covered matters such as fire-fighter staffing, fire appliances and fire stations.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the audit of the London fire brigade concentrated on staffing arrangements at divisional and brigade headquarters.

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the terms of any review and the composition of any review body, currently or recently set up, to conduct a review of firefighters, fire appliances and fire stations in the London Fire Brigade.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend has not appointed and does not know of any such review, apart from that of the Audit Commission. The brigade will undergo the usual annual inspection by Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services, which will advise on aspects of effectiveness and efficiency.

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he is making to inform the public of the tribunal established under the Interception of Communications Act; and why his Department's information section refuses to answer questions over the telephone from members of the public about telephone tapping.

Mr. Hurd: A leaflet is available from my Department and from the office of the interception of communications tribunal explaining the remedies under the Act and describing the procedure for applying to the tribunal. Copies will be distributed to citizens advice bureaux as soon as possible. I have taken part in a broadcast on the subject. The staff of my Department will so far as possible answer over the telephone general inquiries about the operation of the Act. Applications for investigation by the tribunal must, however, be made in writing. The tribunal's address is PO Box 44, London SE1 0TX (telephone 01-921 1277).

Football Violence

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has received or sought, from chief constables in England and Wales and from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to enable him to quantify the effect of the Sporting Events (Control of Alcohol) Act 1985 on violence and crowd disturbances at football matches; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Chief officers of police believe that the Act is helping to maintain order at football grounds, but is is not possible to separate its effect from the other measures taken, including for example the extension of closed circuit television. As my right hon. Friend said in reply to a question following his statement to the House on the Popplewell report on 16 January at column 1232, the number of arrests and ejections from football grounds in the earlier part of the season was much reduced. Together with the football authorities, the Government remain determined to tackle the problem of football hooliganism, and further legislative steps are being taken in the Public Order Bill now before Parliament.

Offence Statistics

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state for each police force area in England and Wales the number of persons (a) charged with and (b) convicted of offences.

Mr. Mellor: The available information for persons proceeded against for indictable offences and persons found guilty is published by police force area in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales Supplementary Tables, 1984, Volume 3". Table 3·3(A) for magistrates' courts and table 3·5(A) for the Crown court.

News International Plant, Wapping

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to (a) how many police officers were deployed at or near the News International plant at Wapping on the night of 6 April and (b) the cost of the police operations at Wapping so far.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that 1,870 officers were deployed at Wapping on the evening of 6 April. Information regarding the total cost of the police operation to date is not readily available.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers from Newham stations were on duty in connection with the News International dispute at Wapping on 29 and 30 March;

(2) how many police officers were on duty in Newham on the night of 29 March; and what is the normal night-time complement;

(3) how many police officers from Newham stations have been on duty at Wapping in connection with the News International dispute each week since the dispute began.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The numbers of officers stationed in the London borough of Newham who have been deployed at the News International plant at Wapping during the period of the current dispute are as follows. More recent figures are not yet available.

Week beginning	*Number of Newham officers deployed
25 January 1986	208
1 February 1986	176
8 February 1986	192
15 February 1986	251
22 February 1986	211
1 March 1986	190
8 March 1986	230
15 March 1986	199
22 March 1986	219
29 March 1986	186

* Expressed as man days.

The numbers of officers from Newham deployed at the News International plant on 29 and 30 March were 34 and 32 respectively.

There were 43 officers on duty in Newham on the night of 29 March. The usual deployment is 48.

Local Authority Grant Applications

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the freeze on new applications from local authorities for grants under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966, following his Department's letter to local authorities, dated 26 March.

Mr. Waddington: Following a general administrative review of posts funded under section 11, local authorities were informed on 26 March 1986 of my right hon. Friend's intention to introduce revised guidelines for the administration of section 11 grant. A draft circular incorporating the proposed new guidelines has been sent to the local authority associations and to some other bodies for comment. The substantial number of applications which were current on 24 March will continue to be considered under the existing guidelines, but my right hon. Friend has decided that, unless there are exceptional pressing circumstances, all new applications must be considered in accordance with the new guidelines, which we hope will be in place by the early autumn.

Metropolitan Police (Civil Actions)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his reply of 27 March, for each year listed, how many successful civil actions against the Metropolitan police resulted in damages being awarded by the courts;

(2) pursuant to his reply of 27 March how many police officers were involved in the successful civil actions against the Commissioner in each of the years listed;

(3) pursuant to his reply of 27 March, how many of the 817 cases for damages against the Metropolitan police are still pending; and if he will list them by year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I will reply as soon as possible.

Remand Prisons (Terrorism)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of days in 1985 spent on remand for prisoners charged with terrorist-type activities.

Mr. Mellor: The only information which is readily available relates to prisoners who are currently in prison custody in England and Wales in category A. It does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

Twenty such prisoners spent periods in prison during 1985 on remand charged with terrorist-type offences and the average of those periods of time was 128 days. Some of the prisoners were first remanded in custody prior to 1 January 1985 and others remained in custody awaiting trial after 31 December 1985.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were transferred from (a) England and Wales to Northern Ireland and (b) Northern Ireland to England and Wales in 1985; and under which section of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 such transfers were carried out.

Mr. Mellor: As explained in my letter of 17 March to the hon. Member, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, the reply which I gave to his question on 27 January at column 193, was, unfortunately, incorrect in one respect. The correct information is that five prisoners were transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland in 1985, two of them on more than one occasion. Four of these seven transfers were under section 26 of the Criminal Justice Act 1961 (permanent transfer); one was under section 27 (temporary transfer); and two were under section 29 (transfer for judicial purposes). One prisoner (not none, as stated in the previous reply) was transferred from Northern Ireland to England and Wales under section 27, his transfer having been authorised in 1984.

Police and Prison Officers (Pay)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail the pay rises for both police officers and prison officers over the last five years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Following is the information:

Police Officers

Date of increase	Federated ranks per cent.*	†Superintendents per cent.	ACPO ranks‡ per cent.

Prison Officer-Prisoner Ratio

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the ratio of prison officers to prisoners at each penal establishment over the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Conditions)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the present conditions in Her Majesty's prisons.

Mr. Mellor: While many training establishments provide reasonable conditions and a full regime, the quality of life in local prisons and some remand centres is less satisfactory, and the Government are giving them priority. The current prison building programme, the largest this century, will provide 11,700 new places by the early 1990s in existing and new establishments. Additionally, we are undertaking extensive modernisation and refurbishment at about 100 establishments, including almost all the Victorian prisons. Some of the work has already been completed and has made a significant impact.

Since 1979, the number of prison officers has been increased by 18 per cent., compared with a rise of about 10 per cent. in inmate numbers, and further expansion of the prison service is planned. We have to ensure effective use of the resources which we already have and we are studying prison officer attendance systems and court escorting to see whether efficiency can be improved.

Both regimes and physical conditions will benefit substantially from this programme of work over the next few years. The Government are committed to the goal of eliminating overcrowding and will keep the building programme under review in the light of long-term projections of the prison population.

Stabbing Incident, Plaistow

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what time the Metropolitan police were informed of the stabbing incident near the junction of Terrace road and Pelly road, Plaistow E13 on 30 March; and at what time police officers arrived at the scene.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that a 999 call was received at Scotland Yard at 3.9 am on 30 March. On the arrival of police officers at the scene, there was no trace of the informant or of any victim. As there was no incident to investigate, the time of arrival was not recorded. An injured man was later interviewed by police officers at Newham general hospital but declined to provide any explanation of his injuries.

Civil Defence

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail and make available the recent plans his Department has drawn up concerning the formation of civil defence groups in the event of a nuclear war.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is the responsibility of local authorities to make plans for the protection of the population in their area in the event of war. The Government's advice to them is set out in "Emergency Planning Guidance to Local Authorities", a copy of which is in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Furniture

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the value of furniture (a) exported and (b) imported in constant terms in each of the years 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information requested is not available prior to 1963. Information for the remaining years is as follows:

Directors (Disqualification and Personal Liability)

Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to give further publicity to the provisions in the Insolvency Act 1985 relating to the disqualification and personal liability of directors.

Mr. Howard: I am issuing a leaflet which will explain to directors the implications for them of the new disqualification and personal liability provisions which will come into force on 28 April. I have arranged for copies of the leaflet to be placed in the Library and copies will also be obtainable from insolvency service branch 2, room 124, 2.14 Bunhill row, London EC1Y 8LL.

My Department will be sending all practitioners who are known to undertake insolvency work regularly guidance notes to assist them to carry out their reporting duties under chapter 1 of part II of the Insolvency Act 1985. Any insolvency office holder who has not received a copy of the guidance notes by 28 April should apply for a copy from Insolvency Service, room 609, 6th Floor, Companies House, 55/71 City road, London EC1Y 1BV.

South Korea

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with the level of trade between the United Kingdom and South Korea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Bilateral trade betwen the United Kingdom and the republic of Korea reached £728 million in 1985, having risen by 110 per cent. in volume since 1980. I hope to see our exports grow rapidly to offset the continuing imbalance in the republic of Korea's favour, and am encouraging British industry to seize the considerable opportunities offered by that market.

North Korea

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if there are any plans to increase trade between the United Kingdom and North Korea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United Kingdom has no governmental trade links with North Korea. Some British companies do business with that market, but the level of trade remains small.

Textiles

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from Comitextil, the European textile industry's committee, on fears for the future of the multi-fibre arrangement and the danger of a fresh surge of cheap textile imports from Third-world producers as a result of increased restrictions by the United States of America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I receive regular representations from the British Textile Confederation on all aspects of the multi-fibre arrangement. The BTC represents the United Kingdom industry in Comitextil and from time to time brings its collective views to my attention.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the figures of textile imports to and exports from the United Kingdom for the last financial years and for 1984-85, giving separate figures where available for cotton and wool textiles, carpets and carpet fibres.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information requested for financial years cannot be provided within acceptable cost limits. Information for calendar years is as follows:-

United Kingdom trade in textiles and carpets: 1984 and 1985

Insurance

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when a proposal to allow a free market in insurance was last considered by the Council of Ministers; and what was the decision then taken by the Council.

Mr. Howard: A number of directives in the insurance field have already been approved by the Council of Ministers, the most recent being the tourist assistance directive approved on 10 December 1984. Generally, the effect of these directives has been to create a free market for reinsurance and freedom of establishment for both life and non-life insurers. Proposals for a non-life insurance services directive have been submitted by the Commission to the Council of Ministers, and were last considered on 10 December 1984. The Council agreed that discussion of the directive should be energetically pursued with the aim of reaching an early agreement, but discussion was subsequently suspended pending the outcome of the four insurance cases brought by the Commission before the European Court of Justice.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received from the banking institutions regarding the insurance salesmen registration proposals; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received from the building societies regarding the insurance salesmen resgistration proposals; what reponse he has made; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations he has received from insurance companies regarding the insurance salesmen registration proposals; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have received 31 representations, including those from building societies, banking institutions and insurance companies, in response to my request for comments on proposals by the Marketing Of Investment Board Organising Committee and the Securities and Investments Board contained in their document "The Financial Services Bill and the regulation of individuals". I am considering these representations and will make a statement shortly.

Post Office

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, when he next meets the chairman of the Post Office, he will raise the matter of the Post Office's continued use or old county boundary names in postal addresses.

Mr. Pattie: No, this is an operational question for the Post Office board.

Export Credit Insurance

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to abolish the arrangements whereby the Export Credits Guarantee Department requires that an organisation using its services undertakes to use those services for the totality of its export credit insurance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Under its comprehensive facilities, ECGD does not necessarily require an exporter to insure all his business as a pre-condition of obtaining its cover and support. The Department looks for a reasonable spread of business which presents an insurable proposition and is willing to consider insuring only a proportion of an exporter's total transactions. The range of business required to be covered is settled in individual negotiations between exporters and the ECGD when policies are taken out. For project business and for sales of capital goods on extended credit, the Department is prepared to insure individual transactions subject to it having cover available and the terms and conditions proposed being acceptable.

Copyright

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to review the intellectual property system in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Channon: I intend to lay before the House tomorrow a White Paper "Intellectual Property and Innovation". This will set out the Government's response to the recommendations made by Sir Robin Nicholson in the Green Paper "Intellectual Property Rights and Innovation" (Cmnd 9117) published in 1983. It will also outline our proposals for the reform of copyright law.

Land Rover

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he is taking of the ownership of J. C. Bamford by Transmission and Engineering Services BV, Netherlands, in his consideration of that company's bid for Land Rover.

Mr. Channon: I shall consider each offer on its merits, in the light of the BL board's recommendations and the considerations outlined in my statements to the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mileage Allowances

Mr. Hayward asked the Lord Privy Seal if, in the light of the recent reduction in petrol prices, he as any plans to bring forward proposals to reduce hon. Members' mileage allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: In accordance with the resolution of the House of 20 July 1984, the rates of hon. Members' car mileage allowance are calculated with effect from 1 April on the basis of the Royal Automobile Club's schedule of estimated vehicle running costs which is published in or around April each year.

Security Fence

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Lord Privy Seal what consultations he intends pursuing before extending a security fence around the Palace of Westminister.

Mr. Biffen: Following the recommendations by the security authorities of both Houses for further railings around the perimeter of the Palace of Westminster, the Property Services Agency has been preparing design proposals. These will be considered shortly by the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee. The Property Services Agency will also be consulting the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission, the Royal Fine Arts Commission and the Westminister City Council. In the light of the views expressed, the House of Commons (Services) Committee will then make recommendations before any final decisions are taken.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motor vehicles have been stolen from the grounds of the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast, in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
1983	37
1985	114

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the vehicles stolen from the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast, over the past three years belonged to staff employed there.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
1983	19
1985	54

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps immediately to introduce more effective security measures at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast, to ensure that all vehicles entering the hospital grounds are checked on entering and leaving in a proper manner.

Mr. Needham: Security arrangements at the Royal Victoria hospital are essentially a matter for the Eastern Health and Social Services Board. The board is currently reviewing security at the hospital and steps will be taken to improve existing arrangements where this is considered necessary.

District Councils

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to which district councils in Northern Ireland are now functioning normally; which are not, and to what extent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Of the 26 district councils, eight are functioning normally. The remaining 18 district councils are continuing to suspend or adjourn council meetings. There is no indication that this action has affected the delivery of essential services. The Government are monitoring the situation closely and will take such action as is necessary to ensure that essential services are maintained.

Welfare Payments

Sir John Biggs-Davision asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in the light of the disruption of certain district councils, he will take steps to ensure that payments in support of voluntary bodies concerned with social welfare are continued; and if he will make a statement:

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government are aware of the problems faced by a number of voluntary bodies. While payments to these bodies are a matter for the district councils concerned, the Government are keeping the situation under review.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many formal complaints have been made about incidents of police use of plastic baton rounds in 1985 and the current year to date; in how many cases the complaint has been upheld; and in how many cases disciplinary action has been taken against the officers involved.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prevention of Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the number of persons who were initially detained under other Acts and were subsequently charged under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in 1985, by each quarter.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Remanded Persons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was (a) the average number of days spend on remand for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together in 1985, (b) the total number of persons remanded in custody before trial for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together in 1985, and (c) the number of bail applications refused for (i) scheduled, (ii) non-scheduled and (iii) both offences together in 1985.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the figures for 1985 of the number of persons proceeded against for scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many persons pleaded guilty to the principal offence; and how many persons in such contested cases were found not guilty of the principal offence.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Marches

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, by location, those parades in Northern Ireland during the Easter adjournment which (a) took place in contravention of a ban and (b) took place without the necessary statutory notice being served on the police; at which of these parades firearms were seen to be in the possession of civilians; how many plastic bullets were fired by the Royal Ulster Constabulary at each of these parades; and if he will identify which of these parades were Loyalist and which Republican.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legally held firearms were stolen in Northern Ireland during 1985 from the Special Constabulary, giving a breakdown of weapons stolen.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to establish which Ministers in his Department take part in radio and television programmes relating to current Government policy towards the Anglo-Irish agreement; and how many Ministers in his Department have taken part in such programmes in the last three weeks and how frequently.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986]: In the three weeks ended 8 April 1986 Northern Ireland Office Ministers gave 37 television or radio interviews related directly or indirectly to the Anglo-Irish agreement. Requests to take part in such programmes are considered on their merits.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Foreign Military Personnel (Training)

Sir Frederic Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery) of 9 April, he will list the countries in respect of which he is (a) willing and (b) unwilling to answer parliamentary questions about the numbers of soldiers or officers at present receiving training in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: A list of those countries whose nationals receive military training in the United Kingdom was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 27 March.

We do not normally reveal the details of the numbers of trainees or types of courses offered to individual countries as these details are regarded as confidential between ourselves and the recipient Government.

Single European Act

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what means he proposes to obtain the ratification by the Parliament of the United Kingdom of those titles of the "Single European Act", Cmnd. 9758, not named in clause 1 of the European Communities (Amendment) Bill.

Mrs. Chalker: The authority to ratify a treaty is vested in my right hon. and learned Friend as the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. In accordance with the practice known as the "Ponsonby rule", the Single European Act has been laid before Parliament in the form of a Command Paper (Cmnd. 9758). The House will have a full opportunity to debate the Single European Act as a whole when considering the European Communities (Amendment) Bill.

Korea

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the question of the peaceful re-unification of Korea was discussed at his recent meeting with President Chun; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Yes. Reunification was amongst the subjects discussed during the recent visit of President Chun Doo Hwan. We hope that the dialogue between the Koreans will resume soon following the suspension of contacts by North Korea earlier this year.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the peaceful re-unification of Korea.

Mr. Renton: Our policy is to support progress towards reunification by means of direct dialogue between the Koreans.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of South Korea on their record on human rights.

Mr. Renton: The recent visit of President Chun Doo Hwan has provided opportunities to express our support for progress in the development of personal freedoms in the Republic of Korea.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government had any observers at the team spirit manoeuvres in South Korea.

Mr. Renton: Our Defence attaché at Seoul observes the team spirit exercises as part of the normal duties of such an appointment.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government have any plans to recognise the Government of North Korea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We have no plans to recognise North Korea.

Governments (Recognition)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list in the Official Report those countries whose Governments are not recognised by Her Majesty's Government;

(2) if he will list the countries with which Her Majesty's Government do not maintain diplomatic relations.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) gave to the right hon. Member for Strangford (Mr. Taylor) on 19 June 1985 at column 151.

Hong Kong

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will respond to the representations made by the Hong Kong Legislative Council before the Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order is laid before Parliament.

Mr. Renton: The representations made by the Hong Kong Legislative Council are being given careful consideration. The timing of the announcement of eventual decisions will involve several factors, among them the programme for the order, which will depend on the parliamentary timetable. This has yet to be arranged through the usual channels.

Irina Ratushinskaya

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Soviet Embassy concerning the case of Irina Ratushinskaya, currently being held in a Soviet labour camp.

Mr. Renton: We regularly make clear to the Soviet authorities our concern for human rights and that those imprisoned for their political or religious beliefs should be released. The case of Irina Ratushinskaya was raised by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) then Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, during his talks with Deputy Foreign Minister Kornienko last year.

EC (United Kingdom Budget Contribution)

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the European Economic Community is committed to implementation of the United Kingdom's budgetary abatement in full, whether or not any supplementary budget is agreed.

Mrs. Chalker: The European Community is under an obligation, under the new own resources decision, which has treaty status, to implement the United Kingdom budgetary abatement in full. On the basis of estimates of the United Kingdom's entitlement, provision for the abatement is made in the Community budget for the year following that for which the abatement is due. We are this year already receiving an abatement of £830 million in respect of 1985. A correction to the main abatement falls to be made if outturn figures differ from the earlier estimates.

On the basis of the outturn figures for 1985, the Commission has calculated that an additional sum is due to the United Kingdom. The revenue correction through which our abatement is made is written into the Community budget. The Commission has said that it will make provision for the additional abatement at the earliest opportunity, that is, in the supplementary budget it plans to bring forward shortly.

Soviet Dissidents

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has anything to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Northampton, North on 14 February, Official Report, column 589, relating to representations to the Soviet Government about Soviet dissidents.

Mr. Renton: I regret that, due to an error, the list was incomplete. Representations were also made to the Soviet Union on behalf of Valeri Barinov and Alexandr Kholmiansky. The number of Jewish cases given in the final sentence is correct for the list as amended.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Honours List

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General when he expects to receive the report from the Director of Public Prosecutions about the allegations relating to honours for Alan Bristow over Westlands.

The Attorney-General: The Metropolitan police will submit a report to the Director of Public Prosecutions at the conclusion of their inquiry. It is too soon to say how long the inquiry will take.

WALES

Handicapped Pupils

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the schools in Wales have been modified or adapted since the passing of the Education Act 1981 in order to assist handicapped pupils.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This information is not collected by the Department.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number and proportion of children whose education is governed by statements under the provision of the Education Act 1981 (a) in maintained primary and secondary schools, (b) in special schools, in each local education authority in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The available information as at January 1985, is listed in the following table:-

	*Numbers
	At Primary and Secondary schools‡	At Special schools‖	Total	Total numbers as a percentage of all pupils in maintained primary, secondary and special schools†

† Numbers expressed as a percentage of all pupils educated at schools within the Authority.
‡ Including children awaiting placements in special schools.
‖ Including special units.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of children whose education is governed by statements under the provision of the Education Act 1981 as a proportion of the total school population of each local education authority in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The latest information relating to January 1985, is listed in the following table:

Children subject to statements receiving special education

	*Numbers	Numbers as a percentage of all pupils in all schools Numbers†
Clwyd	1,289	1·8
Dyfed	497	0·9

* Numbers relate to children for whom the authorities are maintaining or will be maintaining a statement and who received special education at maintained or independent schools within or outside the authority, or at home.
† The numbers include those awaiting placement in special schools.

Initial Teacher Training

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy towards the provision of a first-year entry for initial teacher training at Cartrefle college in September, in the light of the current deliberations of the Welsh Advisory Body for Further and Higher Education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: In September 1986 the North-East Wales institute of higher education has a target of 85 primary and 25 secondary students for the first year of initial teacher training. Students entering these courses are assured of being able to complete their course of study. A decision on the intake in 1987 will be taken as soon as possible in the light of further advice from the Wales Advisory Body.

Radioactive Phial (University College)

Mr. Alan Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he received a report on the loss of a small radioactive phial from University college, Swansea, in November 1985; and if he will make a statement on the circumstances which led to the loss and on the steps taken to ensure no recurrence.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The loss of the radioactive source was first reported to the Department on 22 November 1985. Following our request for more detailed information of the circumstances of the loss, a full and confidential report by the chairman of the university's health and safety committee was received on 13 March 1986 and this is currently being given urgent consideration. I will write to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subjects for which draft general certificate of secondary education syllabuses have been submitted by the Welsh Joint Education Council to the Secondary Examinations Council.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I am informed by the Secondary Examinations Council that draft GCSE syllabuses have been submitted by the WJEC in the following subjects:

Art & Design (6)
Classical Subjects (3)
Computer Studies (1)
French (1)
Home Economics (4)
Physics (1)
Welsh-First Language (1)
Biology (2)
CDT (3)
Economics (1)
Geography (2)
Mathematics (1)
Religious Studies (1)
Welsh Literature (1)
Business Studies (1)
Chemistry (1)
English Language (1)
History (1)
Music (1)
Sciences (3)
Welsh-Foundation (1)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subjects for which syllabuses submitted by the Welsh Joint Education Council have been approved by the Secondary Examinations Council.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I am informed by the Secondary Examinations Council that it has approved GCSE syllabuses from the WJEC in the following subjects:

Art & Design
Classical Subjects
English Language
Mathematics
Welsh (First Language)
Biology
Computer Studies
Geography
Religious Studies
CDT
Economics
Home Economics
Sciences

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subjects whose general certificate of secondary education syallabuses have been received in schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The substantial progress which has been made with GCSE syllabus approval has enabled the WJEC to begin their distribution to local education authorities for onward transmission to secondary schools. Syllabuses, in final form, have already been sent to local education authorities in geography, music, biology, economics, English, history, Latin, classical civilisation, rural science, and physical education. The urgency of this task is fully appreciated by the WJEC and the local education authorities.

Mr. D. E.Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subjects for which draft general certificate of secondary education syllabuses are still to be submitted by the Welsh Joint Education Council to the Secondary Examinations Councils.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I am informed by the Secondary Examinations Council that it expects shortly to receive draft GCSE syllabuses from the WJEC in the following subjects:

English Literature
Sciences
Welsh-Extended

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has of the cost per pupil per subject for books and equipment needed for the teaching of the new courses involved in preparing for the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: It is for local education authorities to provide resources for the delivery of the curriculum in their schools, including a provision for GCSE courses. The Government have undertaken to supplement secondary school capitation allowances during the first GCSE courses through the education support grant mechanism.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list by local education authority the names of subjects for which training sessions have been held in Wales together with the number of teachers attending each session;

(2) if he will list the number of training sessions for the implementation of the general certificate of secondary education which have been held in each local education authority in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The following details have been provided by the WJEC who have informed me that attendance levels at seminars held to date have been variable:

WJEC GCSE Inset Seminars: 20 January—7 April 1986

Job Creation

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the Government's estimate of newly created job opportunities in Wales is based on statistical projections; and how accurate such projections have been since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Government do not make estimates of newly created job opportunities; the available statistics enable estimates to be made of the net change in the number of people in work but not the underlying gross numbers of jobs created or lost.

EMPLOYMENT

Local Enterprise Agencies

Mr. Porter asked the Paymaster General what study he has made of the geographical balance in the distribution of local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Trippier: From the records my Department holds on local enterprise agencies, we are aware of their geographical spread throughout the country. These records show the following distribution in the number of local enterprise agencies:

	Number
South West	25
South East	60
London	38
Midlands	31
North West	57
North East	22
Yorkshire and Humberside	18
Scotland	35
Wales	12
Northern Ireland	34

Business Failures

Mr. Terlezki asked the Paymaster General how business failures in England and Wales in 1985 compare with the figures for 1984; and how this compares with the record of the United Kingdom's major European competitors.

Mr. Trippier: Estimates of the number of business failures in England and Wales in 1985 are not yet available. There are severe difficulties in the way of making meaningful comparisons of such estimates between countries.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General how many injuries or fatalities involving young people employed on the YTS have been reported in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the precise form requested as separate details of employed and non-employed trainees are not held. Following are the details of accidents to YTS trainees for the period 1 January 1985 to 31 December 1985, the latest available date.

Accidents and injuries for the period 1 January 1985 to 31 December 1985*

	Number
Fatalities	†4
Major injuries	‡201
Minor injuries	1,885
Total	2,090

* MSC accident figures for the YTS have been compiled on a similar basis to those prepared by the Health and Safety Executive on employed persons. However, the Commission's figures will include a number of accidents during scheme time and accidents to trainees in educational establishments which may not have been reportable to the Health and Safety Executive had the individuals been employed.

† This figure includes one road traffic accident.

‡ Major injuries are classified according to the severity criteria laid down in the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1980 (NADOR).

Small Businesses (Government Contracts)

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General what steps he has taken to improve the opportunities for small businesses to tender for Government contracts.

Mr. Trippier: My Department liaises with purchasing departments and the central unit on purchasing to ensure that small firms can compete for Government contracts. The CUP is pursuing with departments the need to reduce paperwork and introduce simpler standardised procedures for small firms and for more departments to publish simple guidance for them. Its first report on progress will be published in the summer. A guidance booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts" is available through the small firms service and information about purchasing procedures and contacts in some departments will soon be available on Prestel.

Retirement Age (Women)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General if he has yet concluded his consideration of whether to seek to amend the Sex Discrimination Bill in the light of the European Court of Justice decision concerning the retirement age for women.

Mr. Lang: The Government issued a consultative document on 1 April, which was placed in the Library of the House, setting out proposals for amending our legislation in the light of the judgment, and inviting comments by 30 April.

Political Funds

Mr. Winnick asked the Paymaster General what is his latest information as to how many unions have balloted over political funds under recent legislation; and of these how many have voted, respectively, in favour and against retaining a political fund.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We are aware of 38 unions that have held political fund review ballots under the 1984 Trade Union Act, all of which have voted in favour of retaining their funds.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General how many working days were lost through industrial disputes per thousand employees in employment in each of the years 1974 to 1985; and what was the average figure for working days lost through industrial disputes per thousand employees in employment between February 1974 and April 1979, and between May 1979 to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes per thousand employees in employment in each of the years 1974 to 1985 is shown in the table. For the period February 1974 to April 1979 and May 1979 to February 1986, the annualised averages of working days lost per thousand employees in employment rate were 427 and 545 respectively.

United Kingdom

Labour Statistics

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report, for each year since 1978, expressed at 1986 prices (a) the allowance paid on the youth opportunities programmes and YTS, (b) the average earnings of full-time males aged under 18 years, (c) the average earnings of full-time females aged under 18 years, (d) the minimum wage rate for a 16-year-old apprentice in engineering, (e) the minimum wage rate for a 17-year-old apprentice in engineering, (f) average earnings for full-time male manual workers, excluding overtime and bonuses, (g) average earnings for full-time female manual workers, excluding overtime and bonuses, (h) (a) as a percentage of (f) and (g), (i) (b) as a percentage of (f), (j) (c) as a percentage of (g), (k) (d) as a percentage of (f) and (l) (e) as a percentage of (g).

Mr. Lang: The available information is given in the table.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many people were unemployed in the London borough of Newham in 1979 and at the latest available date; and what are the comparable figures for long-term unemployed and unemployed school leavers.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. On 9 January 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of unemployed claimants in the London borough of Newham was 17,664, of whom 7,639 had been unemployed for over one year. The number of unemployed school leavers aged under 18 years at the same date was 551. Statistics of unemployment for local authority districts are derived from the new ward-based system and are available only from June 1983.

News International Plant, Wapping

Mr. Gould asked the Paymaster General which of the following Australian citizens working at News International's Wapping Plant have work permits: Charlie MacNeil, John Cowley, Reg Limb, Phil Stevens, Adam Conrad and Norman Jamieson.

Mr. Lang: It is not our practice to disclose information of this kind about individuals.

Certificate of Exemption

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received from the construction and related industries concerning the implementation of condition 6 of the certificate of exemption No. CON (LO)/ 1981/82 (General); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Health and Safety Executive has received representations from the Federation of Manufacturers of Construction Equipment and Cranes and from the Construction Plant-hire Association about the practicability and cost of complying with the condition. The executive has carefully considered these representations and is discussing them with the organisations concerned.

Scottish Gospel Outreach, Glasgow

Mr. Martin asked the Paymaster General what funds were made available under the community programme to Scottish Gospel Outreach, Glasgow, in 1985-86; and what funds are being made available in 1986-87.

Mr. Lang: Community programme projects are funded for a year and not in relation to financial years. Scottish Gospel Outreach has two projects. The first operates from July to July and it is estimated that it will receive £58,244 in the year which will end in July 1986. The second operated from March 1985 to March 1986 and received £38,622 during that period. That project has been renewed for 13 weeks to June 1986 at an estimated cost of £18,176. The amount of money which may be available to Scottish Gospel Outreach during 1986-87 will depend upon the outcome of negotiations between the Manpower Services Commission and the organisation about the conditions under which funding will be renewed.

Community Programme

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General (1) what is the cost of the current Manpower Services Commission advertising campaign to promote the community programme;

(2) what outside agencies have been engaged in connection with the Manpower Services Commission advertising campaign to promote the community programme;

(3) what sums have been paid to any outside agencies engaged by the Manpower Services Commission in connection with its advertising campaign to promote the community programme;

(4) on what evidence the Manpower Services Commission based the statement, included in advertising on behalf of the commission, that there is no shortage of work in Sunderland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his Budget speech the expansion of the community programme from its present level of 200,000 filled places to 255,000 places by the end of October. The allocation of places to the northern region is likely to increase to 29,600. The allocation to the south Tyne area, which includes Sunderland, is not yet settled, but is likely to be a considerable increase over the 5,658 filled community programme places in the south Tyne area at the end of March. There will therefore be a substantial number of community programme jobs which will need to be filled to meet the target for the area community programme sponsors.

Community programme sponsors provide jobs by undertaking work which would not otherwise be done. Experience indicates that there is, as the advertisement states, no shortage of such work in Sunderland or elsewhere.

A press and radio campaign was run in March in three areas: the north-east, south Wales and London. Its purpose was to encourage long-term unemployed people to apply for community programme jobs and to test the effectiveness of different forms of publicity. Advertisements were designed to attract attention, and in the north-east 1,350 responses have already been received.

The advertising material was designed by Saatchi and Saatchi Compton Ltd. It distributed material to the local media, and received a 15 per cent. commission, which is the customary figure. The cost of the whole campaign, including commission, was £167,000 of which £27,000 was in the north-east.

ENERGY

Hypothermia

13. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Energy if the Monergy campaign is to feature any posters warning about the dangers of hypothermia.

Mr. David Hunt: The Energy Efficiency Office has a range of publications and posters which advise on the help available to householders who have homes which are difficult to heat or who have difficulty in paying their fuel bills.

Oil and Gas

15. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the current level of output of oil and gas from the United Kingdom sector of the continental shelf.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The most recent figures are for February, when daily offshore production is provisionally estimated to have been 2·7 million barrels of crude oil and 7·4 billion cu ft of natural gas.

Nuclear Industry

16. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received about his responsibilities for the nuclear industry.

Mr. Peter Walker: I receive representations from many organisations and individuals about my responsibilities for nuclear power.

Monergy Breakfasts

17. Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress to date of the Monergy breakfast specials.

Mr. David Hunt: The Monergy breakfasts have been extremely successful; 2,100 senior executives have attended the three events held to date and the accompanying exhibitions were well over-subscribed.

Oil Companies (Discussions)

18. Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with representatives of the oil companies.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My Department keeps in regular contact with the oil companies.

Waste (Energy Production)

19. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about his policy on producing energy from waste.

Mr. David Hunt: The Department's policy is to encourage the use of waste as a fuel wherever it is economically viable, when there is not a more economic use and it is environmentally acceptable. I am supporting research, development and demonstration programmes on energy from waste with an existing commitment of £5·9 million on 62 projects.

Energy Efficiency

20. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement about energy efficiency year.

Mr. David Hunt: Energy Efficiency Year is now in full swing. Our campaign has generated substantial interest and activity throughout the country. Around 400 events have already taken place and over a thousand will take place this year.

22. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to encourage companies and local authorities to appoint full-time energy audit managers.

Mr. David Hunt: It is already my right hon. Friend's policy to encourage the appointment of energy managers. The number of energy managers has doubled over the past 2½ years since my right hon. Friend launched the energy efficiency campaign.

25. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Energy what new initiatives Her Majesty's Government propose to take in energy efficiency year to promote energy efficiency projects.

Mr. David Hunt: Energy Efficiency Year is itself a major new initiative designed to encourage increased takeup of existing successful Government schemes, to promote more widespread action on the comprehensive range of advice and information prepared by Government agencies, and to stimulate the more vigorous and successful marketing of the ever-expanding range of energy efficiency goods and services available in the market place. It is succeeding on all these fronts.

27. Mr. Andy Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most recent estimate of the savings generated by industry and commerce through energy efficiency schemes.

Mr. David Hunt: Action taken by companies which have already responded to our energy efficiency campaign is leading to savings of at least £500 million a year. Energy Efficiency Year will of course stimulate further substantial savings.

Coal Conversion Scheme

21. Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will report on progress of the scheme to assist industry with grants to enable conversion to coal firing.

Mr. David Hunt: At the end of March, 418 projects with grant offers totalling some £47 million and coal burn in excess of 2·5 million tonnes per annum were under way.

Nuclear Industry (Sweden)

23. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek to visit nuclear installations in Sweden.

Mr. Goodlad: I have at present no plans to do so.

Coal Imports

24. Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, when he next meets the chairman of the National Coal Board, he will discuss the problems being created by the size of coal imports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The volume of coal imports into the United Kingdom is affected by demand for specialist coals which cannot be supplied indigenously in sufficient quantity; by purchasers' confidence in the reliability of United Kingdom supplies; and by the competitiveness of United Kingdom coal at world market prices. All these factors may impinge on the National Coal Board's operations, which I discuss regularly with its chairman.

Electricity Generation (Oil)

26. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has had any recent representations from the oil industry seeking the greater use of oil in power generation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: No.

NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

28. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on the current activities and prospects of NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Mr. David Hunt: At the end of February 1986 NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. had committed £7·6 million assisting 341 projects to create 4,768 job opportunities. A further £41·5 million of investment has been attracted from other sources. On this basis, the £20 million presently available to the company could generate some £140 million in total investment for new job creation projects.

Energy Charges

29. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will detail the increases in energy charges between 1974 and 1979 and in the latest five-year period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Between 1974 and 1979, the current price index for domestic fuels rose by 113 per cent. and that for industrial fuels by 140 per cent. In the latest five-year period for which data are available on a comparable basis—ie third quarter 1980 to third quarter 1985—the corresponding figures were 51 per cent. and 36 per cent. respectively.

Colliery Closures

30. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the progress of the implementation of the agreement made between the National Coal Board and the National Association of Colliery Overmen, Deputies and Shotfires relating to colliery closures.

Mr. David Hunt: No. This is a matter for the NCB and its mining unions.

Nuclear Policy (Departmental Staff)

31. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many people work in the nuclear policy division of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The present staff of the atomic energy division of my Department totals 41.

Coal Industry

32. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the output of coal per man shift at the present time; and how this compares with the output per man shift in April 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: The latest figures available show that overall revenue deep-mined productivity was 3·08 tonnes per man shift in the week ending 22 March 1986. This compares with an average of 2·20 tonnes per man shift for April 1979.

Energy Costs

33. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he is giving to the impact of the level of energy costs borne by industry in the United Kingdom, compared with those of other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I keep a close watch on comparative industrial energy prices. Energy prices to industry in this country have fallen in real terms over the last three years.

Nuclear Installations Inspectorate

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to publish further information on the detailed guidelines of the nuclear installations inspectorate regarding the monitoring for adequacy and implementation of the arrangements for the control and supervision of a Land 2 disposal site; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply. When these guidelines are ready the Health and Safety Executive will place a copy in the Library of the House and make copies available upon request.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total spending of his Department on research and development of renewable energy sources of the five years to the latest available date; what were the comparable figures for the five years 1974 to 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Expenditure by my Department on research and development into the renewable sources of energy in the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 amounted to £68 million compared with £15·8 million in the period 1975-76 to 1979-80.

Plutonium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy in what ways the plutonium with plutonium-240 content less than 15 per cent. produced by Hinckley Point A, Sizewell and Oldbury after 1 April has been disposed of.

Mr. Goodlad: No plutonium produced by these stations since 1 April has been separated from the fuel which contains it or has been disposed of.

Electricity Tariffs (Oil Price)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, when he next meets the chairman of the Electricity Council, he will raise with him the scope for reducing electricity tariffs in the light of the recent large fall in the price of crude oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Electricity tariffs are a commercial matter for the electricity boards. The CEGB and NCB are discussing the level of coal prices in the light of the fall in the price of oil and the uncertain prospects for the future price of oil. Any tariff changes will depend on the outcome of the discussions.

Neighbourhood Energy Action

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Energy what level of grant he has approved for Neighbourhood Energy Action in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department's grant to Neighbourhood Energy Action for 1986-87 will be £275,000. This compares with a grant of £186,764 in 1985-86. The increase is to enable NEA to expand the services that it provides to the voluntary insulation projects. The number of projects has increased from 114 in March last year to over 230 in March this year, and is expected to increase further to over 400 by the end of the year. NEA provides management advice, information and training to the projects. I regard NEA's services as a major contribution to the success achieved by the projects in insulating over 150,000 houses to date, mainly the homes of pensioners and disabled people.

SCOTLAND

Action on Alcohol Abuse

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has received any application for public funds from Action on Alcohol Abuse; what has been his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no such application. Since 1973, however, the Scottish Home and Health Department has made an annual grant to the Scottish Council on Alcohol, which is the only national voluntary agency in Scotland concerned with alcohol and alcohol-related problems funded for this purpose.

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those regional and district councils which made contributions to local citizens advice bureaux, showing the level of grant in the last financial year for which figures are available; and how much that grant represented per 1,000 head of population.

Mr. Ancram: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally.

Health Boards (Funding)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the funding per capita in each of the Scottish health board areas at the latest available date.

Mr. Rifkind: The figures for 1984-85 are as follows:

Health Board	£ per capita
Argyll and Clyde	282·45
Ayrshire and Arran	255·77
Borders	264·85
Dumfries and Galloway	309·77
Fife	251·28
Forth Valley	293·92
Grampian	299·14
Greater Glasgow	436·01
Highland	322·72
Lanarkshire	258·98
Lothian	354·48
Orkney	266·23
Shetland	228·55
Tayside	389·69
Western Isles	284·49
Scotland	327·57

Notes:

1. The expenditure figures used are taken from the annual accounts submitted to the Department by the Health Board, and are net of charges retained by family practitioners.
2. The population figures used are mid-year estimates of resident population for 1984.
3. The figures do not include expenditure on support services provided by the Common Services Agency which was £11·75 per capita in Scotland as a whole, or expenditure on the main capital programme which was £12·85 per capita.

The distribution of funds to health boards in Scotland is determined by population weighted according to age, sex and local mortality rates, by the amount of health care provided for patients from neighbouring areas (cross-boundary flow), by teaching hospital costs, by a number of other commitments, and also by the extent to which individual boards benefit by the operation of the resources equalisation process. It is therefore not possible to draw reliable conclusions from comparisons of per capita expenditure by health boards based on resident population figures which make no allowance for these factors.

Asbestos (Dumping)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 8 April, Official Report, columns 18-19, if he will specify the average, highest and lowest depth of the site chosen off Cloch Point for the dumping of asbestos contaminated material; if he will indicate the controls applied to the dumping operation; whether the material is bagged or held in some other form of container; what information and guidance is given to the masters of vessels who are engaged in such dumping; what warnings are issued to other vessels in the vicinity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Mackay: As my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment has already indicated, a full statement will be made before any such operation is undertaken. — [Vol. 95, c. 18-19.]

Support,Finance

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount earmarked for Scotland in the national support finance fund in 1984-85, together with the final total allocated to new and to existing projects in that financial year, broken down by health board area.

Mr. John MacKay: The current arrangements, under which new support finance projects are controlled and managed locally, did not come into effect until 1 May 1985. The total set aside centrally to fund support finance projects in 1984-85 under the previous arrangements was £4·6 million. The amounts spent by individual boards were as follows:

Expenditure on support finance projects in 1984-85

Health Board	£'000
Argyll and Clyde	—
Ayrshire and Arran	—
Borders	230
Dumfries and Galloway	690
Fife	140
Forth Valley	80
Grampian	440
Greater Glasgow	—
Highland	780
Lanarkshire	120
Lothian	160
Orkney	—
Shetland	—
Tayside	80
Total	2,810

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of Sate for Scotland (1) what was the total expenditure in Scotland from (a) the residual Scottish Office fund and (b) health boards, on support finance projects in 1985-86, broken down by health board area;

(2) what is the estimate of support finance expenditure for 1985-86, by health board area.

Mr. John MacKay: Details of the indicative levels of expenditure on support finance projects in 1985-86, distinguishing between projects approved under the previous arrangements and new schemes, were given in my reply of 17 July 1985 at column 40, in response to a question from the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy).

Information on actual expenditure by health boards in 1985-86 is not yet available centrally. Indicative levels of expenditure on support finance projects in 1986-87 were given in my reply of 26 March 1986 at column 514, also in response to a question from the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye.

Disabled People (Surveys)

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) in which parts of Scotland, and for which groups of disabled people, surveys have been carried out in accordance with the terms of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Acts of 1970 and 1972;

(2) in which year each survey carried out under the Chornically Sick and Disabled Persons Acts was undertaken; and whether they have been regularly repeated or kept up to date in some other way.

Mr. John MacKay: Full information is not held centrally. It is for local authorities to decide how to discharge their responsibilities under the Acts, subject to any general guidance which my right hon. and learned Friend may provide.

Joint Funding (Projects)

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by health board area the titles of all joint funded projects in Scotland, together with the total annual cost of each project.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 16 December 1985 at column 58, and to the letter which I subsequently wrote to him on 24 January, a copy of which is now in the Library.

Postal Votes

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in effect to ensure that electors can exercise their right to obtain postal votes; and if there is any restriction on the availability of RPF7 forms and other relevant documents to electoral registration officers in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The returning officer is required to state in the notice of election the date by which applications to be treated as an absent voter and notices about postal or proxy voting must reach the electoral registration officer to be effective for the election. In addition, each electoral registration officer is required to give notice of that date in his area by such means as he thinks best calculated to bring the information to the notice of those concerned.

Application forms for a postal vote, most commonly on form RPF7, are made available by electoral registration officers from their offices and other local authority offices and are supplied to political parties on request in reasonable quantities. There are no restrictions on the availability of RPF7 forms and other relevant documents to electoral registration officers in Scotland who themselves determine their needs.

Plutonium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when plutonium recovered from fuel irradiated in South of Scotland Electricity Board reactors first became the property of the South of Scotland Electricity Board.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Irradiated fuel from South of Scotland Electricity Board reactors and the plutonium within it has been the property of the board since November 1971. Under the terms of the fuel supply agreement between the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and the SSEB signed in 1962 the Authority undertook to purchase from the board a quantity of irradiated fuel equivalent to the uranium content of the initial charges, supplied as concessionary fuel, for the two Hunterston A reactors. The last of the irradiated fuel purchased under this agreement was received at Sellafield in November 1971. Under similar arrangements, with the Central Electricity Generating Board, the purchase by the UKAEA of irradiated fuel from CEGB reactors was completed by April 1969.

Prison Gatehouses

Mr. Fairbairn asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the building costs of the gatehouses at Her Majesty's prison at Barlinnie, Saughton, Craiginches and Perth.

Mr. Rifkind: The costs of building the gatehouses/administration blocks at the prisons referred to are as follows, with completion dates in order to put the costs in perspective.

Prison and Cost £	Completion Date
Barlinnie 368,000	March 1975
Saughton 1,638,000	July 1984
Craiginches 165,000	February 1975
Perth *1,874,000	July 1985

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Fairbairn asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) those ancient monuments in his care in Scotland and (b) those ancient monuments which are not in his care in Scotland, but which are listed under the terms of the Ancient Monuments Act.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is contained in the latest edition of the statutory "List of Ancient Monuments in Scotland", published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office, a copy of which I am sending to my hon. and learned Friend, together with a note of amendments to the list which have been effected since publication. I am placing copies of these documents in the Library.

School Closures

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list, by region, of all primary and secondary school closures between September 1984 and September 1985.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There were no secondary school closures in Scotland in the period referred to. The following table records primary school closures and is based on returns provided by individual education authorities.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland of 8 April, Official Report, column 37, he will publish the figures of hill livestock compensatory allowances, paid to producers (a) by 7 April 1986 and (b) by 9 April 1985, quoting the rate of headage payment in each year.

Mr. John MacKay: The 20,532 payments made by 7 April 1986, most of which were 75 per cent. payments to account made very early in the year, totalled £31,836,236. The 15,542 payments made by 9 April 1985, all of which were full payments, totalled £33,186,834. The respective rates were as follows:

Electricity Prices

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, when he next meets the chairman of the South of Scotland Electricity Board, he will raise with him the scope for reducing the recent price increases in the light of the recent large fall in the price of crude oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No. The board is responsible for setting tariffs and it is for it to consider how these should be adjusted to take account of movements in fuel or other costs of production.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Brown FK

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 24 March on Brown FK, on what grounds the United Kingdom supports the proposal to transfer Brown FK from annex II to annex I;

(2) further to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 24 March on Brown FK, whether the representations received from the United Kingdom kipper industry were opposed to the proposal; and what information he has as to the attitudes towards the proposal of other EEC member states;

(3) if there are any proposals emanating from the European Commission which would have the effect of obliging all member states to prohibit the use of Brown FK.

Mrs. Fenner: Brown FK appears in annex II to the EC directive on colouring matter in food. Annex II is a temporary list of colours which member states may permit if they wish. Following advice from its Scientific Committee for Food, the Commission is now proposing to move Brown FK for use on smoked fish, from annex II to annex I of the directive, thereby requiring all member states to accept this use permanently. There is no proposal to prohibit the use of Brown FK on smoked fish. Following advice from the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity on need and safety, the Government supports the Commission's proposal. Representations from the kipper industry support the continued use in the United Kingdom of Brown FK on smoked fish.

Sugar

Mr. Pawsey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current European Community intervention price per tonne for sugar beet, expressed in pounds sterling; what information he has on the current average world price for sugar, similarly expressed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: There is no European Community intervention price for sugar beet, but that for white sugar is currently £335·19 per tonne. The London daily price for white sugar, which may be regarded as representative of the world price was 228 dollars (£157·06) per tonne on 7 April 1986. Prices on the world sugar market, which is a residual and highly volative one, have been depressed for some time but trade estimates that 1985-86 world production may fall below consumption have recently caused prices to rise above their lowest levels.

Terrestrial Radioactivity Monitoring Programme

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria were applied in choosing the sites to be monitored under the terrestrial environmental monitoring survey being conducted by his Department and the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mrs. Fenner: The Ministry's terrestrial radioactivity monitoring programme is being conducted around establishments of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and licensed nuclear sites from which discharges of radioactive waste are authorised in England jointly by my right hon. Friend the Minister and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, and in Wales by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the first report of the terrestrial environmental monitoring survey will be published; and if he will make copies available in the Library.

Mrs. Fenner: It is expected that the first report will be published during the first half of 1987. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Frozen Vegetables (Duties)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at what level the United Kingdom objection to the Spanish proposal to increase duties on frozen vegetables mentioned in his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 8 April was lodged; whether it was pursued at ministerial level and with what result; what the normal procedures are for dealing with a registered objection; and whether any other countries lodged similar objections.

Mrs. Fenner: The United Kingdom objection in respect of frozen vegetables was raised in the Council working group on Spanish accession. Tariff dismantlement was one of a number of outstanding technical issues forming part of the final Presidency package that was accepted by the Council of Ministers. There were no objections at the time from other member states on this issue.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the increase in the duty on British frozen vegetables entering Spain after the treaty of accession was accepted by Her Majesty's Government; what efforts were made to persuade the Commission to impose it; and why the industry was not informed of this increase until after it had come into force.

Mrs. Fenner: The duty increase referred to took effect on 1 March 1986 as a consequence of the treaty of Spanish accession which was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 15 November 1985.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the representations for a reduction in the duties on frozen peas mentioned in his reply to the hon Member for Great Grimsby of 8 April were first made by Her Majesty's Government; at what level they were lodged; whether they will now be pursued in the Council of Ministers; and what efforts have been made to secure support from other European Economic Community Governments for this reduction.

Mrs. Fenner: On the first two parts of the question, I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 11 April. The next steps depend on Spanish reactions. The problem has been brought to the attention of all other member states of the Community.

ADAS (Charges)

Mr. Walters asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from farmers about the proposed Agricultural Development and Advisory Service charges for statutory work in connection with milk and dairies regulations.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Dairy Inspections

Mr. Walters asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if there are any proposals to abolish compulsory dairy inspections for farmers whose milk falls into category A and B of the Milk Marketing Board total bacteriological count.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Ritual Slaughter

Mr. Favell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he has received in favour of the stunning of animals prior to ritual slaughter; and if he will now respond to the Farm Animal Welfare Council report on this subject.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department has received 255 representations in support of the recommendation in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report that the slaughter of animals without pre-stunning should be prohibited within three years. We have also received numerous representations opposing this recommendation. We are now considering the council's report and all comments made on it before decisions are taken.

Asbestos (Dumping)

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how widespread is the practice of dumping asbestos or asbestos-contaminated material in United Kingdom estuarial waters; how such dumping is monitored and regulated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

EC (Intervention)

Mr. Marlow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost to the taxpayer of intervention and storage not yet reimbursed by the European Economic Community for each of the last three calendar years.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Badgers

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps officials in his Department took to try to persuade the team drafting the Dunnet report to draft it in terms of endorsing the general policy on tuberculosis control in badgers but recommending changes in tactics or operational approach and to try to secure amendments to the draft where needed; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if, in the light of Mr. K. W. Wilkes' memorandum of 3 December suggesting that amendments be sought by his Department to the then draft of the Dunnet report, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary has anything to add to the reply to the hon. Member for South Shields of 27 March, Official Report, column 597, about departmental involvement in seeking changes to drafts of the Dunnet report.

Mr. Jopling: A meeting took place on 5 December 1985 between the Dunnet committee and officials of my Department. The meeting was held at the request of the committee, who wished to discuss their preliminary conclusions, and had prepared a list of these conclusions for this purpose. The Ministry memorandum to which the hon. Member refers was produced in preparation for that meeting. In the course of the meeting, officials pointed out that the criticisms of existing operations which the committee intended to make were not directed against the policy of trying to minimise cross-infection from badgers to cattle, but against the procedures being used.

The hon. Member's question of 27 March referred to discussions on the draft report and requests for redrafting and it followed certain allegations which had appeared in the press. I confirm the reply which I gave to that question.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Johnson Matthey Bank Ltd.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken to ensure that the sale of Johnson Matthey Bank does not impede fraud squad inquiries.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply. The controller of the fraud investigation group has spoken to the officer leading the police investigation into the affairs of Johnson Matthey Bank Ltd. and they are both satisfied that the change of ownership of that part of the banking operation which is to be sold will not have any adverse affects upon continuing police inquiries. Co-operation afforded to police officers by the present management of Johnson Matthey Bank Ltd. has been excellent and police have no reason to suppose that the quality of co-operation will suffer.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Social Security Reform

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioner households (a) in total and (b) by tenure will cease to qualify for any housing benefit as a result of each of the following changes to the housing benefit scheme outlined in the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security", Cmnd 9691: (i) the changes to the needs allowance and taper formulae, and in the assessment of income, (ii) the treatment of capital and (iii) the suggested 20 per cent. contribution to rates.

Mr. Newton: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd 9691), the estimated numbers of pensioners who would cease to qualify for housing benefit is shown in the table. As explained in paragraph 2·12 of the technical annex, estimates of capital holdings are highly uncertain: it is not therefore possible to provide a precise analysis of the effects of the structural change to the capital rule, and they are not included in the following estimates.

Effect of Structural Reform of Housing Benefit

Numbers ceasing to be entitled to housing benefit	Without 20 per cent. rates contribution	With 20 per cent. rates contribution
	Thousands, Great Britain
Pensioner households
Local authority tenants	50	90
Owner-occupiers	60	180
Others	20	40
Total	140	310

Notes:
1. The estimates exclude the effects of the family credit proposals.
2. The estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.
3. Some totals may not be equal to the sum of the component parts because of rounding.

Income-related Assistance

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current total number of people in Great Britain dependent on income-related assistance; and what is his estimate of the number that will be dependent on income-related assistance in 1988 and 1990.

Mr. Major: I regret the precise information requested is not available. The latest estimate of the number of people wholly or partly dependent on the main income-related benefits relates to 1983 when an estimated 14 million people were living in families receiving supplementary benefit, housing benefit or family income supplement. This estimate is derived from family expenditure survey data for 1983 and therefore excludes persons not living in private households.

No firm estimates are available for 1988 or 1990, but on the basis of the illustrative rates quoted in Cmnd. 9691 it is estimated that the average numbers in 1988 receiving benefit will increase by around 200,000 in the case of family credit because of substantial improvements over FIS, remain broadly the same for income support and that somewhat over 750,000 fewer householders will receive housing benefit. This assumes a 20 per cent. minimum rates contribution but does not take account of any households excluded from housing benefit through the proposed capital rules.

Practice Nurses

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy regarding the employment by group medical practices of practice nurses; and what is his policy regarding reimbursement of the costs generated (a) when community nurses are available and (b) when such nurses are not available.

Mr. Hayhoe: General medical practitioners, as self-employed contractors, may employ nurses in their practices whether or not health authority community nurses are available. Under their contract with the National Health Service, general medical practitioners are reimbursed expenses incurred in providing general medical services. Seventy per cent of the salaries of certain staff, including practice nurses, are reimbursed direct to doctors employing them and the remainder is reimbursed indirectly, on an average basis, through the provision made for practice expenses in fees and allowances.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of outstanding appeals involving the elderly and disabled in receipt of board and lodgings assistance; and from which areas they come.

Mr. Major: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Health Authorities (Agencies)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information is available to his Department on the use of local agencies by health authorities.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities make use of local agencies at their discretion and are not in general required to make available to my Department information about such contacts.

Private Practice (Handbook)

Mr Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the differences between the draft handbook on the management of private practice issued in July 1985 and the final handbook published in March 1986;

(2) if he will list the differences between the handbook on the management of private practice issued in March 1986 and his Department's guidance to health authorities before the release of the handbook in its draft form in July 1985.

Mr. Hayhoe: The differences between the draft and final versions of the handbook reflect the outcome of wide consultation on the draft. The principal changes made were as follows. In the passage on access to National Health Service facilities, it has been made clear that private in-patients and the private patients of general practitioners are legally entitled to become NHS patients, whilst emphasising that those who do change status must gain no advantage over other NHS patients by so doing. The passage on rental agreements has been amended to indicate that agreements between a health authority and a consultant for the use of accommodation in NHS hospitals to see private patients covered by sections 65 and 66 of the NHS Act 1977 should not be made. The rules governing release of health records have been described with greater precision. There were many other detailed amendments to the presentation rather than to the substance.

Previously, guidance to health authorities was spread over a number of separate circulars issued in the last six years, and was not comprehensive. One of the main purposes of the handbook was to draw all the relevant material together in one place to help health authorities to manage private practice more effectively. Most of the earlier guidance remains unchanged in the handbook, but there are many differences apart from those listed above. For example, a description of the legislative framework is included. The designation of private patient officers is made a requirement. The respective responsibilities of health authorities and hospital consultants are set out. The guidance on identification of private patients and on obtaining undertakings to pay charges makes plain that, while a system to be universally used is not being prescribed, a proper system capable of identifying private patients and getting an undertaking from them must be in place in every health authority. Exemptions from obtaining undertaking to pay charges are removed. Consultants are no longer allowed to act as authorities' agents for the collection of hospital charges. Private patients are required to meet the full cost of non-emergency ambulance transport.

The changes overall make for greater clarity and precision in the guidance issued to health authorities in the handbook published last month.

Health Authorities (Services)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report details of the progress made by district health authorities in putting their services out to tender in the manner of the answer to the hon. Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr) on 12 June 1985, Official Report, columns 482-86.

Mr. Whitney: The position on 31 December 1985 is shown in the tables. We are aware of 123 contracts which have been let to private contractors and these will realise an estimated £18·2 million in annual savings. 396 tenders have been secured by in-house organisations and these will produce estimated savings of £23·7 million a year.

Mr. Len Peach

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which regional health authority chairmen he consulted about the appointment of Mr. Len Peach to chair the National Health Service Training Authority.

Mr. Barney Hayhoe: All regional health authority chairmen were consulted before my right hon. Friend's announcement that Mr. Peach would be appointed chairman of the National Health Service Training Authority in July.

Residential Units (Sales)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 6 December 1985, Official Report, column 403, if he will list the residential units which regional and special health authorities are proposing to sell, giving in each case the number of residential places involved.

Mr. Hayhoe: The summaries I referred to in my reply to the hon. Member on 24 March at column 382 will contain details of the number of units of accomodation each district and special health authority proposes to sell, but will not identify the particular properties involved, as this information is not being collected centrally.

Lambeth and West Lambeth

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 25 November, Official Report, columns 491-93 (a) whether Lambeth and West Lambeth were separate health authorities in 1982-83 and (b) whether audit reports in relation to income from private practice have been issued for 1984-85 for health authorities other than those listed.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. I regret that my earlier reply contained an error; the Lambeth DHA entry in column 493 should have read Cambridge DHA.

In 1984-85 the following additional audit reports, relating to income from private practice, were issued:

Newcastle DHA
North West Hertfordshire DHA
North Bedfordshire DHA
Coventry DHA
Bath DHA

Health Authorities and Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the information which was routinely collected from health authorities and family practitioner committees at the time of his answer of 15 July 1985, Official Report, columns 60-63, which is no longer collected, giving in each case the reason for stopping.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Dental Services

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total number of dental surgeries in use under the community dental service in each year since 1975.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested is as follows:

	Numbers
1975	2,182
1976	2,215
1977	2,278
1978	2,338
1979	2,318
1980	2,355
1981	2,406
1982	2,413
1983	2,421
1984	2,431

The figure for 1985 is not yet available.

Health Authorities (Finance)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each district health authority and each special health authority the total revenue and the total capital allocation in each year from 1978-79 to 1986-87.

Mr. Hayhoe: The table shows revenue and capital allocations made to special health authorities (bourds of governors prior to the 1982 reorganisation) for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals in the years 1978-79 to 1986-87. I regret that the information available centrally does not include details of allocations made by regional to district health authorities.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 1979-80 and for 1984-85 the average pay levels for the following categories of National Health Service staff (a) nursing and midwifery, (b) medical and dental, (c) professional and technical, (d) works, (e) maintenance, (f) administrative and clerical and (g) ancillary, expressing the figures for 1984-85 both in money terms and in 1979-80 terms, as deflated by the retail prices index.

Mr. Whitney: Figures for 1979-80 are not available in any form. The following average gross weekly earnings for full-time staff in 1984-85 are estimated from returns supplied by 10 English regions.

	(1) Average gross weekly earnings 1984-85 £	(2) Column (1) deflated by RPI to show 1979-80 equivalent £

(g) Ancillary	111·67	73·14

* Reliable estimates not available.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give for 31 December 1984 for each health district (a) the total number of beds in private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975, (b) the total number of state registered nurses working in those institutions and the appropriate whole-time equivalent figure and (c) the total number of all nursing staff working in those institutions and the appropriate whole-time equivalent figure;

(2) if he will give for 31 December 1984 for each health district (a) the total number of beds in private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975 which contain operating theatres, (b) the total number of state registered nurses working in those institutions and the appropriate whole-time equivalent figure and (c) the total number of all nursing staff working in those institutions and the appropriate whole-time equivalent figure;

(3) if he will list (a) the registered nursing homes with operating theatres and (b) all registered nursing homes which were registered (i) on 31 December 1983 but not 31 December 1982 and (ii) on 31 December 1984 but not 31 December 1983;

(4) if he will list the registered nursing homes with operating theatres in England on 31 December 1984, giving in each case the number of beds and the health district and region;

(5) what is the total number of private hospitals, homes and clinics registered on 31 December 1984 under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975 as amended by the Health Services Act 1980 which contain both operating theatres and (a) pathology departments and (b) radiology departments, and if he will give the figures for each region;

(6) what were the total numbers of (a) private hospitals, homes and clinics registered on 31 December 1984 under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975 which contain operating theatres and (b) beds which they contain; and if he will give the figures for each region;

(7) what were the total numbers of (a) private hospitals, homes and clinics registered on 31 December 1984 under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975 and (b) beds which they contain; and if he will give the figures for each region;

(8) what are the total numbers of (a) nursing staff and (b) medical practitioners employed (i) by all the private hospitals, homes and clinics registered on 31 December 1984 under section 3 of the Nursing Homes Act 1975 as amended by the Health Services Act 1980 and (ii) by those private hospitals, homes and clinics which contain operating theatres; and if he will give the figures for each region.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have the available information as soon as possible.

Consultants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for 30 September 1985 for each region and each special health authority and board of governors the total number of consultants holding (a) full-time, (b) maximum part-time, (c) other part-time and (d) honorary contracts.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Number of consultant contracts for each Regional Health Authority, Special Health Authority and Boards of Governors 30 September 1985

	Total	Total	Permanent paid			Honorary

General Notes:

1. Senior Hospital Medical/Dental Officers (with allowance) are included.
2. For Special Health Authorities/Boards of Governors maximum part-time figures are not readily available and have been included with the other part-time figures.
3. There is some duplication in the figures due to some consultants holding contracts in more than one region and/or with more than one Special Health Authority/Board of Governors.

Health Authorities (Ancillary Services)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report each regional health authority's list of approved companies for providing ancillary services.

Mr. Whitney: I regret the information requested is not held centrally.

NHS (Reorganisation)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, following the 1982 National Health Service reorganisation, (a) how many retired staff were subsequently reappointed, (b) how many of these were subsequently dismissed, (c) how many of these took their cases to the industrial tribunal and were found to have been unfairly dismissed and (d) what is the total amount that has been paid out in compensation as a result.

Mr. Whitney: Of the 147 National Health Service staff who took early retirement following the 1982 re-organisation and who were subsequently re-employed by health authorities, 35 were dismissed. Seven of these officers made claims for unfair dismissal: two were settled out of court and in the other five industrial tribunals upheld the claims. I understand that total compensation paid out was about £43,000.

Private Patients

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library notes setting out how the 1986-87 private (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient charges were calculated.

Mr. Hayhoe: This has been done.

NHS Hospitals

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each district health authority the total number of National Health Service hospitals and the total number of beds therein in 1985.

Mr. Whitney: Figures for 1985 are not yet available. For the 1979 to 1984 figures, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 16 December 1985 at columns 84-96.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of supplementary benefit claimants at the Westminster office of his Department in Regency street, London, are normally permanently resident in (a) Liverpool and (b) Merseyside; what are the numbers involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I regret this information is not available.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many children in the London borough of Newham are in families on supplementary benefit now; and what were the comparable figures in 1979.

Mr. Major: In the year ended December 1984, the latest for which information is available, there were approximately 13,000 children in families on supplementary benefit in the London borough of Newham. A comparable figure for 1979 is not available.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. David Young asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether circular HC/83/18 issued to Bolton and other health authorities was advisory or obligatory; what action he contemplated in cases of non-compliance; what named authorities in England have not complied with the circular; and what action has been taken, or what action is contemplated, in each case.

Mr. Whitney: The circular made it clear that all health authorities were expected to comply with our policy on competitive tendering. To date three health authorities—Brent, Greenwich and Lewisham/North Southwark—have refused to draw up programmes. Two others—Leeds Eastern and Rotherham—have suspended their programmes. We are satisfied that the actions currently being taken by regional health authority chairmen and regional general managers will result in satisfactory programmes being drawn up by those authorities. It is too soon to consider what further action we might take, but we are satisfied that my right hon. Friend has sufficient powers should they be needed.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the level of service provided by the ambulance service in Barking and Dagenham has been and will be maintained; and what changes have been made in the past year.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks, as it is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the South-West Thames regional health authority, which manages the London ambulance service on behalf of the Thames regions, for this information.

Pensions and Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been (a) the single person's pension, (b) the married couple's pension and (c) supplementary benefit scale rates for (i) a single person and (ii) a married couple as a proportion of national average earnings each year since 1979; and what information he has on comparable figures in France, Germany, the United States of America, Sweden, Italy and Belgium.

Mr. Major: Details of the rates of benefit and the amount of such rates expressed as a proportion of national average earnings are contained in the "Abstract of Statistics for Index of Retail Prices, Average Earnings, Social Security Benefits and Contributions" (tables 5.1, 5.6 and 5.7) a copy of which is in the Library.

Such information as is available regarding benefits in France, Germany, Italy and Belgium is contained in the Department's annual publication "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the Member States of the European Communities, Portugal and Spain". Copies are held in the Library for each year since 1973. I regret that information is not available which would enable reliable comparisons to be made to the national average wage in each member state of the European Community.

For information on benefit levels in the United States of America, I refer the hon. Member to the Social Security Bulletin of January 1986, Vol. 49, No. 1, page 74, as issued by the United States Department of Health and Human Services. Information regarding Sweden as at 1 July 1984 is contained in the Council of Europe publication "Comparative Tables of the Social Security Systems in Council of Europe Member States not belonging to the European Communities". Copies of both publications are in the Library. I regret that there is no information readily available regarding Sweden for earlier years.

Joint Funding Projects

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by health board area the number of joint funding projects now operating, or authorised, together with the annual cost to the health boards and to their partners in the projects.

Mr. Whitney: This information about individual projects by health authority in England is not held centrally.

Population Statistics

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the increase in population of New Commonwealth with Pakistan ethnic origin during each of the last 10 years taking account of births, deaths, migration drift and other factors.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is not available for each of the last 10 years. Also, there has been a change in the method of estimating the size of the ethnic minority groups.

For the period 1974-79, it is estimated that the average annual increase in the size of the population in Great Britain of New Commonwealth and Pakistan ethnic origin (excluding those from the Mediterranean countries) was 77,000 a year. The figures were published in OPCS Monitor PP1 81/6 issued in December 1981. For the period 1979-84 results of the labour force survey indicate that the average annual increase in the size of the total non-white groups in the population was about 90,000 a year. This estimate is not strictly comparable with that for the period 1974-79 for it covers a wider range of ethnic minority groups.

An article giving further information about the change in the basis for estimating ethnic minority populations is to be published in June in the next issue of Population Trends.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the increase for each year since 1980 in (a) the single person's pension, (b) the married couple's pension, (c) the retail prices index and (d) the level of earnings, taking in each case the 1980 figure as 100.

Mr. Major: The information requested is in the table:

Index of movement in the level of retirement pension, retail prices and average earnings (whole economy, seasonably adjusted)
November 1985 = 100

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Retirement pension
single person	100	109·0	121·0	125·4	131·9	141·1
married couple	100	109·0	121·0	125·4	131·9	141·1
Retail price index	100	112·0	119·0	124·7	130·9	138·0
Average earnings	100	111·5	120·8	129·7	138·1	150·0

Mental Patients

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received as to the quality of community care given to discharged mental patients who have been placed in residential hostel accommodation;

(2) what steps are taken to ensure the standards of hostel accommodation to which long-term mental health patients are discharged;

(3) what inspection arrangements have been made in respect of those hostels to which long-stay mental patients are discharged.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients were discharged from long-stay mental hospitals to hostel accommodation in the years 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not available centrally.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers of patients in each of the secure mental hospitals in England; what were the numbers of staff in post for each institution on 1 January 1979; and what were the equivalent figures for 1 January 1986, in each of the posts in each institution.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is as follows:

	1 January 1979		1 January 1986
	Patients	Staff in Post	Patients	Staff in Post
Broadmoor hospital	708	686	491	847
Moss Side hospital	373	452	252	559
Park Lane hospital	69	176	302	636
Rampton hospital	883	877	581	1,104

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies he carries out into the numbers of persons drawing unemployment benefit who are classed as suitable and competent to obtain available employment but who are not actively seeking to do so.

Mr. Major: The Department has not carried out any studies specifically into the extent to which unemployed benefit claimants are actively seeking work but a considerable volume of information on this subject is available from some more general studies. I would draw my hon. Friend's attention in particular to the report on the DHSS cohort study of unemployed men, "For Richer, For Poorer?" (pages 40 to 43) and to the report on some aspects of the labour force survey (Employment Gazette for October 1985, pages 393 and 396), copies of which are in the Library.

Rents

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many tenants in receipt of housing benefit have had their rents registered with the rent officer.

Mr. Major: No information is available on the number of tenants in receipt of housing benefit whose rents are registered.

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures he has taken to ensure that rents levied from tenants in receipt of housing benefit have been registered with the rent officer.

Mr. Major: Where there is a regulated tenancy, the local authority may apply to the rent officer for the registration of a fair rent. This is a matter for the authority concerned but it is not expected to apply for a rent to be registered simply because a claim for housing benefit has been made.

Authorities also have the power under the housing benefit scheme to restrict the amount of rent eligible for benefit in certain circumstances if the local authority consider the rent is unreasonably high or the accommodation is unreasonably expensive.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount paid in housing benefit via local authorities to claimants during 1985.

Mr. Major: Information about housing benefit expenditure is available only on the basis of financial years. Latest estimates available from local authorities subsidy claims indicate that authorities paid £4·2 billion in housing benefit in the year ending 31 March 1985 and £4·6 billion in the year ending 31 March 1986.

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the administration of the housing benefit system.

Mr. Major: We believe that there is scope for improvement in the housing benefits scheme and its administration. Our proposals for reform include measures to simplify the system and to encourage and assist authorities to run the scheme as efficiently as possible.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many disabled married women have become entitled to receive the severe disablement allowance since November 1984 who did not have reserved rights because of their entitlement to the housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension before that date.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986]: As at March 1985, severe disablement allowance had been awarded to 2,700 married women who were not entitled to a non-contributory invalidity pension before November 1984. In the year to March 1986, provisional figures indicate that the allowance has been awarded to a further 3,700 married women who had not been entitled to the former benefit.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many disabled married women became entitled to receive the housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension in each of the years since its inception; and how many of these are currently in receipt of severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986]: As at 30 March 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, 53,900 women were receiving severe disablement allowance by reason of their earlier entitlement to housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension. The numbers of awards made in 1978 and in each of the following years are set out in the table. The figures include cohabiting women as well as married women. Information for 1977 is not available.

Mr. Christopher Herrick

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the claim for industrial injury benefit submitted on 10 November 1985 by Mr. Christopher Herrick of 20 Chapel walk, Worksop following an accident last August has not yet been processed; and what action he intends to take.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 578]: Arrangements have been made to process the claim without further delay and I have written to the hon. Member.

PRIME MINISTER

9 Signals Regiment, Cyprus (Report)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister when Her Majesty's Government now hope to receive the report from Mr. David Calcutt QC into the procedures adopted during investigation of airmen and other service men of 9 Signals Regiment based in Cyprus, acquitted in October 1985; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence received Mr. Calcutt's report on 9 April. He intends to publish it as soon as it has been cleared by the security authorities and he has completed his initial consideration of it.

Civil Servant-Ministerial Relations

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what response has been sent to the letter from the Secretary of the Council of Civil Service Unions to Sir Robert Armstrong about civil servants' relations with Ministers.

The Prime Minister: The council's request for a discussion of duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers has been agreed.

Civil Servants (Duties)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister when she expects to receive the report of the committee chaired by Sir Robert Armstrong and Sir Peter Middleton on duties of civil servants.

The Prime Minister: There is no such committee. This subject is one of a number of longer-term issues under discussion between representatives of the Cabinet Office and the Treasury and representatives of the Council of Civil Service Unions. I cannot predict a date for the outcome of these discussions, on which the report of the Select Committee on the Treasury and Civil Service, which has also been considering these matters, will no doubt have a bearing.

Ministerial Guidelines

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether she is making a copy of the guidelines for Ministers in their relations with civil servants and the media available to the Council of Civil Service Unions.

The Prime Minister: No.

Civil Servants (Code of Ethics)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what plans she has to draw up a code of ethics for civil servants.

The Prime Minister: As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Privy Council Office, has made clear in answers to questions in the House, the Government are not convinced of the need for such a code, or indeed of the feasibility of preparing guidance of sufficiently general applicability going beyond what is already available; but this is a matter which, together with other long-term issues affecting the civil service, is under discussion with the Council of Civil Service Unions.

President of South Korea

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her recent meeting with the President of South Korea.

The Prime Minister: During the visit to Britain of President Chun Doo Hwan from 7-10 April he and I talked about current international issues, particularly East-West relations, with special reference to the Korean peninsula. We also discussed ways of increasing international and bilateral trade.

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if the question of democracy and human rights was discussed at her recent meeting with President Chun of South Korea.

The Prime Minister: The recent visit of President Chun doo Hwan of the Republic of Korea has provided a number of opportunities to express support for increased personal freedoms and the development of democracy in Korea.

GCHQ Employees

Mr. Alton asked the Prime Minister how many notices warning Government communications headquarters' employees who have rejoined Civil Service unions of disciplinary action have been issued.

The Prime Minister: Since 13 March 20 employees at GCHQ have been notified that they would face disciplinary proceedings unless they complied with their conditions of service by resigning from trade unions.

Fulham

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Fulham.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing (Bradford)

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much the Housing Corporation has authorised housing associations to spend in the Bradford metropolitan district council area in 1986-87, and in the Bradford, North constituency; how these figures compare with last year's figures; and to what he attributes the difference.

Sir George Young: The Housing Corporation has made the following allocations for housing association expenditure in Bradford MDC and in my hon. Friend's Bradford, North constituency for the years 1985-86 and 1986-87:

	1985-86 million £	1986-87 million £
(i) Bradford Metropolitan District Council
Fair rent (block 3)	5·10	6·00
Low Cost Home Ownershp	1·97	0·95
Total	7·07	6·95
(ii) Bradford North Constituency
Fair rent (block 3)	1·8	2·1
Low Cost Home Ownership	0·1	0·5
Total	1·9	2·6

Two factors have led to the increase in the allocation for Bradford for fair rent schemes the increased concentration of resources into inner city areas in 1986-87, and Bradford's score on the Housing Corporation's housing needs indicator. The reduction in the amount to be made available for LCHO schemes in 1986-87 reflects the reduced national allocation for LCHO within the 1986-87 ADP. Allocations within Bradford are made by agreement with the city council, taking account of its priorities and those of individual housing associations.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current number of properties (a) in the ownership and (b) under the control of the Property Services Agency; how many of the properties in each case are empty; and if he will give a breakdown of the number of empty properties in each case by local authority area.

Sir George Young: The Property Services Agency currently administers 2,762 properties on the Government's civil estate, the freehold of which is vested in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment; of these, 57 are wholly vacant. The PSA also administers 5,282 leasehold properties on the civil estate, of which 94 are vacant. 1,041 properties are in the process of disposal on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence; details of the numbers of properties in the latter category which are currently vacant are not held centrally.

The number of vacant properties falling into each local authority area could be determined only at disproportionate cost.

Water Pollution

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) of 25 March, Official Report, column 421, he will indicate the reasons for the difference in figures for the number of prosecutions for water pollution offences taken in 1984-85 by the Thames water authority and by the North-West water authority, respectively.

Mrs. Rumbold: Decisions on whether to prosecute in individual circumstances rest with the water authorities concerned. They depend upon a number of factors, including the severity of a particular incident and whether the source of pollution can be clearly identified. As my hon. Friend indicated in his previous reply, water authorities often prefer to adopt a policy of discussion and persuasion rather than instituting legal proceedings.

Thamesmead

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the total cost of each of the elections to decide the future of Thamesmead, specifying (a) the cost of the elections run by private consultants and (b) the cost of the election run by the London borough of Bexley assisted by the London borough of Greenwich.

Sir George Young: The referendum on the future of Thamesmead formed part of a wider project conducted by consultants, and cost about £18,000. The election of board members cost £12,650. The two exercises are not comparable.

Humberside Structure Plan

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish his observations on the Humberside structure plan.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend hopes to publish proposed modifications to the plan in the summer.

Central Ordnance Depot, Donnington

(Asbestos Removal)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if a Minister from his Department will meet a delegation of workers from COD Donnington to discuss the removal of asbestos from the office block at the depot before work starts.

Sir George Young: I do not think any useful purpose would be served by either myself or a Minister from the Ministry of Defence meeting a delegation from the workers at Donnington. There has already been the fullest consultation between the MOD management and PSA with the staff at COD Donnington and their trade union representatives.

The Health and Safety Executive has been closely involved and an independent assessment has been made by the occupational health department of Birmingham University; both have confirmed that the work will not present a hazard to staff working within the building. Detailed safety precautions, which have been spelled out fully to the staff, will be written into the contract and rigidly applied by PSA.

I shall write to my hon. Friend and give him further details about the work involved.

Property Services Agency (BUPA Checks)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the Property Services Agency's proposal to allow absence from work to its staff to attend talks and fitness checks provided by BUPA.

Sir George Young: The PSA has, as an experiment, arranged for BUPA to provide free on-site talks on health education for staff in Greater London and at Chessington. Staff were allowed to attend the talks and to undergo any subsequent screening, whether with BUPA, any other private scheme or the NHS during working hours: that is consonant with our normal practice in regard to medical appointments.

County Hall, London

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the area of office accommodation in county hall, London, in square feet, together with the approximate area of such space occupied by each of the principal continuing organisation and units whose function concern two or more London boroughs.

Mr. Tracey: I understand that the usable floor area of county hall is approximately 807,000 square feet, of which the main building represents about 462,000 square feet. My right hon. Friend does not have the details requested concerning occupancy.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects the Thamesmead Community Trust to take over the ownership of land and buildings at Thamesmead from the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: If all the necessary arrangements proceed as planned, ownership should pass to Thamesmead town during the summer.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the boundaries of the area to be transferred from the London Residuary Body to the Thamesmead Community Trust, indicating the total acreage involved.

Sir George Young: Map No. 3 which accompanied Statutory Instrument 1986 No. 148 the Local Government Reorganisation (Property Etc) Order 1986, a copy of which has been deposited in the Library, defines the boundaries of Thamesmead. We estimated that the total acreage is about 1,800 acres.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated value of the land and buildings to be transferred from the London Residuary Body to the Thamesmead Community Trust.

Sir George Young: The valuation process is currently in train.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when staff declared redundant by virtue of abolition of the Greater London Council might expect to receive (a) redundancy payments and (b) overtime and other outstanding payments.

Mr. Tracey: These are matters for the London Residuary Body.

Mr. Merlyn Rees asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements have been made by the London Residuary Body to provide right hon. and hon. Members with information on matters for which that body is responsible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The Local Government Act 1985 requires each residuary body to provide my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State with a copy of its annual report and statement of accounts, which are then to be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by the Thames Water Authority to date on removing the insignia of the Greater London Council from property taken over following abolition; which properties were involved; and where the items removed are now located.

Mr. John Patten: This is a matter for the Thames water authority.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what general guidance he has given to the metropolitan districts, London boroughs and joint boards on the co-ordination of land use; planning, passenger transport and highways provision at county level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Guidance notes have been issued to successor authorities on a range of subjects, including those listed in annex P to DOE circular 8/86 "The Local Government Act 1985". Guidance on the co-ordination or planning matters is contained in DOE circular 30/85 "Local Government Act 1985: Sections 3, 4, and 5: Schedule 1: Town and Country Planning: Transitional matters." My right hon. Friend may issue strategic guidance to assist local planning authorities in preparing their unitary development plans. The timing and content of any such guidance will be a matter for discussion with the authorities concerned.

Water Industry (Privatisation)

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision he proposes to make in the water industry privatisation legislation in relation to pension arrangements (a) during the period when the water services public limited companies are owned by the Government and (b) when they are sold to the private sector.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Asbestos (Dumping)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 8 April, Official Report, column 26, what criteria were used to select the site off Cloch Point for dumping asbestos-contaminated material; what consideration was given to alternative sites; what consultations have been held with representatives of local fishing interests about the possible safety implications; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: As I explained in my reply of 8 April at column 26, the Property Services Agency's proposals are still under consideration and a full statement will be issued in due course.

Court Buildings (Scotland)

Mr. Nicholas Fairbairn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the cost of alterations to courthouses in Scotland and new court buildings in Scotland since 1980.

Sir George Young: Many schemes have been undertaken since 1980. The following are the major new works and their costs, completed in the years shown:

	£ million
1980
Glasgow, 280 George Street—Annexe	0·87
1981

In addition, adjacent buildings have just been purchased at a cost of £120,000 for a future scheme at Paisley sheriff court house.

River Orwell SSSI

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, whether, in view of the threat to the River Orwell site of special scientific interest posed by the expansion of the port of Felixstowe, he will compensate for any loss of wetland resources.

Mrs. Rumbold: The nature conservation implications of the Bill in its present form have been drawn to the attention of Parliament. Should it be enacted, the Government would in consultation with the Nature Conservancy Council wish to consider the need for and possibility of measures to mitigate any effects on wildlife.

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the proposal made by the Nature Conservancy Council that the River Orwell site of special scientific interest be designated in the United Kingdom list of wetlands of international importance under 2.1 of the Ramsar convention; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Owners and occupiers of land within the River Orwell SSSI have been consulted by the Nature Conservancy Council about the proposed designation of the area under the Ramsar convention. My officials are currently consulting other interested Departments. A decision on the proposed designation of the site will be made as soon as possible.

Rate Support Grant

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the accumulated reduction in rate support grant since 1978-79 in England at 1986-87 prices breaking down the figures between (a) 1978-79 and 1979-80, (b) 1978-79 and 1980-81, (c) 1978-79 and 1981-82, (d) 1978-79 and 1982-83, (e) 1978-79 and 1983-84, (f) 1978-79 and 1984-85, (g) 1978-79 and 1985-86 and (h) 1978-79 and 1986-87.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information is as follows:

*Reductions in rate support grant at constant 1986-87 prices

Urban Aid (Kirklees)

Mrs. Peacock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will list in order of priority the projects submitted to his Department for approval for urban aid funding by Kirklees metropolitan council in each of the financial years since 1979;

(2) what was the total amount of urban aid funding allocated to Kirklees metropolitan council in each of the financial years since 1979.

Sir George Young: Projects submitted for approval for urban aid funding are normally approved according to local authority priority markings, subject to the availability of resources and to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State being satisfied that the proposals conform to the criteria set out in the urban programme circular relating to the financial year in which approval is sought. Projects submitted by Kirklees metropolitan council were approved as follows:

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he or his officials have had any recent contact with the British Broadcasting Corporation concerning tobacco advertising at sporting events; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My Department's consultations prior to the renegotiation of the voluntary agreement on sports sponsorship by the tobacco companies have, of course, included the BBC, as one of the interested bodies.

Recycled Grant

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to compel a local authority to refund recycled grant in the form of rate reduction; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce legislation to specify what local authorities should do with recycled grant. Local authorities already have powers under section 3 of the Local Government Finance Act 1982 to substitute a lower rate or precept at any time.

Rates

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will publish the overall average unrebated domestic rate bill paid by householders in (a) England and (b) England and Wales in each year since 1966-67.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The estimated figures are as follows:

*Average (unrebated) domestic rate bills

	England £	England and Wales £
1966-67	41	40
1967-68	41	41

* Average unrebated rate bills are derived from the average domestic rate poundages levied by local authorities and average domestic rateable values per herediatment.
† Figures up to 1973-74 are not comparable with those for 1974-75 and later years. This is due to the change of local authorities' responsibilities in 1974, in particular the transfer of water and sewerage services from local authorities to water authorities.
‡ The figures for 1986-87 are provisional.

Contractors (Excess Profits)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions, and for what value in each case, the Property Services Agency has recovered excess profits from contractors (a) as a result of information given by employees to his Department and (b) otherwise; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Fair Rents

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the Rent Acts with a view to requiring local authorities to register fair rents in cases where tenants are in receipt of housing benefit and have not applied to the rent officer themselves within a reasonable period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: No.

Community Support Programme (Docklands)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the numbers of workers in the community support programme submitted to him for 1986-87 by the London Dockland Development Corporation which have not been approved; when he expects to approve such applications; and if, in respect of those where a decision cannot be made within the next seven days, he will make it his policy to retain the relevant personnel for three months beyond 31 March 1986.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 324]: Decisions on all voluntary sector projects submitted by the corporation as part of the community support programme for 1986-87, have now been taken by my Department. All projects which support community workers have been approved.

Sewage Plants

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the number of occasions on which sewage plants failed to achieve their set standards in 1984-85 and as to which plants were involved.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986]: Part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 was implemented last year. Before then, routine information about the performance of sewage plants was not held by my Department. Water authorities are now required to report annually on works which fail to meet the terms of their consents. The first reports, for the year ended 31 December 1986, are due to be submitted early in 1987.

Gloucestershire (Rate Support Grant)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the exact amount of the rate support grant for Gloucestershire county council in (a) 1985-86 and (b) 1986-87, showing for 1986-87 what it was (i) before and (ii) after the grant recycling.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 11 April 1986]: The latest estimate of Gloucestershire county council's block grant entitlement (a) for 1985-86 is £66·738 million under the second supplementary report, (b) for 1986-87 is £62·794 million under the rate support grant report (England) 1986. Current estimates suggest that some £630 million could be available for grant recycling. A supplementary RSG report is needed to adjust the block grant poundage schedule to distribute this money on the proper basis. In the meantime all the money is already being paid to authorities as a single percentage enhancement of their grant entitlement. On this basis Gloucestershire county council's grant rises to £67·967 million.

Fish (Mercury Levels)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to seek a reduction in the European Economic Community's environmental quality standard for mercury levels in fish; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to the reply, 10 April 1986]: The Government have no plans to seek a reduction in the European Economic Community's environmental quality standard for the level of mercury in fish.

TRANSPORT

Port Costs

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take in the light of his Department's report on liner shipping freight, to reduce the burden of light dues on ships using United Kingdom ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of (a) the total extra revenue and (b) the total additional administrative costs, if all yachts had to pay light dues; what assessment he has made of the implications of such a policy in the light of European Economic Community regulations; and what are his intentions on extending light dues in this way.

Mr. Ridley: I have been concerned for some time about the burden that these charges represent for the shipping industry and on the competitiveness of United Kingdom ports in relation to those of our EC neighbours. I asked Arthur Andersen and Co, the consultant accountants, to undertake a major study of the structure of light dues and subsequently I consulted widely on the recommendations that it had made. The most contentious of these were that the liability for light dues should be extended to pleasure craft and fishing vessels. I have given most careful thought to the feasibility of imposing such charges, but I have decided that it is impractical. I do not intend to pursue the idea.

The report, however, identified a number of ways in which the burden of light dues might be spread more equitably between the existing categories of payers. I have asked for a further study of these possibilities to be undertaken in consultation with the general lighthouse authorities and the shipowners. I will make a further statement on the outcome in due course.

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take in the light of his Department's report on liner shipping freight rates to reduce United Kingdom port costs to a level nearer the average for continental ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I am pursuing with the European Commission whether the financial assistance that many continental ports receive from public funds gives them an unfair competitive advantage. One of the main aims of my proposed reform of marine pilotage is to improve its cost-effectiveness. Improvements in operating efficiency are up to the port operators themselves. As the report notes, improvements were reported in 1985.

Association of Former Laker Employees

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport what help his Department is providing to the Association of Former Laker Employees in respect of their claims for compensation from competing airlines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The answer given to the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Hirst) by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 11 December 1985 at columns 623-24 makes it clear that the Government have fundamental objections to the application of United States domestic anti-trust law to aviation activities regulated by international agreements. There is therefore no question of this Department helping anyone to pursue such litigation.

Vehicle Registrations

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether any further change is contemplated arising from his Department's study into the month of changeover of the vehicle age identification letter.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Mr. Wood) on 20 March.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the Channel fixed link concession agreement.

Mr. Ridley: The Channel fixed link concession agreement was published today (Cmnd. 9769) and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Airport Security

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent Israeli or El Al personnel are involved in the provision of security during check-in procedures from arrival at United Kingdom airports until entry into aircraft; and whether this involves the possession or carrying of weapons.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom civil aviation security programme requires that passengers on flights to Israel and their hand baggage should be searched, and that their hold baggage should be screened. El Al personnel undertake these duties in respect of passengers travelling on their flights from Heathrow. For their flights from Manchester, they carry them out jointly with the airport security staff. Any additional checks on passengers and their baggage are at the discretion of the airline. In common with other airlines, El Al is responsible for the security of its own aircraft whilst on the ground at United Kingdom airports. I understand that no El Al personnel have been authorised to carry weapons while carrying out these duties, although that is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Signposts

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to the answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 631, concerning the damaged signpost at junction 30 southbound on the M1 motorway, he will make a statement on the state of repair of the signpost.

Mr. Ridley: I am pleased to say that a new signpost was erected at junction 30 on 7 April.

National Bus Company

Mr. Ellis asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the timetable for the sale of sections of the National Bus Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Transport Act 1985 requires the National Bus Company to dispose of all its operations by January 1989. NBC will aim to complete as many sales as possible by the time of deregulation of the bus industry, particularly of subsidiaries for which staff or other groups have already indicated that they wish to mount an early bid.

Transport Act 1985 (Circular)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received so far from local authorities in response to the circular issued on 4 December by his Department about the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have received some correspondence from local authorities seeking further advice or clarification on various aspects of this circular.

Hackney Carriage Plates

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue fresh guidance to local authorities on their rights to limit the numbers of hackney carriage plates.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. The Government's advice to local authorities on section 16 of the Transport Act 1985 is contained in the circular issued on 4 December. That advice remains unchanged.

Roads

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the circulation of his Department's draft proposal to simplify the closing off and unadoption of roads which it thinks are too expensive to maintain;

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's draft proposal to simplify the closing off and unadoption of roads which it thinks are too expensive to maintain;

(3) what account was taken of rural areas' requirements in the formulation of his Department's draft proposal to simplify the closing off and unadoption of roads which it thinks are too expensive to maintain.

Mr. Ridley: We are currently reviewing the provisions in the Highways Act 1980 for stopping up and diversion of highways. The Act and the review affect both England and Wales but not Scotland. The review is in response to complaints from local authorities and others that the provisions are inefficient, time-consuming and costly to use.

In April 1985 a consultative paper was circulated widely to interested organisations. The responses are being evaluated. It is proposed to replace the requirement on the highway authority to obtain a magistrate's court order before stopping up or diverting a highway with a power for it to make and confirm its own orders. Objections would be heard at a public inquiry before an inspector who would make recommendations to the authority whose decision could be challenged in the High Court. A current right of veto by district, parish or community councils would be replaced by a right to consultation.

The proposals extend to trunk roads, but not to motorways. We are concerned to facilitate disposal of unwanted pieces of trunk road verge and loops of highways made redundant by road re-alignment. The proposals include revised arrangements for footpaths and bridleways and also for the disposal of land after stopping up.

The general purpose of these proposals is to simplify and improve on the present procedures. It is not to enable highway authorities to divest themselves of their maintenance responsibilities and by doing so transfer that responsibility to others. The proposals are not considered to have any adverse implications for rural areas.

Property Acquisitions

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the properties his Department has acquired in Church Manorway, London, SE2, indicating in each case the date of purchase and the date of transfer to the London borough of Greenwich.

Mr. Ridley: The Department has acquired eight properties in Church Manor Way. Seven have been let on short-term lease to Greenwich borough council:

Address	Date of acquisition	Date of letting
Church Manor Way
Number 44	10 October 1985	13 January 1986
Number 60	1 November 1985	10 February 1986
Number 66	5 January 1984	28 February 1984
Number 68	16 March 1983	31 August 1983
Number 74	14 November 1985	10 February 1986
Number 76	26 October 1982	27 October 1982
Number 78	4 April 1986	Not yet
Number 86	26 April 1985	17 June 1985

Shipping

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many ships there were under the United Kingdom flag in each of the last five years.

Mr. Ridley: The number of United Kingdom registered merchant ships of 500 gross registered tons and over at the end of each of the last five years is:

	Number
1981	1,118
1982	985
1983	866
1984	777
1985	693

These figures exclude Government owned vessels, offshore supply vessels, tugs, fishing vessels and other non-trading vessels.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mileage Allowance

45. Mr. Chope asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent mileage rates for casual use by civil servants of their cars on Government business are to be adjusted as a result of recent changes in the price of petrol.

Mr. Brooke: The standard rate of Civil Service car mileage allowance is due for review with effect from 1 April 1986. The review will be based on the April 1986 AA schedule of motoring costs and will take account of recent changes in the price of petrol.

£2 Commonwealth Games Commemorative Coin

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the standard version of the £2 Commonwealth Games commemorative coin will be available.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The standard version of the £2 Commonwealth games coin will be available at face value from Post Offices throughout the United Kingdom from 28 April 1986. Special collectors versions sold at a premium above face value are already available from Post Offices, coin dealers or directly by post from the Royal Mint, Cardiff.

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional responsibilities would be placed on the Bank of England by United Kingdom membership of the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Bank of England would have operational responsibility, as agents for the Treasury, for maintaining sterling's position within the exchange rate mechanism.

Common Agricultural Policy Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why Her Majesty's Government do not accept the need for a supplementary common agricultural policy budget in 1986.

Mr. Brooke: It would be premature to accept the need for a supplementary budget for agricultural expenditure until the Commission and Council of Ministers have undertaken a thorough examination of the justification for the extra spending and of the scope for economies to offset it.

Northern Constabulary (Travel Warrants)

Mr. Wallace asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received in the current year regarding the taxation of concessionary travel warrants given to police officers of the Northern Constabulary stationed in Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Five letters and representations have been received on this subject since 6 April 1985. The travel warrants concerned are a valuable benefit and are taxed in accordance with normal income tax rules.

Capital Transfer Tax

Dr. Glyn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received seeking the exclusion from the proposed implementation of his Budget proposals on capital transfer tax of certain insurance-based plans and other trusts completed on Budget day itself; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Two representations have been received. One suggests that the Budget proposals affecting gifts with reservation should be effective from the time of the Budget announcement. The other suggests the proposals should be effective from midnight on Budget Day. The inheritance tax proposals apply to gifts made on Budget day itself, and it is right that the provisions for the new charge on gifts with reservation should come into force at the same time. If they did not, a gift made on 18 March would have the benefit of the new reliefs without being subject (where appropriate) to the new charge.

Johnson Matthey Bank

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the sale of Johnson Matthey Bank.

Mr. Stewart: The sale is a matter for the Bank of England.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will ensure that all public money put into Johnson Matthey Bank by the Bank of England are recovered with interest; and what he calculates the interest would be.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The recovery of money put into JMB is a matter for the Bank of England. I refer the hon. Member to the press release issued by the Bank of England on 10 April, a copy of which is in the Library.

Income Tax

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the gain from the 1p cut in the pound in income tax to a taxpayer with a wife and two children aged five and 11 years earning £5,000, £7,500, £10,000, £15,000, £20,000, £30,000, £50,000 and £100,000 per annum respectively.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will up-date, to take account of the 1986 Budget, the information on income tax reductions provided in his reply of 4 April 1985 to the hon. Member for Thurrock, Official Report column 709-10;

(2) if, pursuant to the answer given on 25 February, Official Report, columns 502-8, about gains and losses from tax changes, he will show in each of the income ranges the number of units paying tax in 1986-87 and the aggregate and individual charges in 1986-87 compared with the indexed 1978-79 tax structure.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his replies, 27 March 1986, c. 602 and 8 April 1986, c. 92]: The table shows the reductions in income tax liabilities, at 1986-87 income levels, of the proposed 1986-87 allowances, thresholds and rates compared with the 1978-79 regime indexed to 1986-87 levels by reference to the statutory formula. The comparisons therefore allow for budgetary changes in income tax rates and allowances, but not for any changes in the definition of the income tax base. As child tax allowances were being phased out in 1978-79, they have been excluded from the comparison.

*Range of total income in 1986-87 £	Number of units paying tax in 1986-87 (million)	Reductions in income tax compared with 1978-79 indexed regime Amount £ million	Average per† tax unit £

Married Man's Tax Allowance

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what is the cost to the Exchequer at the 1986-87 tax rates announced in the Budget of the married man's tax allowance in excess of the corresponding single person's allowance; how much of this cost is attributable to taxpayers aged below 65 years; and what is the weekly value of this extra relief to the married man paying income tax at the standard rate.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 605]: The direct revenue cost of the married man's allowance, in excess of the single person's allowance, is estimated to be £4·5 billion in a full year at 1986-87 income levels. Of this, some £3·8 billion is in respect of those aged under 65. The extra relief is worth £7·36 a week in 1986-87 to a basic rate taxpayer not entitled to age allowance.

Tax and National Insurance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the cases of a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum, making an annual investment of £40,000 from his earnings under the business expansion scheme as well as claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £306·25, (b) an annual investment of £5,000 into an approved pension and (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £1,000;

(2) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the case of a married man with earnings of £30,000 per annum, and making an annual investment from his earnings of £5,000 under the business expansion scheme as well as claiming tax relief on (a) a mortgage loan of £30,000, assuming a monthly interest payment of £306·25, (b) an annual investment of £1,500 into an approved pension and (c) a life insurance policy taken out before 13 March 1984 and with an annual premium of £200;

(3) if he will show tax and national insurance in 1986-87 as a proportion of earnings, together with a breakdown of the reliefs and allowances applicable in the following cases: (a) a married man with earnings of £30,000 per annum, (b) a married man with earnings of £100,000 per annum (c) a married man on the level of average male earnings assumed for 1986 and (d) a single person earning £100 per week.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his replies, 8 April 1986, c. 98-9]: The information is as follows:

DEFENCE

Research

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to spend more money in the universities on research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Our aim is to increase defence spending on research work in universities and other institutions of higher education to at least £15 million a year.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has for spending to date under the scheme for joint research grants for work of scientific merit as relevant to defence, in concert with the research council.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No expenditure has yet been incurred from defence funds. Spending is expected to build up during the present financial year but it is not possible at this stage to predict to what level.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for greater collaboration with the academic sector in the provision and use of research facilities.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A joint capital investment review body has been set up, and information exchange on available and planned facilities is proceeding. Applications for joint research grants may, subject to availability, include the use of Ministry of Defence research facilities, and possibilities of wider use are being studied.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to encourage co-operation in the research field between higher education and industry on defence-related matters.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Government wishes to encourage co-operation in defence-related research between industry and higher education. We are currently studying the best ways of achieving this.

Sponsorship Scheme

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of, and how many students are involved in, his sponsorship scheme to assist those wishing to study (a) engineering and (b) science.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The current number of external students on the Ministry of Defence sponsorship scheme studying engineering is around 250, at a cost of approximately £500,000. The figures for science students are 108 and £200,000 respectively. It is planned to expand the scheme for the 1986 intake.

South Korea

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom military personnel are based in South Korea.

Mr. Stanley: There are 42 United Kingdom military personnel currently stationed in South Korea. Thirty-five serve with the United Nations honour guard and a further seven with the Commonwealth liaison mission to the United Nations command. These include our defence attache, who acts as Commonwealth member of the Military Armistice Commission and commands the Commonwealth liaison mission, and also an assistant defence attache.

Royal Navy (Emergencies)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the numbers of ships under the United Kingdom flag which are available to the Royal Navy for use in emergencies; and how many there have been in each of the last five years.

Mr. Stanley: The number of United Kingdom registered mechant ships available in each of the years 1980-84 in the principal categories required for defence purposes are set out on page 30 of Vol. 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985" (Cmnd. 9430).

Submarine Refit Capacity

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of submarine refit capacity in the private sector; what account he took of this in assessing the need for investment in Her Majesty's dockyard, Rosyth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Responses to the invitation to tender for the commercial refit of HMS Otter—one of the vessels in the comparability exercise in which commercial refits of a frigate and a submarine are being compared with dockyard refits—covered the extent of private sector capability for refitting conventional submarines. However, no United Kingdom company has the resources needed to undertake refuelling-refitting of nuclear submarines, for which the planned investment at Rosyth is primarily intended.

THE ARTS

Arts Funding

34. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received from arts organisations whose funding has been affected by abolition of the Greater London council and metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Luce: I have had a considerable number of representations; but I am happy to say that the position of the vast majority of organisations in these areas has been made secure.

Sponsorship

40. Mr. Proctor asked the Minister for the Arts what extra amounts of private business revenue for the Arts he estimates will result from the changes announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget speech for the financial year 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I refer to the answer given to my right hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway).

European Community

41. Mr. Murphy asked the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had within the framework of the European Community for the arts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I attended a meeting of European Ministers of Culture in Brussels on 20 December 1985. I expect to chair such a meeting myself later this year during the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Community.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when, pursuant to his reply of 17 March, Official Report, column 86, the hon. Member for Newham North-West might expect to receive a breakdown by numbers and categories of full-time staff employed by the South Bank board in the South Bank concert halls following abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply within the next two weeks.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts how many of the staff employed on the South Bank by (a) Argus Shield, (b) the Blue Arrow Company, (c) Pall Mall, and (d) Matthew Hall were previously employed by the Greater London Council or its contractors immediately prior to abolition of the council on 31 March.

Mr. Luce: Former GLC or subcontracted employees now working on the South Bank for the companies in question are as follows:

(a) Argus Shield—1
(two applications currently being considered);
(b) The Blue Arrow Company—2;
(c) Pall Mall—None;
(d) Matthew Hall—1.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his answer of 24 March, Official Report, column 389, what is the policy of the South Bank board towards meeting the cost of members travelling from abroad to attend board meetings or business.

Mr. Luce: The board will consider such costs as and when they arise.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he will list the arts groups in London by name and location which have still not been informed of their funding pattern by the Arts Council following abolition of the Greater London Council.

Mr. Luce: The largest of the Arts Council's London clients (the National theatre, English national opera, the London festival ballet, and the London orchestral concerts board), have already been informed. Other settlements are in every case contingent on grant decisions yet to be announced by individual boroughs or, collectively, by the London boroughs' grant scheme. All announcements should have been made by the end of this month.

CIVIL SERVICE

Ethnic Monitoring

42. Mr. Janner asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on the current state of ethnic monitoring in the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: The staff surveys are progressing and should be completed by mid 1988. Monitoring of executive officer recruitment nationally has begun and departments are monitoring a selection of their recruitment schemes this year as a trial run.

Written Answers to Questions

SCOTLAND

Scottish Office, Whitehall

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the area in square feet of the Scottish Office in Whitehall;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of people employed by the Scottish Office in Whitehall.

Mr. Rifkind: The area of my Department's Whitehall office is 25,192 sq ft gross and at 1 April 1986 43 people were based there.

Universities (Funding)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell), Official Report, 27 February, column 664, how he intends to consult students whose student unions are not affiliated to the National Union of Students on the recommendations of the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Committee for the future funding of Scottish universities.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Student unions which are not affiliated to the National Union of Students, or which for other reasons wished to respond independently to the open invitation from my right hon. Friend the member for Ayr in his statement of 9 December 1985, at column 460, were free to do so. A number did respond by 27 March, but further comments could still be considered.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotlnd what is the proposed budget for the Scottish Development Agency in each year from 1986-87 to 1988-89.

Mr. Allan Stewart: For information on the agency's proposed budget for 1986-87 I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 20 March 1986, at columns 141-42. Decisions have not yet been taken on the agency's budget for 1987-88 and 1988-89. Information on the overall net provision for the agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board is contained in the Scottish Office's commentary on the Scotland programme of the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9702.

Leukaemia

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the validation of the cases of leukaemia in 0 to 24-year-olds occurring in Scotland between 1968 and 1981 is now complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The validation of the Scottish figures given to the Black inquiry, appointed to investigate the possible raised incidence of cancer in west Cumbria, has now been completed. Validation was undertaken by teams of haematologists who reviewed the available notes, slides and other information on every known case of leukaemia in 0 to 24-year-olds in Scotland between 1968 and 1981. The results, which show virtually no change from the information given to the Black inquiry, are shown in the tables.

My principal concern now is to put these figures in the context of a study of leukaemia clusters throughout Scotland being undertaken by the information services division of the Common Services Agency. This study, which is I believe the first of its kind, will use small area data to identify clusters. It should allow us to establish where and when clusters of leukaemia occur. The results of this new study, which will be published, will also be submitted to the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Welsh Language (Cheques)

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General if cheques made out in the Welsh language by residents of Wales, payable to the county court or to the Lord Chancellor finance branch, are accepted by the Lord Chancellor's Department and by the courts in Wales.

The Attorney-General: Yes, subject to the normal checks required for confirmation to the collecting bank.

Court of Appeal (Judgment on Appeal)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Attorney-General if he will state the circumstances in which the arguments on which a judgment on appeal is based in the Court of Appeal (Civil Division) are recorded.

The Attorney-General: The Association of Shorthand Writers Ltd. records all proceedings before the Court of Appeal (Civil Division), including the submissions of counsel.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Attorney-General if he will state the circumstances in which a transcript of the relevant proceedings of a judgment on appeal in the Court of Appeal (Civil Division) may be made available to the parties concerned.

The Attorney-General: Transcripts of the judgments given by the Court of Appeal (Civil Division) and of any orders made as to costs are held by the Supreme Court library and are available for public inspection free of charge. Transcripts of any part of the proceedings before the Court of Appeal (Civil Division) may be purchased by the parties from the Association of Shorthand Writers Ltd. on payment of the appropriate fee.

TRANSPORT

Motorways (Construction Contracts)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, for each of the 39 motorway construction contracts announced by his Department for 1986-87, he will specify the total cost involved; and if he will also give the cumulative cost to public funds of the whole programme.

Mr. Ridley: The information requested for each of the 39 contracts is set out in the table. The total cost of the 39 contracts is estimated at about £89 million. That includes six reserve schemes (numbers 34-39) estimated to cost about £6 million, which will proceed in 1986-87 if funds are available.

Marine Pilotage

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the proper number of pilots required in the Southampton and Isle of Wight district.

Mr. Ridley: It is not for me to make such estimates. The most recent returns available for the Pilotage commission show a "proper or agreed number" of 56·46 on 31 December 1984 for the Isle of Wight pilotage district, which includes Southampton.

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the proper number of pilots required in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ridley: The number of pilots required is at present a matter for the pilotage authorities. Following the proposed reorganisation of pilotage, the numbers required will be for the harbour authorities to decide in the light of decisions on future pilotage requirements. It is not for me to make estimates of commercial demand.

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the publication of a White Paper on marine pilotage.

Mr. Ridley: It is too early to say whether there should be a White Paper before I bring forward new legislative proposals.

Traffic Commissioners (Staff)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were employed in the traffic commissioners' offices in each of the last five years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The staff complements for the 11 traffic area offices covering Great Britain for each of the last five years were as follows:

	Number
1981-82	1,399
1982-83	1,312
1983-84	1,257
1984-85	1,257
1985-86	1,124

London Underground (Accident)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the accident on the Central line underground on Tuesday 4 March as a consequence of preparation work for the new Hackney-M11 link road; and what arrangements are in hand to ensure that such accidents do not occur during the road construction phase.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Boreholes were being sunk to obtain soils information needed for the redesign of the proposed Green Man interchange announced last October. A drilling rod penetrated the lining of an Underground tunnel damaging two trains and causing slight injuries to the driver of the first. This most unfortunate incident resulted from an error in setting out the boreholes. The question of liability is being discussed with our consulting engineers and the contractor. Drilling will not restart adjacent to the tunnels until London Regional Transport is satisfied that it will be safe. Similar arrangements would also apply to any works during the road construction phase.

LRT Stations (Disabled Persons)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the London boroughs which in their 1986-87 budgets have no plans or estimates to use powers under section 59 of the London Regional Transport Act 1984 to fund improved access facilities for the disabled at stations in their area.

Mr. David Mitchell: I do not have this information, as it is a matter between the boroughs and the Railways Board what use is made of these powers. I understand that the board is exploring with London boroughs various possibilities for improving passenger facilities and I welcome this.

Flight Delays

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of flights from United Kingdom airports during (i) 1984 and (ii) 1985 were delayed (a) between two and four hours, (b) between four and eight hours, (c) between eight and 12 hours and (d) in excess of 12 hours; and if comparative statistics are maintained as to the delays attributable to each airline operating from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Information in the form requested is not available. In 1985, however, the departure pattern was as follows:

	per cent.
On time or early	11·4
0 to 15 minutes late	56·8
15 to 30 minutes late	13·5
30 to 60 minutes late	8·3
Over 1 hour late	10·0

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to review the existing legislative framework for air travellers who have experienced flight delays to obtain compensation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There are no plans to introduce specific statutory compensation for flight delays. Most airlines nevertheless offer compensation of some form to passengers suffering substantial delays.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the emergency procedures to be followed in the event of an accident involving a train or road vehicle carrying nuclear waste.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: National regulations require anyone transporting radioactive materials, including nuclear waste, to make appropriate arrangements to give specialist assistance to the civil emergency services in the event of any accident.

The police can also obtain emergency advice through the national arrangements for incidents involving radioactivity (NAIR) scheme which is co-ordinated by the National Radiological Protection Board.

MOT Certificates

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport if adequate supplies of MOT certificates are now available from the Goods Vehicle Centre in Swansea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. Supplies of MOT certificates are available from the Goods Vehicle Centre in Swansea. Garages should apply by first-class post in the normal way.

Lorries (Fuel Injection Equipment)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if any further progress has been made towards developing a tamper-proof mechanism on fuel-injection equipment for heavy goods vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. At present it still does not seem possible to overcome the practical problems for preventing tampering whilst at the same time permitting bona fide adjustments to be made.

BAA and CAA (Staff Statistics)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of staff employed by (a) the British Airports Authority and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The British Airports Authority employed 7,298 staff in the year ended 31 March 1979, and 6,959 in the year ended 31 March 1985. The numbers of staff employed by the Civil Aviation Authority in the same periods were 7,471 and 6,824 respectively.

Sellafield

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has received in relation to the British Nuclear Fuels report of the panel of investigation under the chairmanship of Mr. Donoghue on transport of flasks between Sellafield and CEGB power stations; what action he has taken as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: This report, which records an internal meeting between BNFL and CEGB in 1983, has been copied to my Department. I understand that the recommendations made in it to minimise the contamination of fuel flasks have been implemented. My Department is being kept aware of the current situation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Trade and Industry Committee (Mr. Alan Bristow)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Lord Privy Seal what action he proposes to take to enable the House to express a view on the special report from the Trade and Industry Committee concerning the conduct as a witness before that Committee of Mr. Alan Bristow; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: None. The hon. Gentleman should however note that, further to its special report on Tuesday, the Trade and Industry Committee has now received a copy of a letter in which Mr. A. E. Bristow gives the answers to the questions put to him by that Committee (Votes and Proceedings for Wednesday 9 April, page 483.).

South-West Mechanised Letter Office

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal, pursuant to the answer of 20 March to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, Official Report, column 294, if he will initiate discussions about the installation of a House of Commons postmark facility under secure arrangements, at the south-west mechanised letter office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1986, c. 495]: I have asked that this matter be referred to the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee of the Services Committee.

PRIME MINISTER

Abdul Haq

Q82. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about the cost to public funds in bringing Abdul Haq to the United Kingdom as an official guest of Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: Abdul Haq was responsible for his own travel costs; Her Majesty's Government arranged his accommodation and programme in the United Kingdom.

British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister to which Department of state the board of directors of British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. is answerable.

The Prime Minister: The board of British Nuclear Fuels plc is answerable to the Secretary of State for Energy, who holds all the shares in the company with the exception of one held by the Treasury Solicitor as his nominee.

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister if she will list in the Official Report all the uses to which plutonium is put.

The Prime Minister: Most of the plutonium produced in the United Kingdom is held in store for fast reactor use. Other uses include the fuelling of the prototype fast reactor at Dounreay and research into fast reactor and thermal reactor fuel. Plutonium is also produced as necessary by the military reactors at Calder Hall and Chapelcross, operated by BNFL, for defence purposes.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister if any plutonium produced by the reprocessing of spent fuel from any British civil reactor has ever been used in nuclear weapons programmes; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No plutonium produced in civil reactors, in this country has been transferred to defence use or exported for such use during the period of this administration.

Council of Europe

Mr. Alton asked the Prime Minister what changes have been made in the composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe.

The Prime Minister: I have appointed the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Ross) a Representative in place of the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Sir R. Johnston). I have appointed the Lord Mackie of Benshie in the place of the hon. Member for Isle of Wight, who was previously a Substitute Member.

Engagements

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 15 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

ENERGY

Wylfa and Transfynydd Power Stations

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Energy when the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate last carried out a full survey of Wylfa and Trawsfynydd nuclear power stations.

Mr. Goodlad: The Nuclear Installations Inspectorate surveys the operation of nuclear power stations by a regular system of inspections, visits and meetings. The most recent for Wylfa was from 13 to 21 March, and for Trawsfynydd from 25 to 28 February 1986. Biennial reactor inspections took place at Wylfa reactor No 1. during July-September 1985 and at reactor No 2. during May-July 1984, and Trawsfynydd reactor No 1. during December 1985-February 1986 and reactor No 2. during October 1984-January 1985.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Soviet Union (Butter Sales)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why the EEC Commission has agreed to sell butter to the Soviet Union at 10p per pound; how much butter was involved in the most recent sale; and why Her Majesty's Government agreed to the regulation which made such sales to the Soviet Union possible.

Mr. Gummer: The Community currently has over 1 million tonnes of butter in store, of which about half is more than 18 months old. These stocks place a considerable financial burden on the Community and depress the world butter market.

The Government have consistently taken the lead in arguing for measures to curb surplus production and bring supply and demand into better balance. But while surpluses continue to exist, the problem of their disposal remains.

Several schemes already provide for butter to be sold at a reduced price within the Community. But there is a limit to the amount which can be sold in this way without disrupting sales of fresh butter and leading to a further growth in intervention stocks.

Against this background, the most economical way of disposing of stocks is often to sell them on the world market. That is why we recently supported the introduction of a regulation enabling butter at least 18 months old to be sold to the USSR, Mongolia, India and Pakistan.

The terms of this regulation provide for the price to be determined by competitive tender. In the first round of applications the Commission considered that the prices offered were too low and proposed the rejection of all bids. But in the second round (which closed on 8 April) the Commission considered that the prices were the best that could be realised given the state of the market. It therefore proposed that bids for 100,000 tonnes for sale to the USSR (including 11,000 tonnes from United Kingdom stocks) should be accepted. A majority of member states supported this decision, but the United Kingdom abstained. When account is taken of transport and other costs, including a margin for the trade, the price to the Soviet authorities will be about 13p per pound.

ADAS (Charges)

Mr. Walters asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from farmers about the proposed Agricultural Development and Advisory Service charges for statutory work in connection with milk and dairies regulations.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986]: I have received a number of representations from and on behalf of dairy farmers opposed to the introduction of charges for the work done by our officials in connection with the enforcement of milk and dairies regulations. I recognise the concern that has been expressed, but I consider that charging is appropriate where the producer derives benefit from the work. It is clear that this applies in the case of milk where the high quality and reputation of the product helps to maintain consumption and thus benefits producer returns.

Mr. Walters asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if there are any proposals to abolish compulsory dairy inspections for farmers whose milk falls into category A and B of the Milk Marketing Board total bacteriological count.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986]: No. I do not consider that it would be appropriate to rely solely on the results of the total bacterial count testing done by the Milk Marketing Board. These results do not necessarily demonstrate compliance with the milk and dairies regulations. This can be checked only by inspecting the farm concerned; however, the board's results may help us to direct this enforcement effort more effectively, and thus more economically.

Asbestos (Dumping)

Mr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how widespread is the practice of dumping asbestos or asbestos-contaminated material in United Kingdom estuarial waters; how such dumping is monitored and regulated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986]: Asbestos or asbestos-contaminated material originating on land is not currently disposed of at sea in United Kingdom waters. However, some harbour dredgings may contain very small quantities of saturated asbestos along with other contaminants. Disposal of such material at sea is governed by part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 and, in considering whether approval should be given for such disposal, the appropriate licensing authority is required to have regard to the need to protect the marine environment, the living resources it supports, and human health; to prevent interference with legitimate uses of the sea; and to have regard to the practical availability of alternative methods of disposal. Staff of the appropriate authority would monitor any sea disposal of such material in the usual way.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hackney Carriage Licences

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from chief constables on the practice of police forces with regard to checks as to whether or not those people issued with hackney carriage licences have a criminal record and on the passing of such information to licensing authorities.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. Guidance to the police on the disclosure of criminal records in exceptional cases does not provide for disclosure for this purpose.

Police Statistics

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from the appropriate chief constables as to the numbers of police per head of population in (a) Solihull, (b) Birmingham, (c) Coventry, (d) Wolverhampton, (e) Manchester and (f) Bury.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constables concerned that the population per police officer in these areas is as follows:

	Numbers
Solihull	1:639
Birmingham	1:425
Coventry	1:540
Wolverhampton	1:542
Manchester	1:252
Bury	1:607

Scrap Metal Dealers Act 1964

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recommendations he has received from the Association of Chief Police Officers with regard to the operation of the Scrap Metal Dealers Act 1964.

Mr. Giles Shaw: None, since I wrote to the hon. Member on 13 June.

Sentencing

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to increase the powers of sentencing available to the courts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government's proposals are set out in the recently published White Paper "Criminal Justice: Plans for Legislation" (Cmnd. 9658).

Rewards

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how much money it has provided, in each year since 1980, to facilitate the payment of rewards offered by private institutions such as insurance companies, banks, and so on; how many individual cases were concerned; whether, in any individual cases, more than £5,000 from public funds was offered or provided; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the number of rewards from private sources which were facilitated by the metropolitan police in each year from 1981 to 1985 was as follows: 1981, 46; 1982, 48; 1983, 71; 1984, 61; and 1985, 75. These did not involve the payment of any money from police funds. Comparable information for 1980 is not readily available. There has been no case since 1980 in which the Metropolitan police have offered or provided a reward from public funds of over £5,000.

Naturalisation

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for naturalisation he has (a) received and (b) decided upon in each year since 1983; and how many in the latter category were (i) granted and (ii) refused.

Mr. Waddington: The information is as follows:

Naturalisation Applications

	Received	Decided Upon	Granted	Refused
1983	15,366	8,226	7,407	819
1984	14,971	14,862	13,615	1,247
1985	16,619	15,999	14,978	1,021

Notes:
1. The figures for 1985 are subject to verification following a stock-take at the end of the financial year 1985-86.
2. The figures for decided application exclude those which were withdrawn, postponed or abandoned and those from applicants who were found already to possess British citizenship.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, after the elapse of a period of time when he refused an application for naturalisation, he is prepared to consider a new naturalisation application from the individual concerned.

Mr. Waddington: Yes, but unless the circumstances have changed the outcome is unlikely to be different.

Shops Bill [Lords]

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received to date on the Shops Bill [Lords].

Mr. Waddington: We have received 20,736 representations in favour of our proposals and 47,354 representations against since the debate on the Auld report in the House of Commons in May last year.

Dr. Adrian Tibbitts

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute an inquiry into the interference in the private affairs of Dr. Adrian Tibbitts by security service personnel, including a named individual, as alleged in the letter of 22 November 1984 from Dr. Tibbitts to his predecessor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No.

Prison Staff (Travel Allowances)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of travel allowances for representatives from each prison establishment to travel to regional offices on 25 March to collect a package concerning copies of a statement by him on the same day.

Mr. Mellor: This cost could be separately identified only at disproportionate expense.

ENVIRONMENT

Parish Councils

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what funding is provided directly or indirectly by his Department to support the work of parish councils in England; and if he will give estimates of such funding under suitable headings.

Mrs. Rumbold: At present, no parish council receives any direct funding from my Department in 1986-87. However, money from my Department granted to district councils or organisations such as the Sports Council, the Development Commission or English Heritage may ultimately reach parish councils. Information on such indirect funding is not readily available.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will lay in the Library a copy of the standard letter and proforma circulated to local housing authorities by his Department's urban housing renewal unit inviting bids for additional housing investment programme allocations in 1986-87, for projects drawn up in consultation with his Department's urban housing renewal unit; and if he will publish his Department's procedure for the assessment and approval of such bids.

Sir George Young: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the letter and the proforma which local authorities have been asked to complete in respect of bids for additional housing investment programme allocations for schemes submitted to the urban housing renewal unit. Each bid is being considered on its merits.

Architects (Indemnity Insurance)

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Royal Institute of British Architects about his newly imposed rules for architects commissioned by Government Departments and the Housing Corporation, requiring professional indemnity insurance cover of £250,000 to be extended over a period of six years.

Sir George Young: The requirement to which the question refers was introduced in 1984. The RIBA has recently expressed concern both at the duration of insurance cover required and at the default powers of the Secretary of State. Its representations are mow under consideration.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department expects to receive for the renting of its premises in Orange street to the London Residuary Body for the period April 1986 until April 1987.

Mr. Tracey: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to him on Friday 11 April 1986, at column 208.

Polar Bears

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to institute an inquiry into the condition of polar bears in captivity, in the light of the zoo check report written by Mr. Paul V. Horsman, a copy of which has been sent to him by the hon. Member for Plymouth, Drake; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall study the report, which I have just received, and write to my hon. Friend in due course.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those submissions from Bradford metropolitan district council for receipt of transitional grant following abolition of West Yorkshire county council which were approved.

Mrs. Rumbold: The submissions from Bradford metropolitan district council which have been approved for transitional grant, and the amounts approved, are as follows:

Proposed local authority grant 1986-87

1. Data	29,660
2. Project Comtran	26,500
3. Bradford Resource Centre	12,000
4. Suffa-tul-Islam	11,100
5. Bradford Rape Crisis	9,600
6. Bradford and West Yorkshire Methodist Housing Ltd.	8,557
7. Asian Tuition Association	8,360
8. The Bridge Project	8,000
9. Dial Sheltered Workshops	7,200
10. Bangladesh Porishad	7,000
11. Bradford Voluntary Action Group	6,772
12. Bradford Asian Girls Association	6,000
13. Bradford City Farm	6,000
14. Gingerbread Centre	6,000
15. Karmand Community Centre	6,000
16. Bangladeshi Youth Organisation	5,100
17. Polish Saturday School	4,750

28. Vishwa Hindu Parishad	500
Total	186,309
29. Bradford Cab (Debt Counselling Unit)	*32,966

* From April 1987.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be in a position to give an estimate of (a) the redundancies and (b) the overall costs of savings arising from the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: Estimates of initial redundancies will be available shortly. Overall savings will depend on decisions by successors, and any early assessment would be affected by transitional costs. We have no reason to change our estimate that the abolition of the GLC would make possible savings of around £50 million annually from rationalisation alone.

Nitrates and Nitrites

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the levels of nitrates and nitrites in the water provided for public consumption within each of the Thames water supply districts; whether the levels conform to European Economic Community directive 80/778; if the authority has applied for any deregulations made under article 9 of the European Economic Community directive 80/778; and if he will make statement.

Mr. John Patten: Nitrate and nitrite levels in all areas supplied by Thames water authority are below the limit specified in EEC directive 80/778 except in those areas mentioned in the reply I gave on 14 March, at column 620, in respect of nitrite. The maximum nitrite level reached in any of those areas is 0·35 mg/L. Applications for derogations for those areas have been forwarded to the European Commission under article 20 of the directive with a recommendation that they be approved for a two-year period.

Town and Country Planning Use Classes Order

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for The Environment when he expects to complete his consultation round with appropriate authorities over the Town and Country Planning Use Classes Order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: We published the Property Advisory Group sub-group's report on the Town and Country Planning Use Classes Order on 2 December and sought responses from consultees by 3 February. We are carefully considering the large number of responses received. My right hon. Friend is not yet ready to make a statement.

Tobacco and Sports Sponsorship

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain copies of the minutes of the Sports Council's recent discussions on tobacco and sports sponsorship; and if he will place them in the Library.

Mr. Tracey; Yes. I have today placed a copy of the relevant extract from these minutes in the Library.

Pollution (Access to Information)

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the report of the working party on public access to information held by pollution control authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1985, c. 368]: The report is being published today. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

The Government accept the broad thrust of the report and will now consult the various interested parties on detailed implementation.

The report recommends:

i. legislation to give Ministers power to make information public on radioactive wastes;

ii. legislation to give Ministers power to disclose information on disposal to land of other wastes;

iii. an extension of the informaton made available on air pollution, in the form of public registers.

In 1984 the Government accepted the recommendation of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution that there should be a presumption in favour of unrestricted access to information which the pollution control authorities obtain or receive by virtue of their statutory powers. The working party was set up to make recommendations on the best ways of implementing that recommendation.

The report notes that a number of legislative changes since 1984 have met the Royal Commission's recommendation, notably:

Pesticides — provisions for public access to information about pesticides in the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Discharges to water — regulations now require water authorities to keep public registers of discharge consents.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions, and for what value in each case, the Property Services Agency has recovered excess profits from contractors (a) as a result of information given by employees to his Department and (b) otherwise; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986]: The Property Services Agency does not normally let contracts under which the amount due to the contractor is in any way dependent upon the financial return achieved. I am not aware of any case in which a return of excess profits has been sought.

Cases do arise in which overpayments related to the value or amount of work done under a particular contract are recovered from contractors. A very small percentage of such cases originates from information from sources outside the agency, but the detailed information requested is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Property Unitisation

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his reply of 27 March, Official Report, column 612, to the hon. Member for Mid Staffordshire, which interested parties including other Government Departments are engaged in the discussions on the concept of unitising property.

Mr. Howard: There have been discussions with representatives of: The Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors; The Working Party on Unitisation of Property chaired by Mr. R. R. St. Barkshire; The British Property Federation; and the Stock Exchange. In addition a number of other Government Departments have been consulted.

Law Society (Competition Policy)

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will institute an inquiry into the professional conduct rules of the Law Society to ascertain their compatibility with his Department's competition policy and whether or not such rules are in restraint of trade.

Mr. Howard: The rules governing advertising by solicitors in England and Wales were the subject of a report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, published in 1976. This led to the Law Society amending its rules to permit solicitors to advertise their services and charges. The Director General of Fair Trading has a general duty to keep commercial activities under review; he is always prepared to consider complaints about specific practices. In addition, he is undertaking, at the request of my predecessor, a programme of reviews into restrictions in the professions, with a view to establishing whether further relaxations would be justified. This programme includes a review of restrictions on the kind of organisation through which members of professions (including solicitors) may offer their services (for example, restrictions in inter-professional links or mixed partnerships).

EC (Insurance)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he will be taking, in the light of the new majority voting procedures under the Single European Act, to encourage the adoption by the Council of measures creating a free market in insurance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The creation of a free market in insurance in the EEC depends primarily on the adoption by the Council of a liberal non-life insurance services directive. Draft proposals for such a directive have already been put by the Commission to the Council of Ministers. We hope that rapid progress can be made with the directive as soon as the judgments in the four insurance cases brought by the Commission before the ECJ are available. No specific additional steps are called for in the light of the proposed adoption of majority voting procedures.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will now indicate for the Ross and Cinderford travel-to-work area in respect of regional selective assistance the cumulative totals to the latest available date for (a) the number of inquiries received, (b) the number of cases requiring further detailed appraisal, (c) the number of cases withdrawn/rejected, (d) the number of cases approved, (e) the number of cases still under appraisal, (f) the amount of the total grant approved, (g) the associated project cost, (h) the number of jobs created and (i) the number of jobs safeguarded.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In order not to risk breaches of commercial confidentiality, I cannot give information on the number of cases withdrawn/rejected, the number of cases approved, nor the number of cases still under appraisal. I am pleased to tell my hon. Friend that, from 29 November 1985 to 11 April 1986, 397 initial inquiries about assistance were received in the Cinderford and Ross-on-Wye TTWA. Of these, 54 were taken to the preliminary stages of appraisal by a request for financial projections; these have been received in 27 instances. Regional selective assistance of £1,316,000 has been offered for projects of total cost of £20,180,394 to create and safeguard 736 jobs.

British Telecom (Exhibition)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to British Telecom to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Butcher: Arrangements have been made for such an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall to take place from Monday 28 April to Friday 2 May 1986.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bankruptcies there have been in Wales in each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86 in firms of (a) up to 20 employees, (b) 20 to 50 employees, (c) 50 to 100 employees and (d) 100 and over employees.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not available because no records are kept of the number of employees of individuals and partnerships declared bankrupt.

Regional Grants

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to complete his review of the new regional grants scheme; and if he will consider representations about the assisted areas map.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Regional Development Programme

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to submit his regional development programme to the European Commission.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I expect the complete United Kingdom regional development programme for 1986-90 to be with the EC Commission by about the end of May 1986. Individual sections are, however, being submitted as soon as they are ready in order that applications for European regional development fund assistance can be considered

Regional Aid

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) the budgeted and (b) the actual payments of (i) regional development grants and (ii) regional selective assistance in the financial year 1985-86 for (1) England, (2) Scotland and (3) Wales; and if he will list the English payments by regional areas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The original budget estimates and provisional outturn figures for regional development grant and regional selective assistance in England, Scotland and Wales in the financial year 1985-86 are provided in table 1. Estimates of the annual spend on each of these schemes are not made in respect of regional areas in England. Provisional outturn figures by region for regional development grant in England are provided at table 2. Similar figures for regional selective assistance are not yet available, but I shall write to the hon. Gentleman with this information as soon as possible.

Life Assurance and Unit Trust Salesmen

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received a response to the latest Marketing and Investments Board organising committee proposals on the registration of life assurance and unit trust salesmen from the Consumers Association, the National Consumer Council and the Office of Fair Trading; and if he will place a copy of each in the Library.

Mr. Howard: I have received representations on the proposals from, among others, the organisations mentioned. The situation remains as set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle), on 14 April 1986.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Portadown

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if representations were received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland in advance of the proposed parades on Portadown this Easter.

Mr. Tom King: No representations on the details of specific parades and marches have been received from the Irish Government. These involve police operations and are therefore not within the terms of the Anglo-Irish agreement. I am, of course, aware of the views of the Government of the Republic of Ireland on the general issue of parades and marches in Northern Ireland.

Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total annual expenditure on security at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Needham: The latest information available is for the 1984-85 year in which total expenditure on salaries and wages for security staff at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast was approximately £544,000.

Other security costs, for example, for petrol and uniforms are not identifiable separately within the accounts.

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the average annual earnings of personnel employed to provide security at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast.

Mr. Needham: At 31 March 1985 the average annual earnings were £12,463.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the allowances made for parental contributions to student grants in each year since 1978-79; and if he will show parental contributions as a percentage of the full student grant in each year.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Assessed Parental Contributions as a Percentage of Expenditure on Maintenance

Academic Year and Parental Contribution Scale	Per cent.
1978-79 £1 assessed for every £5 of income for residual incomes from £3,800 to £5,200; then £1 in £10 to £7,300; and £1 in £12 thereafter	24·6
1979-80 £1 in £8 for residual incomes from £4,700 to £9,700; and £1 in £13 thereafter	20·0
1980-81 £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £5,800 to £7,300; then £1 in £8 to £11,600; and £1 in £13 thereafter	19·6
1981-82 £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £6,600 to £8,300; then £1 in £5 to £13,200; and £1 in £13 thereafter	22·1

1985-86 £1 in £7 for residual incomes from £8,100 to £10,300; then £1 in £5 to £15,000; and £1 in £4 thereafter up to a maximum contribution of £4,000	*†34·8

* Estimate.
† Minimum maintenance award abolished.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the average level of mandatory grant available to students in each year since 1978-79 as a percentage of average male earnings in each year.

Mr. Walden: The information requested is as follows:

Academic Year	1978-79 £	1979-80 £	1980-81 £	1981-82 £	1982-93 £	1983-84 £	1984-85* £

(3) (2) as percentage of (1)	22	20	21	20	20	19	19

* (provisional).

Notes:

(1) Earnings figures from 1982-83 relate to all males on adult rates. Earlier figures relate to all males aged 21 and over.

(2) Grant figures include the average amount paid out in supplementary allowances and are gross of assessed contributions.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the percentage of full-time students (a) receiving the maximum student grant with no parental contribution and (b) receiving the minimum student grant with full parental contribution, in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Walden: The figures have been expressed as a percentage of the total number of students in receipt of a mandatory or full-value discretionary award, with the exception of 1983-84, in respect of which information on mandatory awards only is available.

England and Wales Percentage

	1978-79	1979-80	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84*

* Mandatory awards only.

Sunderland Polytechnic

Mr. Bagier asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about the implications for Sunderland polytechnic of the proposals of the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education in relation to the closure of the civil engineering department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: None. The proposals relating to Sunderland polytechnic form part of a consultative process engaged in by the NAB secretariat with a view to the formulation of draft advice to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for consideration by the NAB board and committee later this year.

The NAB committee has adopted its own internal assumption that the level of funding available will require a reduction in total intakes to public sector higher education in 1987-88. It has instructed the committee to prepare its proposals for consultation with institutions on that basis.

However, the NAB committee will only finalise its advice to the Secretary of State once the level of funding in 1987-88 is determined in the autumn, and may then wish to consider other options. Only then will my right hon. Friend be involved. Decisions on intakes to and financial allocations for individual institutions are matters for my right hon. Friend.

In the meantime, any representations about the NAB secretariat's proposals should be made to the secretariat by 13 June 1986, as requested in the secretariat's covering letter of 4 April 1986.

WALES

Sea Fisheries Committees (Appointments)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what appointments he has made to (a) the South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee and (b) the Lancashire and Western Sea Fisheries Committee since May 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: We appoint nine members to the South Wales sea fisheries committee and, jointly with my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, 18 members to the Lancashire and Western sea fisheries joint committee. Appointments since May 1979 are as follows, with the dates of appointment.

Voluntary Service Councils

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the main conditions under which grants are made available by his Department to the voluntary service councils in each county in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Grants are paid mainly for salaries and administrative expenditure at a level which reflects the Department's assessment of the needs of the organisation concerned and the contribution which it is in a position to make to the community.

Garden Festival 1992

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report details of each of the factors taken into account by the Welsh Office in short-listing sites in Wales for the 1992 Garden Festival; and if he will indicate the way in which each of the chosen locations meets these criteria and the deemed shortcomings of other locations which led to their exclusion.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The main issues taken into account were those set out in the attachments to the Department's letter of 27 February 1985 which invited local authorities to express interest in hosting the Festival (a copy of which was sent to the hon. Gentleman on 28 November 1985).

The decision was not a mechanistic one based on a fixed set of criteria. It was taken on the basis of full and careful consideration of all the information provided by the local authorities in support of their bids.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the capital expenditure incurred in each of the district health authority areas in Wales for each year since reorganisation of the Health Service, including, and separately identifying, both the capital spending funded by each of the authorities and by the Welsh Health Technical Services Organisation.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information is given in the table:

Glamorgan Community Services Council

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales why the relative funding by his Department of the Glamorgan Community Services Council is significantly lower than the funding of other such bodies in Wales in 1985-86.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The funding of the Glamorgan Community Services Council in 1985-86 relects the scale of its operations and the nature of the application received.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each of the hospitals and other medical facilities which have been closed down in Wales since 1 April 1974.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A list of hospitals closed in Wales between 1 April 1974 and 31 December 1985 (the latest date for which information is available), and the dates on which each closure took place is given in the table. However, information about the closure of other medical facilities is not available.

GCSE (Reports)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those secondary schools on which in-depth reports have been published since January 1983, where the inspectors examined the degree of preparedness of the schools for the general certificate of secondary education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No reports have been published which have been directed specifically at the preparedness of schools for the general certificate of secondary education. Formal inspections are designed to give an overall picture of individual institutions and to build up a representative picture of the system.

Schools Inspectors

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the criteria used by Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales to select those schools in which to carry out in-depth reports.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The selection is made to provide, over a period, reports on a representative range of schools of various sizes and types, serving a variety of areas and exemplifying issues of current development innovation and concern.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who have been seconded on a full-time basis to industry since being appointed.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None. Some Inspectors visit outside industries to keep in touch with new technology and methods.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of state for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who receive their current salary on (a) Grade 4, (b) Grade 5 and (c) Grade 6.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The numbers are:
Grade 4—1
Grade 5—7
Grade 6—46

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last five years the total salaries paid to Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The total salaries paid were:

1981-82	974,687
1982-83	964,179
1983-84	915,491
1984-85	998,585
1985-86	1,122,221

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales why he considers it inappropriate to monitor actions in detail that follow Her Majesty's inspectors of schools reports, as announced in paragraph 7 of Welsh Office circular 11/83

Mr. Wyn Roberts: It is for a local education authority to decide what action may be appropriate in the light of each report of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools. The aim of the procedures following the publication of a report is to seek from the authority an account of the actions they propose, and to ensure that local education authorities have appropriate mechanisms for considering the implications of such reports and for taking action on them.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to restore the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales to the 31 December 1983 figure.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools employed by the Department is kept under constant review; I have no plans to reduce the number to the 31 December 1983 level.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who have been appointed with specific responsibility for (a) mathematics and (b) Welsh.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
Mathematics	4
Welsh	3

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who do not possess a recognised qualification in education.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: All Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales are professonally qualified; two of them do not possess a specific degree or diploma in education.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales what categories of information his Department holds pertaining to the qualifications of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The categories of information held are as follows:
a. First Degree Qualifications.
b. Post-graduate Qualifications.
c. Other relevant Qualifications.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales (a) the number of years of teaching experience in primary schools, (b) the number of years of teaching experience in secondary schools, (c) the class of initial degree awarded and main subject area, (d) the kind of higher degree awarded and main subject area, (e) the length in years of post-doctoral research undertaken, (f) the titles of any published works, (g) the number of years employed in industry previous to appointment and (h) the number of years since employed as a full-time teacher.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This information is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the current salaries of those of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who have had no experience of teaching in schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is as follows:
£20,796; £22,926; £24,296; £25,533; £25,533.
No distinction is drawn between the salaries of those Her Majesty's inspectors of schools who have no experience of teaching in schools and those who have such experience.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales currently in post who have gained additional qualifications since their appointment.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not available.

There is no requirement for Her Majesty's inspectors of schools to gain additional qualifications following their appointments.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales currently in post who have been seconded to full-time teaching in schools since their appointment for periods (a) in excess of one week, (b) in excess of two weeks, (c) in excess of three weeks and (d) in excess of one month.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a summary of the relevant experience of each of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales who have had no experience of teaching in schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is as follows:

1. Lecturer and Senior Lecturer in various Colleges of Technology.
2. Lecturer in College of Technology and University.
3. Teaching Army personnel; Assistant Lecturer and Senior Lecturer in an Agricultural Institution.
4. Assistant Lecturer, Lecturer, Senior Lecturer and Principal Lecturer in Colleges of Technology.
5. Research Assistant; Lecturer and Senior Lecturer in various Colleges; and Director of curriculum development project.

Welsh Office

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the area in square feet of the Welsh Office in Whitehall.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The total area of the Department's offices in London is 8,910 sq ft.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of people employed by the Welsh Office in Whitehall.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Three Ministers and 33 staff are based at the Department's offices in London. A further three staff work there regularly although they are based elsewhere.

Schools (Reports)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if Her Majesty's inspectorate will conduct more in-depth surveys of (a) primary schools in Gwynedd and (b) secondary schools in Dyfed, leading to published reports.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The forward programme of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools is not published but in formulating their programme the inspectorate will continue to have regard to the need for such surveys throughout Wales.

NHS (Dietitians)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many dietitians are employed by the National Health Service in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: At 30 September 1985, the National Health Service in Wales employed the whole-time equivalent of 54·6 dietitians.

South Glamorgan Health Authority (Funds)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will allocate extra funds to South Glamorgan health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: For 1986-87 the South Glamorgan health authority has received a revenue allocation of some £135 million. This represents a cash increase of 5·6 per cent. over its 1985-86 provision which is marginally higher than the 5·5 per cent. increase which has been made available on average for district health authorities in Wales. This cash increase, together with the further efficiency savings which all authorities are expected to make, should be sufficient to meet both the cost of pay and price increases in 1986-87 and the additional service requirements arising from Government policy objectives, demographic changes and medical and technological advances. In addition, the authority stands to benefit from various centrally funded developments for which supplementary allocations will be provided during the course of the year.

The authority has received a discretionary capital allocation of £1·965 million which was determined by a formula agreed by all health authorities. It will also benefit during the course of 1986-87 from centrally financed capital schemes amounting to £6·846 million.

Education Expenditure

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the expenditure per pupil on school books in each of the local education authorities in Wales in (a) the primary sector and (b) the secondary sector in the last year for which figures are available and in each year since 1979 at constant prices.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Figures for expenditure on books, including equipment and materials, are given in the following table:

Visual Arts

Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy of the report on the "Preliminary Appraisal of Housing the Visual Arts in Wales" in the Library.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I have done so.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been paid out in tax relief for private health insurance since 1979, showing separately the figures for the financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Volunteer Lifeboat Men (Call-out Fees)

Mr. Harris asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax treatment of call-out fees to volunteer lifeboat men.

Mr. Moore: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for giving me the opportunity to clarify what seems to be a misunderstanding. The only payment made to the vast majority of volunteer crew-men and helpers is the fee they receive when called out to attend the lifeboat. Contrary to some recent reports, the Inland Revenue has not proposed any change in the tax treatment of these payments. Indeed, the Revenue advised the Royal National Lifeboat Institution last year that, as in the past, these payments to voluntary lifeboat men could continue to be made without deduction of tax under PAYE. That remains the position.

Tied Aid Credits

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report the outcome of the discussion on tied aid credits at the informal ECOFIN of 4-6 April.

Mr. Lawson: The EC Economic and Finance Council meeting I attended at Ootmarsum in the Netherlands on 4 to 6 April convened as a formal Council to agree the European Commission's negotiating mandate on tied aid credits for the wider OECD negotiations that are to take place on 17-18 April. This Government's position remained as before to seek greater controls on tied aid credits by reaching international agreement to further measures of transparancy and discipline. A vote was taken on the mandate which was supported by the United Kingdom and approved by qualified majority.

Tax Yields

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to the answer given on 27 February, Official Report, column 693, concerning current tax yields at 1978-79 rates, he will publish an updated table on direct revenue effects for 1986-87.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 99]: The table shows the additional yield in respect of 1986-87 from the specified taxes if 1978-79 rates, allowances and rate bands (after indexation to 1986-87 levels) were substituted for 1986-87 rates, allowances and rate bands.

Additional yield from reverting to 1978-79 structure on 1986-87 tax base

	£ million
Income tax	8,100
of which:
Investment Income Surcharge	825
Rates and thresholds above the basic rate (excluding IIS)	1,485
Capital Transfer Tax/Inheritance Tax	185
Capital Gains Tax	650

In each case the 1986-87 tax base is taken as given, except that any increase in lifetime transfers as a result of their exemption is disregarded. It is not possible to determine to what extent changes in the taxes between 1978-79 and 1986-87 may have affected levels of income and transfers and disposals of capital.

PRIVATISATION

Mr. Heseltine asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Paymaster General if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of Trade and Industry if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department since 1979, including details of the proceeds received, and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Heseltine asked the Attorney-General if he will list all the measures of privatisation undertaken by his Department and the Lord Chancellor's Department, since 1979, including details of the proceeds received and the estimated savings achieved.

Mr. Moore: I have been asked to reply.

Net receipts treated as central privatisation proceeds for each of the years 1980-81 to 1984-85 are set out in table 2.23 of the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9702-II. For 1979-80, this information is available in table 2.14 of the 1985 public expenditure White Paper, Cmnd. 9428-II. In 1985-86, the estimated net total of central privatisation proceeds shown in table 2.11 of Cmnd. 9702-II, was £2,622 million; the main components of this were the second instalment payable on British Telecom shares sold in November 1984 and receipts from the sales of residual Government shareholdings in British Aerospace, Britoil and Cable and Wireless.

Details of manpower and administrative savings made as a result of privatisation and contracting out are contained in the annual reports by the Treasury to the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee which are available in the House of Commons Library. These reports cover each year up to 1984-85. The report for 1985-86 will be available in the autumn.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Coombs asked the Paymaster General if he will give as a percentage of the total population of the United Kingdom, for each of the last 20 years for which figures are available, the number of those (a) in employment, (b) seeking work and (c) the totals of (a) and (b).

Mr. Lang: The following table gives the available series of estimates.

June	Employed labour force as per cent. of population of all ages	Unemployed claimants as per cent. of population of all ages	Working population as per cent. of population of all ages
1965	46·4	0·6	46·9
1966	46·4	0·5	46·9
1967	45·5	0·9	46·4
1968	45·0	1·0	46·0
1969	44·8	0·9	45·8
1970	44·5	1·0	45·5

1983	41·8	5·3	47·1
1984	42·5	5·4	47·8
1985	43·0	5·6	48·6

Mr. John Fraser asked the Paymaster General how many of those who are unemployed are married men with working wives.

Mr. Lang: According to the results of the labour force survey, in Great Britain in spring 1984, there were 219,000 men without a job and seeking work, with wives who had a paid job.

Walthamstow

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what are the latest unemployment figures for each ward in the constituency of Walthamstow.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. The numbers of unemployed claimants in the wards of the Walthamstow parliamentary constituency as at 6 February 1986 are:

	Number
Higham Hill	455
High Street	635
Hoe Street	927
Lloyd Park	670
St. James Street	908
Wood Street	719

Community Programme

Mr. Freeman asked the Paymaster General if he will give the figures for the number working on the community programme for the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: At the end of February 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 191,900 people employed on the community programme.

Workfare Schemes

Mr. Colvin asked the Paymaster General what information he has on workfare schemes for the unemployed in operation in the United States of America; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: There is a great variety of schemes in operation in the United States of America which come under the general heading of "workfare". They have in common the aim of enabling recipients of welfare benefits to do useful work in return for their benefit. But the schemes vary considerably, in their target group, the way they are administered, the nature and location of the work performed, and the amount of training and support services provided. Most schemes are still at an early or experimental stage, and cover only a proportion of welfare recipients. The Department will continue to study the American experience of workfare schemes to see whether they could have any application in this country.

London (Employment)

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General if he has any new proposals to reduce unemployment in London.

Mr. Lang: The Government's economic strategy is providing the climate of low inflation and sustained growth which is the only sensible way to secure real jobs in London and elsewhere. London will also benefit from the new package of measures announced in the Budget statement, at columns 166-84, to accelerate the growth of enterprise, boost opportunities for the young, and help the long-term unemployed find work.

Young Workers Scheme and Community Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will provide an occupational or industrial breakdown of the jobs covered by the young workers scheme and the community programme.

Mr. Lang: The table gives the breakdown by industrial division of the support being given under the young workers scheme at the end of March 1986. Figures of occupational or industrial breakdowns for the community programme are not available.

Current Support under the Young Workers Scheme

Standard industrial classification	Numbers	Percentage
0 Agriculture, forestry and fishing	1,633	3
1 Energy and water supply industry	75	—
2 Extraction of minerals and ores other than fuels; manufacture of metals, mineral products and chemicals	691	1
3 Metal goods, engineering and vehicles industries	4,655	9
4 Other manufacturing industries	7,548	14
5 Construction	5,973	11
6 Distribution; hotels and catering; repairs	16,296	30
7 Transport and communication	1,233	2
8 Banking, finance, insurance, business services and leasing	4,917	9
9 Other services	11,327	21
Total	54,348	100

Excavators

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General upon what evidence of safety levels he based his decision to introduce condition 6 of the certificate of exemption No. CON(LO)/1981/82 (General) concerning the use of excavators for pipe-laying and related practices.

Mr. Trippier: It is standard practice to fit safety devices to hydraulic cranes to prevent the load falling due to hydraulic failure. In issuing the certificate of exemption, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Factories required that the same standards of safety should apply to excavators used as cranes.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what estimate he has made of the cost to the construction industry of the modifications to plant required by condition 6 of the certificate of exemption No. CON(LO)/1981/82 (General) governing the use of excavators in pipe-laying and related activities.

Mr. Trippier: No estimate is available. The construction industry was extensively consulted on the terms of this certificate of exemption. The cost of modifying plant will depend on the type of excavator and the modifications needed. Some employers may decide not to use excavators for these purposes.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many workers he currently estimates will be on employment schemes in each year to 1989; and if he will list the estimated numbers for each scheme.

Mr. Lang: The estimated number on each of the employment schemes at the end of each financial year is given in the table.

	March 1987	March 1988	March 1989
Community Industry	8,000	8,000	8,000
Community Programme	255,000	255,000	255,000
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	80,000	94,000	94,000
Job Release Scheme	27,000	27,000	26,000
Job Splitting Scheme	1,000	1,000	1,000
New Workers Scheme	63,000	76,000	76,000
Total	434,000	461,000	460,000

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many entrants there have been in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales to the enterprise allowance scheme since its inauguration; how many entered in 1985-86; and how many he expects to enter in 1986-87.

Mr. Trippier: The number of entrants since the beginning of the pilot scheme to the end of February 1986 is as follows:

	Number
England	110,010
Scotland	11,153
Wales	8,977
Total	130,140

Final figures are not yet available for 1985-86, but the following provides a breakdown of those joining the scheme between 1 April 1985 and 28 February 1986.

	Number
England	44,882
Scotland	4,659
Wales	3,602
Total	53,143

There will be 86,000 places available in Great Britain in 1986-87 and 100,000 per year thereafter. The MSC is now finalising the revised allocation of the extra places for 1986-87 as a result of the expansion announced in the Budget and therefore no breakdown of these figures is available for England, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General what is the estimated proportion of enterprise allowance scheme entrants who are still in business after (a) six months, (b) one year and (c) two years.

Mr. Trippier: Statistics collected by the Manpower Services Commission show that 94 per cent. of entrants to the enterprise allowance scheme are still in business after six months and that 89 per cent. of the scheme's entrants are still trading at the end of 12 months.

There is no information available about the proportion of EAS entrants who are still in business two years after joining the scheme. However, a survey of entrants who joined the pilot scheme showed that 61 per cent. of those who took advantage of the full year's allowance were still trading two years later or three years after joining the scheme.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General how many jobs he estimates to be generated by the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: Latest survey evidence into the pilot enterprise allowance scheme shows that for every 100 continuing business three years after start up 99 additional new jobs had been created, of which 50 were full time and 49 were part time. This survey supplements evidence from an earlier survey of the national scheme which showed that for every 100 continuing business 15 months after start up, 68 additional new jobs had been created 24 of which were full time and 44 were part time.

Training Loan Scheme

Mr. Gregory asked the Paymaster General whether he intends to introduce a loan scheme for training, as proposed in his consultation paper issued in November 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. and noble Friend today announced the introduction of a pilot scheme to make available loans for vocational training for an experimental period of three years. The new scheme, career development loans, will be run in partnership with three banks, Barclays, Clydesdale and the Co-operative Bank, in four pilot areas, Aberdeen, Bristol-Bath, Greater Manchester and Reading-Slough. Anyone aged over 18 who lives or intends to train in one of these areas will be able to apply. The Government will be providing an incentive to borrowers by paying interest on their behalf during the period of training and up to three months afterwards. The Government will also be guaranteeing a proportion of the loans to make it easier for banks to consider lending for vocational training.

SOCIAL SERVICES

European Community (Health Provision)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out in the Official Report the policy objectives of the Council of Ministers with regard to health provision in the European Community.

Mr. Whitney: The Council of Ministers as such has not adopted policy objectives with regard to the general level of health provision in member states because this is not a matter which falls within the formal competence of the Community. Recent informal meetings of European Community Health Ministers have discussed relative provision in specific fields, such as measles vaccination and action against drug misuse and have also discussed ways of containing the growth of expenditure on health services and obtaining better value for money.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total expenditure on health provision in each of the member countries of the European Community in (a) 1975 and (b) 1985; and if he will express these figures as a proportion of gross domestic product in respect of each member state.

Mr. Whitney: The following tables give the information, which my hon. Friend requested. The expenditure figures, which include health expenditure by both publicly and privately financed bodies, have been converted into sterling by using purchasing power parity exchange rates for the year in question. Expenditure figures for Luxembourg are not available. The figures are presented for 1975 and 1982, since 1982 is the most recent year for which figures are available for the other members of the European Community. According to the 1985 edition of the National Accounts, the United Kingdom spent 6·1 per cent. of the gross domestic product on health care in both 1983 and 1984. Although the United Kingdom spends less on health as a proportion of GDP than most other member states, its life expectancy and infant mortality usually fall in the middle of the Community's range.

*Total Expenditure on Health Provision (£ million)

	1975	1982
United Kingdom	5,879	16,347
France	8,356	29,175
Germany	10,412	29,439
Italy	6,056	18,557
Belgium	1,094	3,387
Netherlands	2,198	6,588
Denmark	693	2,035
Ireland	298	1,000
Greece	379	1,242
Spain	2,564	8,545
Portugal	471	1,337

* Expenditure in national currency units has been converted into sterling by means of general purchasing power exchange rates for the year in question.

Total Expenditure on Health Care Expressed as a Percentage Share of the Gross Domestic Product

	1975	1982
United Kingdom	5·5	5·9
France	7·6	9·3
Germany	8·1	8·2
Italy	6·7	7·2
Belgium	5·5	6·2
Netherlands	7·7	8·7
Denmark	6·5	6·8
Ireland	7·7	8·2
Greece	4·0	4·4
Spain	5·1	6·3
Portugal	6·4	5·7

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the total numbers of people employed in the state-run health services of the member countries of the European Community; if he will break down by categories the number of people employed in these services; and if he will compare the present position with the situation in 1975.

Mr. Whitney: I regret detailed information is not available on the number of staff employed in all the agencies involved in providing health care in the different member states. It would not in any event enable meaningful comparisons to be made because of the substantial differences between national health systems. In some, health services are provided entirely on a contractual basis, with hospitals and general practitioners contracting with state and private insurance funds to provide services to insured members. In others, services are provided by both directly employed and contracted services, the mix varying from member state to member state.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the number of beds in state-run hospitals in each of the member countries of the European Community; and what was the position in 1975.

Mr. Whitney: In Belgium, Germany, France, Luxembourg and the Netherlands hospitals are not run directly by the state but provide services on a contractual basis to insured members of state and private insurance funds. For these countries no precise data are readily available on the proportion of the total number of beds in public, private and voluntary hospitals used to provide services to members of state insurance schemes. On the assumption that the proportion is the same as the proportion of expenditure on health care generally by the public sector relative to total health care expenditure, the following rough estimates can, however, be made (the years indicated are the latest for which total bed figures are readily available):

Country and Year	Number
Belgium (1977)	68,850
Germany (1976)	580,000
France (1975)	314,000
Netherlands (1976)	115,450
Luxembourg (1976)	4,000

For the remaining countries, the number of beds in state-run hospitals for the latest year for which figures are readily available is as follows:

Country and Year	Numbers
Denmark (1977)	53,000
Ireland (1974)	24,600
(1984)	21,300
Italy (1975)	480,000
Spain (1982)	135,400
Portugal (1980)	32,000
Greece (1981)	27,500

(Comparable figures for the United Kingdom for 1975 and 1983 were 491,000 and 440,600 respectively).

These figures underestimate, in some cases considerably, the number of beds available to the public hospital sector because of the contractual arrangements made by the state health sector for the use of beds in private and voluntary hospitals

I regret that more comprehensive and up to date data on the lines requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

European Community (Geriatric Care)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what arrangements have been made for geriatric care for citizens of the European Community who may seek such assistance in Spain and Portugal following their accession to the Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: European Community nationals resident in Spain and Portugal who are in receipt of a state retirement pension from another member state may receive state health care in Spain and Portugal on the same terms and conditions as pensioners of those countries, including such geriatric care as may be necessary. Recipients of United Kingdom retirement pensions resident in Spain and Portugal have been informed individually of these rights. European Community nationals of any age who are insured for health care in another member state and who visit Spain and Portugal are also eligible for any immediately necessary treatment they may require during the visit.

NHS (Dietitians)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many dietitians were employed in the National Health Service in each of the following years: 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: The information is as follows:

Drugs, Alcohol and Tobacco (Abuse)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list Government expenditure on combating (a) drug abuse, (b) alcohol abuse and (c) smoking, for the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will give the latest estimate of the number of deaths resulting from each.

Mr. Whitney: The table gives the number of deaths in England and Wales in 1984 where the underlying cause of death was stated to be drug dependence or non-dependent abuse of drugs or was a cause associated with alcohol consumption. Except for deaths due to toxic effects of alcohol, figures are not readily available for accidental deaths with any mention of alcohol. However, it is estimated that in 1984 at least one road death in four was associated with alcohol ie about 1,200 road accident deaths in England and Wales.

The Royal College of Physicians estimated in 1981 that at least 100,000 deaths per year in the United Kingdom were related to smoking.

Expenditure on preventive activities by the Department in 1985-86 was as follows:

	£ million
(a) Illegal Drugs: DHSS education and information campaign	2
(b) Alcohol—regional education campaigns, publications and work in schools undertaken by the Health Education Council	0·4
Preventive and educational work by Alcohol Concern	0·3

AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report all current official programmes designed to contain the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the right hon. Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Mason) on 24 February at column 410-11. The public information campaign mentioned in the reply commenced on 16 March.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to involve (a) the British Medical Association, (b) the Health Education Council and (c) the Terrence Higgins Trust in programmes to combat acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: My Department already consults these organisations on matters relating to AIDS.

Hospital Unit Managers

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the latest number of hospital unit managers appointed as a result of the Griffiths management reorganisation of the National Health Service; and how many of these are qualified nurses.

Mr. Hayhoe: I understand health authorities have so far appointed 513 unit general managers. Of these 54 are nurses.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications he has received from boarders on supplementary benefit for exemption under (a) Requirements Regulation 9(17)(i) and (b) Requirements Regulation Schedule 2A paragraph 5(4)(m), and, in each of those categories, how many applications were successful.

Mr. Newton: The number of applications for the exercise of the Secretary of State's discretion under Requirements Regulation 9(17)(i) received in Headquarters is 103. Of these 45 were successful, five were unsuccessful and the remainder are still being considered. The number of applications received under Requirements Regulation schedule 2A paragraph 5(4)(m) is 67, of which 14 have been successful.

Perinatal Mortality

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the perinatal mortality and handicap figures for the years 1979 to 1985 inclusive for (a) England and (b) the Salford health authority area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The following table gives the perinatal mortality figures for (a) England, and (b) Salford district health authority for the years 1979-1984. The 1985 figures are not yet available. Statistics on perinatal handicap are not available.

* Salford Health District 1979-82

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what special support his Department gives to health authorities where the perinatal mortality and disability rate are above average to seek to reduce the figures; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what additional support he plans to give to special baby care units; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No special support has been made available to regional health authorities over and above their cash allocations. We have asked regions to send in reports on their neonatal services and their plans for improving them, where they consider this necessary, in the light of the recommendations in the three reports of the maternity services advisory committee.

Ophthalmic Surgery Services

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received regarding ophthalmic surgery services in the north-western region and in Salford in particular; what action he has taken in the light of these; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: A few representations have been received but the issues raised are matters for the North-Western regional health authority and the district health authorities concerned, and for the regional health authority to address through its strategic plans, in the light of local needs and priorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the chairman of North-Western regional health authority.

Health Certificates (Charges)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in what circumstances a National Health Service doctor may not charge for the issuance of a certificate, letter, and so on, relating to the health of a patient.

Mr. Hayhoe: Under his terms of service a general medical practitioner must issue to his National Health Service patients or their personal representatives free of charge medical statements for the purposes listed as follows and for statutory sick pay unless, for the conditions to which the statement relates, the patient—(a) is being attended by another doctor other than his own doctor's partner, assistant or deputy or; (b) is not being treated by, or under the supervision of, a doctor.

Supplementary Benefit (Uprating)

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends increasing in the November uprating the £1 available scale margin, which is offset against weekly additions by virtue of regulation 11(2)a of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirement) Regulations 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 24 February at columns 680-81 the details of the uprating which will take place this year in July. It is not intended to make any change in the level of the available scale margin.

Benefits

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing (a) the number of people currently receiving each short-term national insurance benefit, (b) the numbers of people receiving reduced benefit because of inadequate national insurance contributions and (c) the numbers of these who are women.

Mr. Major: The information requested is given in the table.

	Unemployment Benefit (May 1985)	Sickness Benefit (March 1985)	Maternity Allowance (March 1985)
Total beneficiaries	914,600	180,000	107,200
Women beneficiaries	337,100	46,000	107,200
Total receiving reduced rate	46,900	6,300	8,100
Women receiving reduced rate	21,800	3,100	8,100

National Insurance

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the number of people currently paying national insurance contributions on earnings between £35 and £38 per week and the numbers of those who are women.

Mr. Major: From 6 April 1986 there is no liability for payment of national insurance contributions on earnings below £38 a week.

Children in Care

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many children born in each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive have been born into (a) two-parent families and (b) one-parent families and taken into care within six months of birth in (i) Wales, (ii) England and (iii) Mid Glamorgan;

(2) how many children born in each year from 1979 to 1986 inclusive have been taken into care within six months of birth in (a) Wales, (b) England and (c) Mid Glamorgan.

Mr. Whitney: Information readily available to this Department and to the Welsh Office is given in the table.

Midwives

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many qualified midwives are employed by the National Health Service and working as midwives;

(2) what is the total number of vacancies for midwives in the health services;

(3) what estimates there are of the numbers of qualified midwives who do not work as midwives but take other nursing jobs.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that information on which an estimate of the number of qualified midwives who take other nursing jobs or the total number of vacancies for midwives in the National Health Service is not available. However, the Department is aware of a survey recently conducted of a sample of district health authorities in England which showed that at 31 March 1985 slightly less than 4 per cent. of midwifery posts have been vacant for three months or more compared with about 5 per cent. found in a similar survey in 1984. At 30 September 1984 in England 17,860 whole time equivalent midwives, (excluding administrative staff but including agency staff) were employed in the National Health Service as midwives.

Private Hospitals (Development Assistance)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial assistance is available for (a) new private hospital developments and (b) new private nursing homes.

Mr. Hayhoe: There are no funds held centrally by my Department for grants and loans to private health sector developments. Health authorities may make grants or loans to non profit making bodies, subject to the approval of the Treasury, and can also give financial assistance with capital work at a private establishment providing services to the National Health Service. These powers are not widely used.

In appropriate cases, regional selective assistance can be given by the Department of Trade and Industry to investment in new private hospitals and nursing homes operating on a commercial basis in the assisted areas, provided that the criteria governing eligibility for this type of assistance are fully met. Regional development grants are not currently available for private health sector developments.

Finance is of course available from banks and other sources. Tax relief may also be available to individuals who invest in companies which meet the qualifying conditions of the business expansion scheme.

Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make available to interested parties a list of references to the scientific literature reviewed by the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods in reaching its conclusions in the report on the safety and wholesomeness of irradiated food, published on 10 April.

Mr. Whitney: Although the text of the report does not contain specific references to source material, the bibliography at appendix G lists the major publications which the advisory committee and the specialist bodies it consulted took into account in reaching their conclusions. Unpublished data and summaries of them held at the international food irradiation project, Karlsruhe, were also considered.

Interested parties have been invited to comment on the report by the end of July. The advisory committee will be asked to advise Ministers on comments received, with particular reference to any source material cited which is not included in the report's bibliography.

Nuclear Installations (Cancer)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which areas of the United Kingdom have the highest incidence of those forms of cancer which have been correlated with atomic radiation; and whether any of these areas are in the immediate vicinity of nuclear power installations.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1986, c. 149]: The numbers of deaths in 1984 from 14 specific forms of cancer have been abstracted for each of 33 London boroughs, 36 Metropolitan districts and 297 county districts in England, for 37 county districts in Wales, for 53 local government districts in Scotland and for Northern Ireland as a whole, making 457 areas in all.

Myeloid leukaemia is the form of maligancy which is most closely associated with exposure to atomic radiation. The following table shows the 20 areas which had the greatest relative excess number of deaths from myeloid leukaemia in 1984. The excess has been identified by calculating the numbers of deaths which would have been expected in each area, allowing for the size of its population and its age and sex distribution, if the death rates in that area had been the same as the national (United Kingdom) average. The table also shows the crude death rates from myeloid leukaemia for these areas, which may be compared with the national rate of 3·85 per 100,000 persons.

Out of the 457 areas there are 25 which contain nuclear installations, and of these two are among the 20 areas listed in the table. It should be remembered that the numbers of deaths from myeloid leukaemia are small and the number in any particular area may fluctuate considerably from year to year. No great significance should therefore be attached to the rate for any particular area in just one year.

The other 13 forms of cancer for which data have been extracted are malignant neoplasm of the liver, lung, bone, female breast, testis, brain, and thyroid glands; Hodgkins's disease; other malignant neoplasm of lymphoma; multiple myeloma; lymphoid leukaemia; monocytic leukaemia; and other specified and unspecified leukaemia. The excess mortality of these other 13 forms of malignancy has been examined for those 25 areas which contain a nuclear installation. Ynys Mon (Anglesey) and Northavon feature in the table for myeloid leukaemia; Ynys Mon was also 44th in the ranking for other malignant neoplasms of lymphoma, whilst Northavon was 20th in the ranking for liver neoplasms. These results are also based on very small numbers of deaths. There is also a tendency for the 25 areas to be low in the ranking for lung cancer, and this is consistent with the rural nature of these areas.

DEFENCE

NATO Meeting

4. Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his discussions with the NATO Defence Ministers on 20 March.

34. Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on the nuclear planning group meeting he attended in March.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the meeting of the NATO nuclear planning group.

Mr. Younger: Defence Ministers of the members of NATO's nuclear planning group held one of their regular twice yearly meetings in Wurzburg on 20 and 21 March. We discussed a range of topics, including the status of nuclear forces and arms control, and I provided a comprehensive briefing on British nuclear forces. A copy of the communiqué of the meeting has been placed in the Library.

37. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what subjects he will be discussing at the NATO ministerial meeting in May.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 11 March, at column 798. The agenda is confidential.

Nuclear Weapons

9. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence what new battlefield nuclear weapons he proposes British forces should have.

17. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to replace the United Kingdom's free-fall nuclear bombs with nuclear missiles.

23. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Defence when, and with what weapons, British nuclear battlefield weapons will be replaced.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 20 January, at columns 90-91, and to the communiqué issued at the NATO nuclear planning group's meeting in March, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

22. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information on Britain's plan to modernise its nuclear weaponry was given to the NATO Defence Ministers meetings, held on 20 March.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add to what is said in paragraph 2 of the final communiqué of the NATO nuclear planning group issued on 21 March, a copy of which is in the Library.

European Fighter Project

15. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the European fighter project.

Mr. Younger: Work on the project definition phase of the European fighter aircraft project is proceeding well; the industrial reports on this phase are due to be submitted to the four Governments later this year.

Auxiliary Oiler and Replenishment Vessel

16. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he will place the orders for the auxiliary oiler and replenishment vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) on 9 April 1986, at column 128.

ROF plc

18. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future flotation of ROF plc.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As I announced last October, we would hope that Royal Ordnance plc could move to the private sector in mid-1986, subject to the usual caveats of trading performance and stock market conditions.

British Army of the Rhine

19. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans any changes in force ceilings in the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Stanley: Our present plans remain as in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates," in which we stated our intention of increasing the size of BAOR to 56,000 by the end of the decade.

27. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence what effects the coinciding of the Tornado programme with the first years of the Trident programme will have on the planned re-equipment of the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Whilst expenditure on Trident is beginning to build up, the burden of the Tornado programme has declined from its peak four years ago. As summarised in chapter 4 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985", a comprehensive modernisation programme is under way in all areas of capability, including BAOR.

Regional Employment Policy

20. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what specific initiatives he is taking to ensure that the location of military establishments forms an integral part of Her Majesty's Government's regional employment policy.

Mr. Lee: The Department of Employment and other Departments concerned are given advanced notification of any plans to re-deploy or close defence establishments and consultations take place as plans are developed. The possibility for relocating defence establishments to areas away from the south-east of England are the subject of continuing review. All proposals will need to stand on their operational and economic merits.

Strategic Defence Initiative

21. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what inquiries he has made, pursuant to Official Report, 13 March, column 1221; about an American offer of participation in the strategic defence initiative programme by Argentina.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement said in his letter of 24 March to the hon. Member, no United States Government invitation has been extended to Argentina to participate in the SDI research programme.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) the United States Administration and (b) British firms about the application of current United States of America restrictions on technology transfer to British firms which participate in strategic defence initiative research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The terms and conditions for United Kingdom participation in United States SDI research, including those related to technology transfer, have been extensively discussed with the United States Administration, with whom they were negotiated, and with British firms individually and at presentations held in London and Washington.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest analysis of the likely commercial spin-offs for British firms involved in strategic defence initiative research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is too soon to predict what specific research results will emerge from United Kingdom participation in SDI that offer prospects of civil spin-off.

Privatisation

24. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the estimated savings as a result of placing work originally undertaken by his Department with private contractors.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We estimate that the contracting out completed over the six years up to 1 February 1986 accounts for a reduction of 8,625·5 posts. Savings amount to about £28 million a year. These figures exclude any RN refitting work placed with private contractors.

39. Mr. Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give an estimate of the savings in the last two years obtained from the competitive tendering procedures now in use.

Mr. Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) on 26 November 1985, at column 553.

Horses

25. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent in the latest year for which figures are available on horses for military duties; how many horses were purchased; and how many horses are currently in regular use by the Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: £12,250 was spent on procuring 73 horses for the Army in 1985-86. About 550 horses are currently in regular use by the Army and an additional 10 per cent. are under training and being conditioned.

Ulster Defence Regiment

26. Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the rôle of the Ulster Defence Regiment.

Mr. Stanley: The Ulster Defence Regiment makes an indispensible contribution to Army operations in support of the Royal Ulster Constabulary in Northern Ireland.

Cruise Missiles

28. Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he anticipates that cruise missiles will be stationed at Molesworth by 1988.

Mr. Stanley: Yes.

Crown Proceedings Act 1947

29. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what action he intends to take to abolish section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947.

Mr. Lee: I cannot at present add to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 26 July 1985, at columns 876-87.

Royal Navy (Target-towing Contract)

30. Mr. Churchill asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many tenders he has received in respect of the Royal Navy target-towing contract; and how many of these meet all the requirements of both his Department and the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Lee: Invitations to tender are being reissued, with an amended specification. The successful tenderer will need to meet all the essential requirements of my Department and the Civil Aviation Authority.

British Aerospace

31. Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to pay an official visit to British Aerospace in Stevenage.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has no definite plans to visit British Aerospace, Stevenage. I myself intend to visit there shortly.

Chemical Weapons

32. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is the policy of Her Majesty's Government at the meeting of NATO Defence Ministers on 22-23 May for NATO to approve the modernisation of the United States proportional share of the NATO chemical deterrent.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 7 March, at column 313.

Trident Submarine (VSEL Consortium plc)

33. Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to be able to sign the contract with VSEL Consortium plc for the first-of-class Trident submarine.

Mr. Lee: It is hoped to sign the contract with VSEL Consortium plc shortly for SSBN05, the first-of-class Trident submarine.

Ammunition Exports

35. Mr Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total figure for exports of ammunition and related material for the latest year to date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The total value of United Kingdom exports of ammunition in 1985 was £85 million. Totals for previous years are given in the annual "Statement on the Defence Estimates", volume 2.

Weapons and Munitions

36. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement as to the weapons and munitions requirements of Her Majesty's Government for the year 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the Supply Estimates for 1986-87 (class I, vote 2). Further information will be contained in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986".

Territorial Army

38. Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with recruiting levels for the Territorial Army.

Mr. Lee: Recruiting levels for the Territorial Army continue to give cause for satisfaction, having shown a steady increase over the past five years. I am aware, however, of the need to maintain this momentum and a number of initiatives have been put into effect in the areas of public relations and the promotion of employer awareness to this end.

Tornado Aircraft

40. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he makes of the prospects for future sales of Tornado.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In the light of the proven excellence of the Tornado and of sales already achieved, the prospect for future sales must be very good. However, it has been the policy of this and successive Governments not to disclose details of sales or prospective sales.

Anti-tank Helicopter

41. Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made towards concerting operational requirements between the British and Italian Army staffs for a common dedicated anti-tank helicopter.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Discussions between the British and Italian defence staffs have established that their respective requirements for a light anti-tank helicopter to enter service in the 1990s could be met by a common design.

Officers (Resignations)

42. Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the number of Regular Army officers who have announced their intention of leaving the Army within the next 18 months.

Mr. Lee: Regular Army officers may not apply for permission to leave the Army more than 12 months before the date on which they wish to leave. 683 out of 752 such applications were approved over the last 12 months, but it is not possible without disproportionate effort to say how many of these relate to those who have yet to leave. 60 further applications are currently under consideration.

44. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the number of Regular officers resigning their commissions in 1986.

Mr. Lee: The number of Regular officers resigning their commissions, having been called upon to do so by the Defence Council, in January and February 1986 were as follows:

	Number
Royal Navy	2
Army	*4
Royal Air Force	2
Total	†8

* Up to 2 April 1986.
† Figures exclude training failures.

FH7O Ammunition

43. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his intention to place the explosives order for the FH7O ammunition currently being manufactured in Germany with Royal Ordnance Factory, Bridgwater.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The responsibility for producing the complete shell lies with the German manufacturer. In carrying out that function, he has placed a sub-contract on Royal Ordnance, Bridgwater, for the explosive filling.

Trident Programme

45. Sir Antony Buck asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Trident programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) on 11 March 1986, at column 800, and to the report placed in the Library of the House.

RIMPAC Exercise

46. Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the Royal Navy was invited to take part in the RIMPAC exercise in the central Pacific.

Mr. Stanley: A formal invitation was received in April 1985 following discussion between the United States Navy and the Royal Navy over previous months.

Microlight Aircraft

Viscount Cranborne asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has made arrangements to monitor the development in western Europe and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of flex-wing microlight aircraft for military use.

Mr. Stanley: Appropriate arrangements exist to monitor such developments.

Service Personnel (Body Armour)

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his answer of 14 November, Official Report, column 259, he will reconsider the proposed date for the general issue of body armour to service personnel.

Mr. Lee: No. The situation has not materially changed since my hon. Friend's answer on 14 November 1985.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has of lives saved of United Kingdom service personnel, on internal security duties within Northern Ireland, from the wearing of flak jackets made of woven synthetic fibre; how many such jackets have been purchased for use by British service personnel in each of the last three years; and if he will name the firms responsible for the manufacture of such jackets and the value of contracts placed with such firms.

Mr. Lee: Statistical evidence in the form requested is not available. The purpose of the "flak jacket" is to protect the soldier from the smaller flying fragments of exploding ordnance. It has never been claimed that this garment will stop directly aimed high velocity bullets or large exploding fragments. It has not been necessary to purchase any flak jackets in the last three years. We do not normally disclose the values or other details of Ministry of Defence contracts with supplier firms.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the protection offered to service personnel serving in Northern Ireland from the improved Northern Ireland body armour; why he is not planning to issue such body armour to Army personnel for general use before 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: We are most encouraged by the performance of Improved Northern Ireland Body Armour (INIBA). However, there is a marked weight penalty for the wearer which makes INIBA unsuitable for general combat use. We are therefore working on a new form of combat body armour to supersede the "flak jacket"; this will better protect against flying fragments in a combat situation while affording the soldier greater mobility because the garment will be lighter and more comfortable to wear. Following trials, we still hope to introduce this protective garment in 1989.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the firms which have been responsible in the past three years for manufacturing and making up flak jackets for his Department.

Mr. Lee: No. It is not our policy to disclose details of individual contracts.

Eastney Barracks

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what renovation works are currently being carried out on Eastney barracks; and what is the expected cost and duration of works.

Mr. Lee: The renovation work currently being undertaken at the Royal Marine barracks, Eastney, involves repairs to the clock tower at an estimated cost of £90,000 and essential ongoing maintenance, including roof repairs and plumbing, at an estimated cost of £135,735.

HMS Illustrious

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated time that it will take to repair the damage to HMS Illustrious following the recent fire.

Mr. Lee: On current information, the work should hopefully be completed towards the end of July.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the repair of the gearbox fire in HMS Illustrious.

Mr. Lee: Of the order of £4 million, on current information.

Technology Transfer

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what policy on technology transfer in the defence field generally is operated by the United States of America Administration with respect to British firms.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is not for Her Majesty's Government to give details of the policies operated by other Governments. In general terms, however, British firms maintain a good relationship with the United States in respect of technology sharing in the defence field.

Northern Ireland (Ministerial Visit)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about his visit to Her Majesty's forces in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Younger: I visited Northern Ireland last week and was able to see elements of all three services, including the Ulster Defence Regiment, and a number of different aspects of security forces operations in Northern Ireland. I also saw something of the difficult and dangerous conditions under which the security forces have to operate. I was very impressed by the professionalism and the commitment of all the security forces, and I am sure that the whole House shares my appreciation of their courage and dedication.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South African Residents

Mr. Batiste asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many residents of South Africa have the right of residence in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Precise details are not available. It is estimated that between 500,000 and 1 million residents in South Africa would be entitled to settle in the United Kingdom.

European Parliament

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he decided to agree to that part of the Single European Act which changes the name of the European Assembly to the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave him on 10 February, at column 309.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement setting out the descriptions and purposes of the various courts attached to the European Court of Justice referred to in the Single European Act.

Mrs. Chalker: The Single European Act authorises the Council, at the request of the Court of Justice, to set up by unanimous agreement a Court of First Instance with jurisdiction to hear and determine certain classes of action brought by individuals or companies. Its purpose will be to ease the workload on the Court of Justice (which has increased threefold over the last decade). The Court of Justice is expected to propose that the Court of First Instance should take over classes of action which typically involve time consuming fact-finding. These are likely to include applications concerned with the terms of service of Community employees which currently account for over half the cases that come before the court. There will be a right of appeal on points of law from the Court of First Instance to the Court of Justice.

Falkland Islands

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conclusions he has reached on the report by Dr. John Beddington on fisheries around Falklands; and if he will introduce the recommended management measures without delay.

Mr. Eggar: We have concluded that our policy should be to work for early agreement on a multilateral conservation and management regime under the auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation. Such agreement offers the best prospect of measures which are workable and effective. A technical assessment of the fish stocks, which is the essential first step for an agreement, is now being conducted by FAO experts.

British Council, Commonwealth Institute and Crown Agents

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the number of staff employed by (a) the British Council, (b) the Commonwealth Institute and (c) the Crown Agents in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Eggar: The details are as follows:

	1979	1985
British Council	4,332	*4,165
Commonwealth Institute	132	119
Crown Agents	2,153	1,087

* This figure includes 108 staff taken on to administer the FCO scholarhip and awards scheme, and 60 staff transferred to the council as a result of the incorporation of the inter-university council and TETOC (Technical Education and Training).

Nuclear Weapons

47. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received seeking the introduction of a trial test ban for nuclear weapons in consultation with other nuclear powers.

Mr. Renton: We have received in recent months one letter from a member of the public suggesting a trial test ban.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Polytechnic and College Places

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the number, location and course types of polytechnic and college places which the National Advisory Body has recommended be removed from the public sector provision of higher education.

Mr. Walden: No. NAB itself has made no recommendations. The NAB secretariat has made proposals on its own authority as a basis for consultations with institutions and with a view to preparing draft advice to the Secretary of State for consideration by the NAB board and committee later this year. Decisions are taken by the Secretary of State.

The NAB secretariat's proposals are issued on a confidential basis for consultation to institutions, their maintaining local education authorities and a limited range of other bodies with a direct interest, such as those responsible for the validation of courses at particular colleges. Copies have been made available to my Department and to Her Majesty's Inspectorate on a similar basis.

MRC Unit Edinburgh University

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the proposed closure of the Medical Research Council's unit in King's buildings, Edinburgh university.

Mr. Walden: The unit in question is the Medical Research Council's mammalian genome unit. Decisions on whether to close its establishments are a matter for the council. I understand that the council has been unable to identify a new director for this unit and has therefore decided, in principle, that the unit should close.

Academic Salaries

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how academic salaries in the United Kingdom compare with those in other Council of Europe countries.

Mr. Walden: This information is not available centrally.

Lunchtime Supervision

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those education authorities which have still not submitted acceptable schemes for lunchtime supervision for 1986-87; and if he proposes to extend the present deadline for submission of such schemes.

Mr. Dunn: The following LEAs have submitted schemes for midday supervision for 1986-87 which are still under consideration:

Barnet
Enfield
Hillingdon
Kingston
Merton
Coventry
Wolverhampton
Wakefield
North Tyneside
Cambridgeshire
Hertfordshire
Humberside
North Yorkshire
Oxfordshire
Shropshire
Suffolk
Cumbria
Newcastle
Cheshire
Hounslow
Sandwell
Gateshead

The following LEAs have submitted no schemes for 1986-87 but some of them are understood to be submitting proposals to their education committees shortly:

Brent
Haringey
Harrow
Sutton
Walsall
Knowsley
Sefton
Wirral
Rochdale
Salford
Stockport
Tameside
Trafford
Wigan
Barnsley
Rotherham
Calderdale
Kirklees
Leeds
Isles of Scilly
Avon
Dorset
Lancashire
Havering
Liverpool
St. Helens
Doncaster
Bradford
Sunderland
Derbyshire
Isle of Wight Leicestershire
Lincolnshire
Northumberland

My right hon. Friend is prepared to be flexible about the deadline for the submission of schemes for 1986-87, but I hope that those LEAs which have not yet done so will very shortly submit proposals for schemes of midday supervision which qualify for ESG.

Parent-Teacher Associations

Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what information he has as to how many (a) secondary, (b) primary and (c) special schools had parent-teachers' associations or parents' guilds in (d) 1974, (e) 1979, (f) 1982 and in the last year for which statistics are available;

(2) what information he has as to how many (a) secondary, (b) primary and (c) special schools have parent-teachers' associations or parents' guilds;

(3) what information he has as to how many (a) secondary, (b) primary and (c) special schools have parent-teachers' associations or parents' guilds that presently exist in each local education authority listed by authority;

(4) what information he has as to the percentage of (a) secondary, (b) primary and (c) special schools which have parent-teachers' associations or parents' guilds (d) as a percentage of the total and (e) as a percentage of the total in each local education authority, listed by authority.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected centrally.

EMPLOYMENT

Manpower Services Commission

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Paymaster General whether he is satisfied that the regional organisation of the Manpower Services Commission is able to cope effectively with the demands on it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Government and the commission have recently been reviewing the commission's priorities over the next three years. We have agreed that the commission will have a central role to play in two distinct but related areas, vocational education and training, and employment and enterprise. Within each area we are steadily developing the Government's policies. We have therefore asked the commission to assist in the development of a training and vocational education system which will provide rapidly and flexibly the skills employers and individuals will need. We have also asked it to promote enterprise and employment so that we accelerate the growth of new jobs and also provide specific measures to help long-term unemployed people get back into the labour market.

To ensure that it is in a position to meet these challenges we have agreed that the commission should make some changes to its organisation. Two major linked operational groups matching the two broad priority areas will be created. Each group will have a regional network. For convenience, in each English region the regional employment and enterprise director will be the MSC and DE spokesman in each region. In Wales the employment director will act as prime representative of the commission and my Department on general issues and in Scotland the vocational education and training director.

An important feature of the proposals is the creation of a new east-midlands and eastern division of the MSC. The proposed coverage of each MSC region is set out below.

We aim to establish the new regional arrangements from 1 July this year. We are confident that they will enable the commission to tackle effectively the urgent and demanding tasks ahead.

List of MSC regions and proposed MSC areas

Tourist-Related Employment

Mr. Pawsey asked the Paymaster General if he will take steps to improve training and retraining for tourist-related employment.

Mr. Trippier: My Department is already heavily committed through the Manpower Services Commission to the provision of training and retraining for tourist-related jobs. In December 1985 more than 11,000 YTS places were available in tourism-related industries. Adult training and retraining for the sector is also being assisted under MSC programmes such as training for enterprise, open-tech and the job training scheme. The commission has identified the development of training initiatives in the tourism sector as having a high priority.

Mines and Quarries Act

Mr. Batiste asked the Paymaster General whether he has plans to review the working of the Mines and Quarries Act in respect of safety, having regard to modern technological advances.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. The Health and Safety Commission is reviewing the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 and associated legislation. The review will take account of modern technological advances as well as other matters. The commission has issued consultative documents on three subjects and will be putting forward proposals to me in the light of the response.

City Action Teams

Mr. Livsey asked the Paymaster General what progress has been made in combating innercity unemployment by city action teams.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The main aim of the city action teams is to promote joint working between Departments so that their spending in the inner city areas they cover is more effective in terms of employment, industry and environment. I am satisfied that there has been significant progress over the past year through jobs created, training provided, industry assisted and urban areas improved.

Textile Industry

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General whether he has any plans to sponsor retraining schemes in the textile industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Employers are primarily responsible for meeting their own training needs. However, the Government via the Manpower Services Commission provide support, principally through the job training scheme for unemployed people and local training grants to employers, for existing workers and new recruits. The commission's area offices will consider all applications for local training grants from employers including, of course, those in the textile industry. Funds are also available for retraining through industry training organisations, including those in the textile sector.

Computer Industry

Mr. Ashdown asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate the shortfall in computer skilled trainees for employment in the computer industry; and if he plans to close this gap.

Mr. Trippier: The Government are aware of a growing demand for skilled computer staff, from the computer industry itself, and more widely.

The Government are contributing to the alleviation of skills shortages in a number of ways. In March 1985, £43 million was allocated over three years to provide 5,000 extra engineering and technology places in higher education. Manpower Services Commission schemes, including the job training scheme, the threshold scheme and YTS training in information technology centres provide training in computing skills. Some 20 per cent. of local grant expenditure under the adult training programme is spent on helping firms to purchase training in information technology skills.

As well as using direct funding, it is a key aim of the adult training strategy to improve the working of the training market so that, among other things, firms and training providers take action earlier to perceive and tackle incipient skill shortages. The Government also welcome the establishment of the information technology skills agency which seeks to co-ordinate efforts by industry, education and the Government to overcome computing skills shortages.

Job Creation Scheme

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Paymaster General in what circumstances he would be prepared to waive the regulations governing the two-year rule between full-time education and school leaving age for retraining courses organised by the job creation scheme under the Manpower Services Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I believe that the hon. Member is referring to the rule under the job training scheme which requires applicants to have spent a total of at least two years away from full-time education since the minimum school-leaving age. The purpose of this rule is to ensure that, with the limited support available, the scheme does not duplicate or replace other forms of initial training. This rule may be waived exceptionally where a national skill shortage would be alleviated by providing applicants normally ineligible under this rule with short courses designed to sharpen the relevance of their education to employment. In addition, the rule is waived for unemployed disabled applicants.

The Government and the Manpower Services Commission keep the rules of this and other training schemes under careful review.

Institute of Careers Officers

Mr. Dixon asked the Paymaster General if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Institute of Careers Officers to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. The proposal for this exhibition has our full support.

Labour Force Survey

Mr. Soames asked the Paymaster General when the results of the 1985 labour force survey are to be published.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Work is in hand to produce a range of preliminary results from the 1985 labour force survey similar to those for 1984 which appeared in Employment Gazette in May 1985. In the absence of an Employment Gazette in April, and to avoid undue delay, we intend to issue the preliminary results of the 1985 survey in a press release on 23 April: they will also appear in an article in the May Employment Gazette in the usual way.

The Department announced on 19 February that its employment estimates were to be revised in the light of the 1985 labour force survey and the 1984 census of employment. However, the census timetable has been delayed because of operational difficulties and results are not now expected before the late summer. It has therefore been decided to revise the employment estimates in light of the 1985 labour force survey results without waiting for the census of employment results. These revised estimates were published in the labour market press notice which was released earlier today. Subsequent revision may be necessary when the census results become available later in the year.

ENVIRONMENT

Wild Birds

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number and area of special protection areas now notified to the European Commission under directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds; how many further sites identified as meeting the criteria for listing remain; and how many of these have been notified as sites of special scientific interest under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mrs. Rumbold: Eighteen special protection areas have so far been notified by the United Kingdom to the European Commission under EC directive 79/409 on wild birds. The total area involved is 40,720 hectares.

The Nature Conservancy Council has identified a further 135 sites which, in its opinion, are eligible for designation. The Nature Conservancy Council could not, except at disproportionate cost, identify which areas of these have so far been notified as sites of special scientific interest.

Rates (Electricity Boards)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set a date for the review of the formula for the calculation of rates by electricity boards; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that the review of the formula for calculation of rates payable by electricity boards will reduce the proportion of the payments falling on the London Electricity Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: A review of all statutory rating formula, including that for the electricity supply industry, will be starting shortly. Consideration will of course be given to the relative proportion of the rate burden borne by the CEGB and each of the area electricity boards, but I cannot prejudge the outcome. It is intended that the review should be completed in time to be implemented with the revaluation of non-domestic property planned for 1 April 1990.

Water Authorities (Privatisation)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next proposes to meet the trade unions to discuss conditions of employment and protection of pension rights of employees consequent on the privatisation of water authorities.

Mr. John Patten: I have no plans to meet the water industry trade unions to discuss these matters at present, though I met NALGO on 14 February at a seminar on privatising the water authorities, at which pensions were discussed.

Tobacco (Sports Championship)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department requested the advice of the Sports Council on tobacco and sports sponsorship; and if he will publish any exchanges of relevant correspondence with the chairman of the Sports Council and place them in the Library.

Mr. Tracey: My Department sought the advice of the Sports Council on 31 December 1985. I have placed a copy of the relevant exchange of correspondence in the Library.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what he estimates to be the additional travelling costs for Property Services Agency staff involved in the proposal to relocate the Property Services Agency area tier from Shrewsbury to Birmingham;

(2) if he will state the estimated savings of the proposed closure of the area tier of the Property Services Agency.

Sir George Young: An exercise is currently being undertaken to assess the likely costs, including travel costs, and savings of the proposed regional reorganisation of PSA, and reliable estimates cannot yet be given.

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number of people involved in the present area tiers of the Property Services Agency and the numbers estimated in the group management unit's proposals.

Sir George Young: At 1 March 1986 the number of staff in area offices (excluding London) was 1,668. Proposals for staffing in group manager commands are currently being prepared and reliable estimates cannot yet be given. When available, these numbers will not be comparable with the area numbers quoted because group managers will undertake a different range of functions to the present area offices.

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the number of people employed on an administrative and manual basis by the Property Services Agency in (a) Shrewsbury and (b) Shropshire.

Sir George Young: At 1 March 1986 the number of people employed was as follows:

	Non-industrial	Industrial
(a) Shrewsbury*	67	12
(b) Shropshire	126	125

* Included in (b).

Council Dwellings (Charges)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the number of local authorities which make a service charge for warden and other services over and above rents for council flats and houses.

Sir George Young: According to information provided by local authorities, 335 authorities received income from charges for heating, services and other amenities in 1984-85. No breakdown of this income is available.

Enforcement Notices (Compliance)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to provide for a statutory time limit within which compliance with an enforcement notice issued by a local authority would be compulsory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Section 87(13) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 already provides for an enforcement notice to take effect on a date to be specified in the notice by the local planning authority; and section 87(8) of the Act requires the planning authority to specify the period or periods within which any remedial steps required by the notice must be taken. Once any notice has taken effect, it is a criminal offence, open to prosecution under section 89 of the Act, not to comply with its requirements. My right hon. Friend has no proposals for amending these provisions at present.

Planning Compensation (Review)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is now in a position to publish the results of his review of planning compensation.

Mr. Tracey: My noble Friend the Minister of State has today made the following reply in another place:

"A consultation paper on the compensation provisions of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 is being sent to interested bodies today and copies are being placed in the Library.

During the passage of the Town and Country Planning (Compensation) Act 1985, the Government undertook to review these provisions. The consultation paper concludes that there should be no change to the basic framework of the existing law of planning compensation, but proposes amendment of a number of the provisions.

A similar consultation paper on the compensation provisions of the Town and Country Planning (Scotland) Act 1972 is being sent to interested bodies in Scotland and copies are also being placed in the Library."

Rating Reform

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the rating reform proposals in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government", and what steps he has taken to bring his proposals to the attention of the general public.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: To date I have received 201 responses on this aspect of our proposals. The consultation period ends on 31 October. My Department has prepared a summary of the proposals in booklet form. Copies are available on request from my Department.

I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library and in the Vote Office.

Sewage Plants

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the effluent discharges standard at each sewage treatment plant in the Thames water authority.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986, c. 166]: Records are held by this Department of consents issued to water authorities by my right hon. Friend under the Control of Pollution Act 1974. The detail is held separately for each discharge and is not readily collatable to form a complete listing. However, full information on all sewage treatment works operated by the Thames water authority is available from the public register maintained by that authority.

Water Industry (Privatisation)

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision he proposes to make in the water industry privatisation legislation in relation to pension arrangements (a) during the period when the water services public limited companies are owned by the Government and (b) when they are sold to the private sector.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 302]: The rights of existing and deferred pensioners and rights accrued by existing employees under the local government superannuation scheme are unaffected by privatisation. The industry is now considering the position of new employees and of existing employees in respect of future service. When I have received and considered their proposals I shall make clear the Government's position.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Bermingham asked the Attorney-General what are the establishment numbers of staff for each Crown prosecution area in England and Wales tabulated by grade and position; and how many of each grade or position have been appointed by the last date information was available.

The Attorney-General: The information requested by the hon. Member is being collated. It will be made available as soon as practicable.

Ms. Adebola Makenjuola

Mr. Cohen asked the Solicitor-General if, pursuant to his answers of 21 November 1985, Official Report, column 266 and 19 December 1985, Official Report, column 252, concerning the alleged sexual assault on Ms. Adebola Makenjuola, the Director of Public Prosecutions has completed his consideration of the police report; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Director of Public Prosecutions has completed his consideration of the police report concerning the alleged sexual assault on Ms. Adebola Makenjuola, and he has decided not to institute proceedings in this case.

Terrorism

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General (1) if he will prosecute Control Risks Ltd. for soliciting or inviting other persons, in discussions in the United Kingdom, to give money to an organisation involved in terrorism, contrary to section 10 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will prosecute Control Risks Ltd. And Cassidy Davies Ltd., insurers for conspiring, in discussions held in London, to contravene sections 10 and 11 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Government are aware of the concern about kidnap ransom insurance and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has the position under consideration. However, I am satisfied that such insurance may be lawfully effected under English law. Those who advise the families of kidnapped persons must do so in a manner which complies with the requirements of sections 10 and 11 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984. No evidence has ever been placed before me of the commission by Control Risks Ltd. or Cassidy Davies Ltd. of either substantive offences under sections 10 or 11 of the 1984 Act or conspiracy to contravene those provisions.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General what representations he has received from the Government of the Irish Republic regarding his policy towards prosecutions in kidnap cases under sections 10 and 11 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: None.

PRIME MINISTER

Libyan Nationals (Military Training)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Prime Minister how many Libyan nationals were receiving military training in the United Kingdom in (a) 1983, (b) 1984 and (c) 1985; how many are receiving such training at the present time; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: A number of Libyan armed forces personnel underwent training at defence establishments in the United Kingdom in 1983 and up to the end of April 1984. Immediately following the incident at the Libyan People's Bureau, in which WPC Fletcher was killed, all Libyan personnel on courses at defence establishments in the United Kingdom were sent home. We have not provided any training since this time.

Libya (Trade Sanctions)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Prime Minister if she will consider imposing trade sanctions upon Libya; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Trade sanctions could be effective only if strictly observed by each and every nation. No universal agreement to impose them has ever been reached.

Royal Wedding

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith asked the Prime Minister if it is proposed that 23 July, the day of the wedding of His Royal Highness Prince Andrew to Miss Sarah Ferguson, should be a public holiday.

The Prime Minister: In accordance with the relevant precedents there are no plans that 23 July should be a public holiday.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tropical Moist Forests

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list all development projects carried out in tropical moist forests since 1980 which have been wholly or partly funded through bilateral aid programmes of the Overseas Development Administration or the Commonwealth Development Corporation; and whether he will list the cost and type of aid contributed by the United Kingdom and the area of forest affected by each project.

Mr. Raison: Comprehensive information is not kept centrally in the form requested, and to collect it would incur disproportionate cost. ODA has procedures to ensure that in the consideration of all bilateral aid projects full account is taken of their environmental consequences, particularly for such important and fragile environments as the tropical rain forest. I am happy to approve aid projects designed to help developing countries in the sustainable management of this important natural resource. We have, for example, financed, or are financing, forest inventories in Ghana, Grenada and the Bangladesh Sundarabans.

Gibraltar

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to provide further aid to Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: The Government have offered to the Government of Gibraltar an additional grant of £2·4 million as a final contribution to the conversion of Gibraltar's naval dockyard into a commercial ship repair yard and up to £6 million for certain priority projects in Gibraltar's 1986-90 development plan.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Statistics)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were detained in each of Her Majesty's prisons or detention centres or other institutions on (a) 1 january 1979 and (b) 1 January 1986; and how many prison officers were in post at each institution on these dates.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information is as follows:

PC John Fordham (Undercover Operation)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis stating what went wrong in the undercover operation at the home of Mr. Kenneth Noye which cost PC John Fordham his life; whether there has been any revision of police procedures in such cases as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As I explained in my reply to a question from the hon. Member on 21 January, at columns 171-72, PC John Fordham was acting in accordance with operational instructions. Given that only PC Fordham would have been able to provide further information as to precise events at Mr. Noye's home, the Commissioner does not consider that additional inquiries or a revision of operational procedures are necessary.

Police National Computer

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now make a statement on the outcome of the inquiry into the misuse of the police national computer announced on 19 June 1985, Official Report, column 138; and what measures are proposed to endeavour to avoid such misuse in future.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Police Complaints Authority announced on 24 March 1986 that the investigation carried out by the assistant chief constable of Sussex under its supervision had been completed. It had revealed a number of incidents of misuse of the police national computer in respect of vehicle registration marks selected as winning numbers in the BP and national car registration number competition. No evidence was found that police officers had received money from such misuse, nor was any evidence found of the commission of a criminal offence. Twenty-five police officers are to face or have already faced disciplinary proceedings as a consequence of the investigation. In addition, three police officers resigned from their forces in the course of the investigation.

The authority indicated that the investigation revealed discrepancies between police forces in the way in which local force orders regulated access to the police national computer. They are to submit to my right hon. Friend a report containing their recommendations for the avoidance of future misuse of the computer. My right hon. Friend will consider what action is necessary when he has received the report, which he is required to lay before Parliament and to publish.

Mr. Karabardak (Deportation Order)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the likely date that he will issue an explanatory statement on the refusal to revoke the deportation order of Mr. Karabardak, of Swansea.

Mr. Waddington: The explanatory statement was dispatched to the appellate authorities on 10 April 1986.

News International Plant, Wapping

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 11, a decision has yet been taken as to whether to bring charges against the driver of the lorry which drove into a meeting at Wapping on 12 March at which right hon. and hon. Members were present, and several people were injured.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that inquiries into this incident have not yet been completed.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from each chief constable giving details of the number of traffic wardens in each force area.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information for England and Wales is as follows:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Battery Hens (Cage Sizes)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will propose the introduction of measures specifying a minimum cage size of 600 sq cm for battery hens within the European Economic Community.

Mrs. Fenner: The Council directive adopted last month is based on a minimum space allowance of 450 sq cm for battery hens. The Government have already made clear their view that the directive did not go far enough to protect the welfare of battery hens, but that it represented the best that was negotiable at the present time. I see little point in trying to reopen the discussions now.

SCOTLAND

Edinburgh Prison

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what measures are being taken to improve conditions in Edinburgh prison;

(2) what representations he has received about overcrowding in Edinburgh prison;

(3) if he will make a statement on conditions in Edinburgh prison.

Mr. Rifkind: As a result of a substantial rise in the inmate population, numbers in Edinburgh prison are currently just over 700, as compared with the design capacity of 547, but have recently exceeded 800. At this level of overcrowding, inmates in certain halls have to be housed two, and in some instances three, to a cell. Representations have been received from my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, West (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton) and from the prison visiting committee.

In order to provide relief, the south wing at Polmont young offenders institution is being operated as an annexe of Edinburgh prison holding some 50 under-21 remand prisoners. As soon as necessary security measures currently in hand are completed, and subject to it being possible to provide sufficient accommodation for convicted young offenders, north wing at Polmont will be used for this purpose instead of south wing, allowing 30 additional under-21 remand prisoners from Edinburgh prison to be accommodated. No substantial reduction in overcrowding is, however, likely to be possible until phase II of Shotts prison becomes available for occupation early in 1987. Within the constraints imposed by overcrowding, everything possible is done to maintain a full and varied regime.

Trunk Roads

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy in regard to fitting hard shoulders as distinct from hard verges on trunk roads.

Mr. Ancram: It is not my right hon. and learned Friend's policy to provide hard shoulders on trunk roads other than motorways. It is becoming standard practice, however, to provide 1 m wide hard strips along the edges of new and improved single and dual carriageway trunk roads.

Salmon and Grilse Catches

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the provisional total number of salmon and grilse caught by rod and line in Scotland during 1985; and if he will list these figures in the Official Report.

Mr. John MacKay: The reported catches of salmon and grilse during 1985, indicated by returns received up to the end of February 1986, caught by rod and line in Scottish rivers are 58,323 salmon and 17,614 grilse. Final catch statistics are not yet available.

Offences (Statistics)

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, in respect of each police force area in Scotland in 1985, the total number of (a) offences notified to the police, (b) offences of violence against the person, (c) burglaries, (d) thefts, (e) offences of fraud and forgery and (f) offences of criminal damage.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Eastern Bloc Fish Processing Vessels

Mr. Randall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates he has made of the impact of the new Customs and Excise levies on supplies to Eastern bloc fish processing vessels on the sale of British fish; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Until the scale and scope of these levies have been agreed, my right hon. and learned Friend is not in a position to estimate their effect on the sales of fish.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Pregnancy Testing

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list all the health authorities which do not provide the service of routine, not solely on medical grounds, pregnancy testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not available centrally. Health authorities are aware of the importance of routine pregnancy testing facilities being readily available.

Elderly People (Domestic Services)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about decisions reached following the joint seminar sponsored by his Department and the Department of the Environment on 5 March to discuss the various services which can help elderly people to stay in their own homes.

Mr. Whitney: This seminar, organised jointly by the Department of the Environment and the Department of Health and Social Security, was part of the follow up to a report by Dr. Anthea Tinker, a principal research officer with the Department of the Environment, entitled "Staying at Home—Helping the Elderly People." At the seminar the findings of the report and their implications for local authorities and for central Government were discussed with representatives of local and health authorities, professional organisations and voluntary bodies. Both Departments are now considering whether further guidance should be issued to authorities.

West Essex and District Community Health Council

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he expects to acknowledge receipt of the following letters from West Essex and district community health council (a) 25 February 1986, ref. AA/MK/SK/CHC.11/PLA.9D, (b) 23 January 1986, ref. AA/MK/SK/CHC.11/PLA.9D, (c) 11 December 1985, ref. AA/MK/SK/IS5/33A and (d) 29 October 1985, ref. AA/MK/SK/IS5.33A.

Mr. Whitney: The community health council's letter of 25 October requested a meeting to discuss the proposed closure of Forest hospital. The 11 December letter was a reminder letter. My response to both these letters was the meeting I held with the community health council on 17 December.

The letter of 23 January, together with a further letter of 25 February, was replied to on 24 March.

Pharmaceutical Companies

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any United States or other overseas pharmaceutical companies in the United Kingdom have to his Department's knowledge announced substantial redundancies in existing or planned investment since the introduction of the selected list.

Mr. Hayhoe: A number of American pharmaceutical companies have recently announced changes in their investment plans in the United Kingdom. The introduction of the selected list has been given as one of many factors for the siting of production or research facilities elsewhere in Europe or other parts of the world.

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met representatives of United States pharmaceutical companies operating in the United Kingdom; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I met representatives of the United States Pharmaceutical Manufacturers' Association on 1 October 1985. Both I and my ministerial colleagues have met representatives of individual companies on several other occasions and are well aware of their interests and concerns.

Smoking

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress and effectiveness so far of the Government's campaign to discourage smoking amongst teenagers.

Mr. Whitney: This test campaign, which began in December, is being closely monitored. It would be premature to attempt to measure changes in behaviour, but the advertising was the subject of qualitive research over the period 21 February to 14 March. This has suggested ways of strengthening the advertising, which will be modified accordingly.

St. George's Hospital (Crown Interest)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Social Services to whom the Crown's interest in the St. George's hospital site has now been sold; and at what price.

Mr. Hayhoe: St. George's hospital, Hyde park corner, has been empty since 1980 and protracted negotiations have been taking place since then with the trustees of the Grosvenor estate which owns the remainder of the site. The DHSS had previously agreed in principle to sell the Crown's interest in the site to the trustees, but despite lengthy negotiations it did not prove possible to reach agreement on the terms of the proposed sale. The Government have now accepted an offer of £10·75 million from HPC Trustees Ltd, a wholly owned subsidiary of Arbuthnot Properties Ltd. The offer now accepted was substantially more advantageous, by some £2·75 million, than the trustees' final offer which was made on Maundy Thursday. An agreement was then reached with the new owners who will be making their own press announcement. The proceeds of the sale will pass to the South-West Thames regional health authority.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate, for each of the last five years for which figures are available, the total number of applications that have been made for mobility allowance, and the number of such claims that have been granted, for each year; and if he has any plans to modify his Department's procedures insofar as they relate to the award of mobility allowance to claimants.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 27 March at column 569. Decisions on eligibility are for the independent adjudicating authorities, but procedures for the processing and payment of claims are kept under review to ensure that they are as quick and effective as possible. We have no present plans for extending the scope of the allowance.

Benefits (Indexation)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the first-year and full-year cost of extending the long-term rate of supplementary benefit to the long-term unemployed in 1985-86 and 1986-87 (a) net of the cost of indexation and (b) net of the cost of indexation and savings in other benefits as a direct result of this measure.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 26 February 1986, c. 611.]: The information requested is as follows:

Period	*Cost (£ million)
November 1985—April 1986	190
April 1986—April 1987	530

* To nearest £10 million

There should be no savings in other benefits. Our proposals in the Social Security Bill currently before Parliament would replace the present supplementary benefit scheme structure, including the distinction between ordinary and long-term rates, by income support based on personal allowances and premiums.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve have resigned since 15 November 1985.

Mr. Scott: Seventy four members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve have resigned during the period 15 November 1985 to 6 April 1986.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total cost of providing security for the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference held at Stormont on 11 March.

Mr. Scott: Precise details are not readily available. However, the cost of policing this event has been estimated at £60,000.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Beggs asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many neighbourhood watch schemes are operating in Northern Ireland;

(2) if he will take steps to encourage the development of neighbourhood watch schemes in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Scott: I have no plans to introduce such schemes in Northern Ireland at present.

Enniskillen Town Centre Plan

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why the publication of the Enniskillen town centre plan has been delayed; and whan he now expects it to be published.

Mr. Needham: The preparation of the plan has taken longer than expected due to the need to progress a number of town centre plans simultaneously. It is scheduled for publication in June 1986.

Armagh Prison (Strip Searches)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many strip searches were made of female prisoners in Her Majesty's prison, Armagh, in March; if he will give the number of persons involved and the number of times each person was searched; whether any prison contraband, smuggled item or illegal correspondence was discovered in any search, indicating which items; in how many cases prisoners refused to be searched and had to be restrained while the search was being conducted; and if he will indicate the reasons for the search, namely, making an appearance at Armagh courthouse on remand, attending trial, inter-prison visit or other reasons.

Mr. Scott: On 18 March Her Majesty's prison Armagh closed and the prisoners were transferred to Her Majesty's prison Maghaberry (female).

In respect of both establishments, during March 1986 a total of 36 searches were carried out on 22 prisoners; 10 prisoners were searched once, 10 were searched twice and two prisoners were searched on three occasions. No prohibited article was found during these searches, and no prisoner refused to be searched. Searches were carried out in the following circumstances:

	Numbers
First admission on remand or whilst awaiting trail	8
First admission on sentence or on final discharge	10
Attending Armagh remand court	nil
Attending other remand courts	7
Attending trial	1
Bail Court appearances	7
Going on, or returning from, home leave	3
Total	36

Belfast

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will make a statement on the meeting between the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney), and representatives of Belfast community organisations on Monday 14 April;

(2) what information he has on the number of community groups which have closed down in Belfast, the number of jobs which have been lost and the types of facilities and services which have ceased due to the Belfast city council adjournment policy.

Dr. Mawhinney: Community group representatives advised me at the meeting that to date some 31 staff have been laid off, affecting a wide range of services provided by seven community councils, community resource centres and advice centres, which have been forced to close.

The group representatives were assured that the Government are keeping the situation under close review.

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much money currently lies in the Department of Education's budget whose payment to Belfast city council's community services programme has been obstructed by that council's adjournment policy;

(2) what consideration he has given to exercising the Department of Education's powers under the Recreation and Youth Services (Northern Ireland) Order 1973 and the Community Relations (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1975 directly to grant aid those community organisations in Belfast which have, or are being, forced to close because of Belfast city council's adjournment policy.

Dr. Mawhinney: Just under £300,000 in respect of the 1986-87 financial year. While the situation is being kept under review, the Government presently have no proposals for making direct payments to the groups involved.

Firearms

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legally held firearms were stolen in Northern Ireland during 1985 from the Special Constabulary, giving a breakdown of weapons stolen.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 243]: During 1985 only one weapon, a pistol, was stolen from a member of the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve. It was taken during the attack on Ballygawley Royal Ulster Constabulary station on 7 December last year, in which two policemen died.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the figures for 1985 of the number of persons proceeded against for scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many persons pleaded guilty to the principal offence; and how many persons in such contested cases were found not guilty of the principal offence.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 243]: In 1985, 698 persons were proceeded against at the Crown Court in respect of scheduled offences. 552 of these pleaded guilty and 146 not guilty. 73 persons were found not guilty. Six persons were also tried summarily for scheduled offences during 1985; four of these pleaded guilty and two pleaded not guilty. The latter were all acquitted.

Remanded Persons

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was (a) the average number of days spent on remand for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together in 1985, (b) the total number of persons remanded in custody before trial for both scheduled and non-scheduled offences together in 1985, and (c) the number of bail applications refused for (i) scheduled, (ii) non-scheduled and (iii) both offences together in 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 243]: For persons tried in 1985, and who were in custody at the time of their trial, the average length of time spent on custodial remand was 178 days.

In the same year 1,738 prisoners were remanded in custody prior to trial and 764 bail applications were refused. It is not possible, without incurring disproportionate cost, to say whether the bail applications were in respect of persons charged with scheduled or non-scheduled offences.

Prevention of Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the number of persons who were initially detained under other Acts and were subsequently charged under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in 1985, by each quarter.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 243]: During 1985 no one charged under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 had been arrested initially under another Act.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many formal complaints have been made about incidents of police use of plastic baton rounds in 1985 and the current year to date; in how many cases the complaint has been upheld; and in how many cases disciplinary action has been taken against the officers involved.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 242]: During 1985 six formal complaints were made about the use of plastic baton rounds by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Four were later withdrawn and the others are still under investigation. To date in 1986 (10 April) one formal complaint has been made. This is also under investigation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

United Nations General Assembly Resolution 40/64I

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the reasons why Her Majesty's Government voted against the 1985 United Nations General Assembly resolution 40/64I.

Mrs. Chalker: We voted against United Nations General Assembly resolution 40/64I because we considered that its call for the Security Council to consider the adoption of mandatory sanctions against South Africa would only make matters worse in that country.

Apartheid (United Nations General Assembly)

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the EEC has voted unanimously on apartheid in the United Nations General Assembly; and on how many occasions the United Kingdom has voted differently from the rest of the EEC.

Mrs. Chalker: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The answer in respect of the nine resolutions adopted at the 40th session of the United Nations General Assembly in 1985 is as follows:

EC member states all took the same position on two resolutions (40/64G and 40/64H).

The United Kingdom voted differently from the common position of the other EC member states on one resolution (40/64D).

The votes of the EC member states split three ways on four resolutions (40/64B, C, F and I).

Greece voted differently from the other EC member states on two resolutions (40/64A and E).

Single European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he considers that the Single European Act will not have any consequences for public expenditure in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The European Communities (Amendment) Bill brings those parts of the Single European Act which relate to the European Communities into the corpus of Community law which applies in the United Kingdom as part of our domestic law. As stated in the explanatory memorandum, the Bill has no direct financial effect in the United Kingdom. Any implications for the EC budget and for United Kingdom public expenditure will arise from future Council decisions under the EC treaty, including those parts of it amended by the Single European Act, not from the Single Act or the Bill itself.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he considers that the Single European Act will have implications for the budget of the Communities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The provisions of the Single European Act do not in themselves affect the Community budget. Future Council decisions based on the new provisions may have implications for the Community budget: in particular, the establishment of a court of first instance by unanimous decision of the Council would involve direct costs to the Community budget.

Vietnamese Refugees (Hong Kong)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy towards the welfare of Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong, in the light of the report entitled "Refugees from Vietnam in Hong Kong", dated March 1986, by Refugee Action, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Renton: We and the Hong Kong Government keep under constant review the welfare of Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong, with a view to ensuring that conditions in the refugee camps are as humane as possible. The Hong Kong Government are studying the report to which my hon. Friend refers, and will take account of its recommendations wherever practicable.

Immigration

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the immigration office at the British embassy in Islamabad ceased to accept letters from sponsors, solicitors and other representatives as applications for entry clearance; if this rule applies to other British posts; when this rule was introduced; what consultation was undertaken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: In the applicant's own interest a standard application form should be used where possible, but letters that contain all of the relevant details may still be sent to and accepted by British missions overseas, providing that the letter is accompanied by the appropriate fee paid in local currency. This applies to all entry clearance issuing posts, and is a result of the introduction of the entry certificate fee on 1 January 1985. Apart from visa nationals applying in the Republic of Ireland and those applying in the United Kingdom for re-entry visas, applications since 26 August 1985 must be lodged outside the common travel area.

Inter-Parliamentary Union (Mexico City)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received a report on the meeting held between British and Argentine Members of Parliament attending the Mexico City Inter-Parliamentary Union conference on 9 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We welcome such contacts between parliamentarians, which can usefully supplement official exchanges and help promote better relations between the United Kingdom and Argentina.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufactured Goods

7. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate the nature and size of the current deficit in the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1985 the deficit in manufactured goods amounted to £3·0 billion compared with £3·9 billion in 1984.

Land Rover

16. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the sale of the Land Rover division of British Leyland.

Mr. Channon: On 27 March the BL board asked for proposals for the Land Rover businesses to be submitted by 15 April. I can now confirm that BL received proposals yesterday from Lonrho, in respect of Land Rover and Range Rover; J. C. Bamford, in respect of Land Rover, Range Rover and possibly Freight Rover; Schroder Ventures (acting for a management and institutional consortium), in respect of Land Rover, Range Rover and Freight Rover; and Aveling Barford, in respect of Land Rover and Range Rover.

In order to clarify details of these proposals, BL intends to hold further discussions as necessary with the prospective purchasers. The proposals will then be fully considered by the BL board on their relative merits and in the light of the consequences for the BL Group as a whole. A recommendation will then be made to the Government as soon as possible as to whether one of these proposals or some other course should be pursued.

Privatisation

18. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to seek to strengthen the provisions to protect the consumer in existing and proposed privatisation legislation; and if he will make a statement.

27. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to seek to strengthen the provisions to protect the consumer in existing and proposed privatisation legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Competition is the best protection for consumers. Where the scope for this is limited, we have provided tough and transparent regulation to protect consumers. We will continue to adopt this approach as appropriate in future privatisations.

Financial Services

21. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the regulation of financial services.

39. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the regulation of financial services.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend and I are always pleased to hear the views of the Confederation of British Industry, but we have no plans for a specific meeting at present.

32. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about implementation of the decisions of the Milan summit in June 1985 with regard to insurance and other financial services.

Mr. Howard: The Milan summit considered that the creation of a free market in financial services, including insurance, should be a high priority in the programme for the completion of the common internal market. In December 1985 a directive was agreed harmonising Community rules for undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities. We hope to resume progress on the important non-life insurance services directive as soon as the judgments in the four cases currently before the European Court are available.

High Technology

22. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the size of the deficit in Britain's high technology trade in the year 1986-87.

Mr. Pattie: The United Kingdom had a positive trade balance in the high technology goods of £75 million in 1985. I am confident that United Kingdom companies are well placed to take advantage of the export cpportunities which will arise in 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to his answer of 8 April, Official Report, column 20, on assistance given in the procurement of United States re-export licences, he will give (a) the specific kind of goods which were to be exported, (b) the destinations to which they were to be exported and (c) the approximate percentage of American content in those goods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In two cases the destination involved was USSR: in one, Hong Kong: in the other two cases, a number of destinations were involved. Information about the nature of the goods and the percentage of US content is commercially confidential.

Rolls-Royce

24. Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to safeguard Rolls-Royce from asset-stripping after privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Government intend to take measures to ensure that their strategic interests in Rolls-Royce are safeguarded after privatisation. The details of these measures are being discussed with the company. I shall make a further announcement in due course.

Shipbuilding (River Wear)

25. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to met the chairman of British Shipbuilders to discuss the future of shipbuilding on the river Wear; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend met the chairman-designate of British Shipbuilders, Mr. Phillip Hares, on Thursday 10 April. They had a wide-ranging discussion of the problems facing shipbuilding throughout the United Kingdom and the world as a whole.

Regional Policy

26. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the National Economic Development Council to discuss the relationship between economic development and job creation in the regions.

34. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the National Economic Development Council to discuss the relationship between economic development and job creation in the regions.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry intends to attend the next meeting of NEDC on 12 May. At this and subsequent NEDC meetings I expect a number of employment issues to be discussed.

Exporters (Departmental Support)

28. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will increase the support given by his Department to British exporters to developing countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In addition to the substantive help already given by my Department, the ODA, and the commercial services of the FCO, the Government have introduced a new soft loan facility under the aid and trade provision. This is intended to enable a doubling by 1988-89 of the business able to be won using ATP in the developing countries.

Standard Telephone and Cables

29. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet of 12 March, Official Report, column 492, relating to trading opportunities with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, what advice his Department is giving to Standard Telephone and Cables in relation to a possible contract to supply telephone exchanges to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The advice given to specific companies is commercially confidential, but I am writing to my hon. Friend.

Footwear Manufacturing Industry

30. Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of the British footwear manufacturing industry; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the British footwear industry in December 1984 when he was Minister for Trade. The most recent meeting, however, between Ministers and industry representatives was in April last year, when matters of current concern to the industry were discussed.

Industrial Strategy

31. Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his industrial stategy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Devizes (Mr. Morrison) on 8 April 1986, at column 21.

British Companies (United States Laws)

33. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to advise British firms of the Government's policy towards attempts by the United States Administration to impose their laws extraterritorially on British firms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government's rejection of implied claims of the United States to jurisdiction in the United Kingdom has been publicly stated on many occasions. Officials in my Department advise the United Kingdom firms they deal with of this policy whenever appropriate.

Bankruptcies

35. Mrs Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bankruptcies there have been in the last 12 months.

Mr. Howard: The information asked for was published on page 56 of British Business dated 21 March 1986, which is available in the Library.

Strategic Defence Initiative

36. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had about the impact on British firms and British research of the memorandum of understanding signed by the United States and United Kingdom Governments on the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Pattie: I recently held a private seminar for United Kingdom firms which might be interested in participating in the SDI research programme. As a follow-up to the seminar, DTI would be interested to receive any comments by industry on SDI research. It would be premature, however, to predict what the impact of the research programme will be.

Industrial Development

37. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next proposes to meet the Trades Union Congress to discuss industrial development.

Mr. Channon: I and other Ministers of the Department meet the TUC at meetings of the National Economic Development Council, where such questions arise regularly.

Board of Trade

38. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the meeting of the Board of Trade at which he officiated as President.

Mr. Channon: The Board of Trade met on Friday 21 March 1986. It received and noted reports on the changing pattern of trade since its last meeting, overseas trade and exports, and company law and financial services.

EUREKA Programme

40. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the objectives of the EUREKA programme; and whether he is satisfied with its progress.

Mr. Pattie: The objective of EUREKA is to improve the competitiveness of European industry on world markets for civil applications of new technologies. EUREKA provides a framework to encourage collaboration on cross-frontier projects whose aim is to produce high technology goods, processes and services with a worldwide sales potential. EUREKA is currently under United Kingdom chairmanship and the United Kingdom will be hosting the next EUREKA ministerial conference on 30 June. Since the initiative was launched in July 1985, 26 projects have been agreed, and some 50 more are under discussion. United Kingdom firms are involved in seven of the agreed projects and in over half of the projects under discussion. In the Government's view, although EUREKA is still at a formative stage, it is progressing satisfactorily and is now developing real momentum.

Space Projects

41. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further major space projects with British participation are being considered following the success of the Giotto mission to Halley's Comet.

Mr. Pattie: The Giotto mission was indeed an outstanding success, and I was privileged to be present at Darmstadt when the signals from the encounter were received. This project formed part of the continuing United Kingdom space science programme. In the future, United Kingdom scientific groups will be involved in many international missions: for example in NASA's Hubble space telescope; in ROSAT, an X-ray mission being developed by Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States in ISO, an infra-red mission to be developed by ESA; and in UARS, the NASA upper atmosphere research satellite. Participation in ESA's solar terrestrial physics programme, in an X-ray astronomy mission and in a far infra-red astronomy mission is planned for the 1990s, as is significant use of the international space station.

In addition to the science programme the United Kingdom will continue to have a major programme in applications of space technology. We will play a leading role in ESA programmes for the development of advanced telecommunications satellites including marine and other mobile communications systems. There is a significant United Kingdom involvement in ESA's first earth remote sensing satellite, ERS-1 and we are considering participation in future remote sensing satellites for observation of the sea, ice and land regions.

We have subscribed to an ESA preparatory programme studying the European contribution to the international space station project and will shortly be considering participation in the development and exploitation phases.

I recently announced that the British National Space Centre was supporting "proof of concept" studies into HOTOL—a revoluntionary new launch vehicle which would take off and land horizontally. The use of an air-breathing engine and a single stage to orbit is intended to reduce launch costs by a factor of five.

Textile Industry

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of grant aid to the textile industry during the last 12 months.

Mr. Peter Morrison: During the financial year 1985-86 the textile industry in Great Britain was offered £7 million under regional selective assistance and £2 million under support for innovation and was paid £1 million under the new-style regional development grant. Other figures for 1985-86 are not available, but during the period April to December 1985 the industry in Great Britain were paid £3 million under the old-style regional development grant. During the latter period offers of aid to the textile industry in Northern Ireland amounted to £15 million. These figures exclude offers and payments to firms in the clothing industry.

Tin Mining Industry

43. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation within the tin mining industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The United Kingdom tin industry is facing very difficult market conditions as a result of the ending of price support through the International Tin Council.

The DTI is ready to consider assistance towards the cost of viable projects which would enable the industry to adjust to these changes. Some proposals are already being examined.

British Army of the Rhine

44. Miss Boothroyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take to ensure that British defence forces stationed in West Germany are able to purchase British-made manufactures for those establishments.

Mr. Pattie: British defence forces stationed in West Germany are already able to purchase British-made goods, and do so wherever this offers best value for money.

Postal System (London)

45. Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has about the nature and causes of industrial disputes in the London postal system during March 1986 and as to their effects on services.

Mr. Pattie: Industrial relations in the Post Office are an operational matter for the Post Office board, but I understand that there were a number of unofficial disputes within the London postal system during March. Although most were of short duration, inevitably they had an adverse effect on services for several days. The disputes had a variety of causes, but most stemmed directly or indirectly from action which the Post Office management is taking to improve efficiency.

Prosper de Mulder Ltd.

46. Sir John Wells asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the latest position about the undertakings agreed with his Department by Prosper de. Mulder Ltd. in the matter of animal waste.

Mr. Howard: I am still awaiting the signed undertakings from Prosper de Mulder Ltd. following the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on animal waste.

I have today written to the company, indicating that I will be asking the Director General of Fair Trading shortly whether in these circumstances he considers it would be appropriate to advise me under section 88(3) of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Radio

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has considered any proposals to establish a Government of military cellnet type radio system in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Butcher: No.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement concerning the future use of the 430-440 MHz radio band; and if he will (a) identify the primary users of this band and (b) place in the Library any representations that his Department has made to the primary user concerning the interests of other users.

Mr. Butcher: The band 430-440 MHz is allocated on a primary basis to the fixed, mobile and radiolocation services for governmental use. An examination of the governmental use of the band is being undertaken and my Department will be consulted if there is likely to be any impact on the civil services which also operate in the band.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what review his Department is instituting into the uses of the 870-890 and 915-925 radio bands; and what use his Department intends to make of these bands in future.

Mr. Butcher: The Merriman report on the radio spectrum (Cmnd. 9000) recommended regular reviews of spectrum usage and of the allocations for defence purposes. The Government have accepted these recommendations and the future use of the bands 870-890 MHz and 915-925 MHz (which are used mainly for governmental services) will be considered in the light of the conclusions of the first stage of these reviews, covering 470 MHz—3·4 GHz.

Research and Development

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the expected expenditure on Government and civil funded research and development as a percentage of gross domestic product in the current year and in each of the next three financial years.

Mr. Butcher: There are no projections available for the non-Government private sector; the latest data are for 1983.

Estimates of Research and Development expenditure by the Government have been prepared for years up to 1987-88. The available information is given in the table.

Research and Development Expenditure by Government as a Percentage of Gross Domestic Product

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
All Government expenditure
Percentage of gross domestic product	1·32	1·28	1·21
Government expenditure on civil Research and Development
Percentage of gross domestic product	0·64	0·64	0·59

United Kingdom Companies (United Kingdom Laws)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he takes of the imposition of extra-territorial United States controls on the movement of certain goods in the United Kingdom when deciding which companies are to receive grants and other public funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: United States re-export controls are not normally a relevant factor.

Southern Water Authority

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on water procurement and supply in the Southern water authority area will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The report is published today and I have placed a full summary in the Library of the House.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission was asked to investigate the efficiency and costs and standard of service provided by the Southern water authority the Eastbourne waterworks company, the Folkestone and District water company, the Mid-Kent water company, the Mid-Sussex water company, the Portsmouth water company and the West Kent water company in supplying water. The report concludes that the overall quality of service provided by SWA and the companies is good; there is room for improvement in management and organisation and some recommendations to that end have already been or are being implemented, particularly by SWA. The SWA is on the whole effectively managed and compares satisfactorily with the general run of public sector bodies which the commission have examined.

The report indentifies 41 important conclusions and recommendations.

As is usual for such references, the commission was asked to consider whether SWA or any of the water companies is pursuing a course of conduct which operates against the public interest. The commission reports that it found no course of conduct which operates or might be expected to operate against the public interest.

SWA and the companies will be producing written responses to the commission's findings and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will report on those statements at the appropriate time.

Regional Grants

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to complete his review of the new regional grants scheme; and if he will consider representations about the assisted areas map.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 15 April 1986]: The limited review of the administrative aspects of the Government's revised regional assistance schemes will be completed by the end of this year. I am always willing to hear representations about the assisted area map, but it would require very strong arguments indeed to alter the map so soon after the last change.

THE ARTS

East Midlands

Mr. Janner asked the Minister for the Arts, what representations he has received concerning the funding of arts in the east midlands.

Mr. Luce: I have had very few representations. The Arts Council has now announced its basic allocation to East Midlands Arts.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Minister for the Arts how many arts organisations in the Greater London council and metropolitan county areas have been affected by the Arts Council decision to block its own replacement funding until agreement has been reached with the successor district or borough councils concerned.

Mr. Richard Luce: The Arts Council has sought in every case to negotiate settlements to which the successor authorities will also make a contribution. It has refrained from notifying client bodies of the grants it proposes to make until these negotiations have been completed. Overall agreement has been reached in Greater Manchester, Tyne and Wear, South Yorkshire, West Yorkshire, and in many London boroughs, and further agreements are expected to be reached shortly. It is hoped that all individual grants will be announced within the next four weeks.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Business Expansion Scheme

47. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning his recent changes to the business expansion scheme.

Mr. Moore: The proposed changes have been widely welcomed.

Taxation

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr, 27 March, Official Report, columns 607-10, he will publish a table for each taxpayer group shown there, showing at what multiple of average earnings the percentage of tax plus national insurance is the same for 1986-87 as it was in 1978-79 stating the figure used for average earnings in 1986-87; and how many taxpayers in each group fall above and below this figure.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Budget Statement (Tax Changes)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to seek to ensure that tax changes announced in future Budget statements will take effect from a minute past midnight on the day of his statement.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received seeking removal of any element of retrospection in the proposals announced in his Budget statement relating to the inheritance tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 14 April, at column 313, to my hon. Friend the Member for Windsor and Maidenhead (Dr. Glyn).

Eastern Bloc Fish Processing Ships

Mr. Randall asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he had with the United Kingdom fishing industry before deciding to impose Customs and Excise duty on supplies to Eastern bloc fish processing ships; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Tax Relief

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for the coming year the revenue cost of granting tax relief on mortgage interest payments.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986, c. 223]: The latest estimate of the revenue cost for 1986-87 is £4¼ billion.

DEFENCE

Missile Identification

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if NATO has an effective system for distinguishing its own missiles from others; what information he has about the ability of the Warsaw pact to make such a distinction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: This would depend on the type of missile involved and the operational circumstances.

Combined Cadet Corps

Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual cost of the Combined Cadet Corps; and how many school pupils are currently members of the corps.

Mr. Lee: On 1 April 1985, the last date for which we have precise figures, there were 42,878 cadet members of the Combined Cadet Force. The current annual cost of the CCF is some £3·7 million.

Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to withdraw financial support from the Combined Cadet Corps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No such decision has been taken.

CIVIL SERVICE

Secondment

Mr. Hind asked the Minister for the Civil Service whether arrangements have yet been made for future appointments on secondment to the Home Civil Service and Diplomatic Service to be made in compliance with the Civil Service Order in Council 1982.

Mr. Luce: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 18 March 1985 that measures were being taken to provide that future secondments to appointments in the Home Civil Service and Diplomatic Service were made in compliance with the Civil Service Order in Council 1982 and any regulations made under that order. Since that date, such secondments have been subject to the approval of the Civil Service Commissioners, acting under the discretion conferred by article 1(2)(g) of the Order in Council, pending the issue of new regulations.

New regulations covering secondments have now been made by the Civil Service Commissioners with the approval of the Minister for the Civil Service and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. These regulations are effective from 1 May 1986. They are designed to provide flexibility in maintaining the programme of inward secondments, to which the Government attach importance because of the benefits it brings to the Departments and individuals concerned, consistent with the Civil Service Commissioners' responsibilities under the 1982 Order in Council. Under the new arrangements, the qualifications of a person being proposed for a secondment which is subject to the new general regulations will need to be approved by the commissioners and no such appointment can be made unless the commissioners have issued their certificate of qualification. The revised general regulations provide the commissioners with a discretionary power to waive the normal requirement of open competition in appropriate cases.

A copy of the revised general regulations has been placed in the Library.

WALES

Bridge Construction (Loughor)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department is contributing any financial support to the building of a new bridge at Loughor.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We are funding 50 per cent. of the estimated cost of land and works through transport supplementary grant.

Business Improvement Services Scheme

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the levels of unemployment in Wales in those areas currently covered by the business improvement services scheme.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Figures are not available for the precise areas covered by the business improvement scheme, but figures for the nearest equivalent areas are as follows:

Unemployment at 6 February 1986

	Number	Per cent/Rate
Clwyd	25,549	19·1
Gwent	30,602	18·0
South Glamorgan	27,066	14·4
Bridgend TTWA	9,855	18·3
Neath & Port Talbot TTWA	8,527	16·9
Llanelli TTWA	6,139	19·0
Swansea TTWA	18,429	16·5

Source: Department of Employment.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the areas presently covered by the business improvement services scheme, its rate of success and the total cost to the European regional development fund and his Department; what evaluation of the scheme he intends to make and by when; what criteria he will use in considering an extension of the scheme in geographical area and duration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The areas covered by the business improvement services scheme are the counties of Clwyd, South Glamorgan, West Glamorgan (including those parts of the travel-to-work area of Port Talbot which are situated in the county of Mid Glamorgan), Gwent and the travel-to-work area of Llanelli in the county of Dyfed.

Up to 31 March 1986 1,176 applications have been received and 750 offers of grants totalling £3·5 million had been made.

The BIS scheme was launched in November 1984 and applications will be accepted up until 31 December 1988. £7·5 million has been allocated of which £5·6 million is from the European regional development fund.

Sufficient projects have now been completed to allow an assessment of the scheme and its benefits. The assessment will continue until the scheme ends. Conclusions reached in the course of the assessment will be used to assist any consideration given to extending the scheme or parts of it.

Welsh Office

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were working in the Welsh Office in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were working in the different occupational categories in the Welsh Office in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of permanent staff working in the Department in 1975 and each subsequent year and their occupational categories are as follows:

Year	Senior Open Structure	Administration and Clerical	Professional	Support	Industrial	Total
1975	10	780	262	215½	2	1,270
1976	13	931½	292½	252	2	1,491
1977	14	955	308	276	5	1,558
1978	15	920	309	275½	2	1,521½
1979	17	1,596	345½	472½	168	2,599
1980	16	1,549½	353	453	159½	2,531
1981	15	1,436	331	426	148½	2,356½
1982	15	1,384½	305½	410½	147½	2,263
1983	14	1,365	289½	400	147½	2,216
1984	13	1,341½	282	400½	135½	2,172½
1985	13	1,432	297½	399	127½	2,269
1986	14	147½	288½	388½	120½	2,283

NB: All figures relate to permanent staff in post on 1 January each year.

Education

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were working in education in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were working in the different occupational categories in education in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information for the maintained sector is given in "Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics", No. 8, 1984 (table 66) and No. 9, 1985 (table 67), copies of which are available in the Library. Directly comparable figures for the independent sector are not available.

Badgers (Bovine Tuberculosis)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his response to Professor Dunnett's report on badgers and bovine tuberculosis in so far as it relates to Wales; what is the extent in Wales of bovine tuberculosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The immediate response was to act, in concert with my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, to modify our badger control policy in England and Wales. Action against badgers is now being confined to that part of the breakdown farm where it is believed that tuberculosis was transmitted to cattle, or to the whole farm if it is not possible to be more precise. It may still be necessary to go on to neighbouring land to find setts so as to assist the identification of badger runs leading to the breakdown farm. A consequence of this change of policy should be that fewer badgers will be killed. Action on other detailed recommendations in Professor Dunnett's report is being deferred pending discussion with the consultative panel on badgers and bovine tuberculosis.

In Wales in 1985 infection was confirmed in nine out of 6,822 herds tested. All but one of the infected herds were in south-west Dyfed.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for the proportion of those who have taken part in YTS schemes in Wales who have subsequently found full-time employment; and what proportion subsequently were unemployed in each of the years since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information is not available in the form requested. The Manpower Services Commission has conducted regular follow-up surveys of those leaving YTS schemes since 1984. Postal questionnaires are sent to young people some three months after they leave their scheme. Information covering leavers in Wales between June 1984 and March 1985 is as follows, alongside the latest available information (covering leavers in Wales between April and October 1985).

Young people leaving YTS schemes in Wales between:

	June 1984-March 1985* Per cent.	April-October 1985 Per cent.
In full-time work with same employer	19	24
In full-time work with different employer	26	21
In part-time work	†	4
On full-time course at college/ training centre	3	3
On another YTS scheme	6	6
Doing something else	4	8
Unemployed	42	34
Number of respondents	2,766	10,138

* based on 15 per cent. sample.
† part-time figures not available.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the current and capital expenditure per head on housing in each of the local authorities in Wales during the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is set out in the following tables. The figures for current expenditure are based on a summary of local authorities' housing revenue accounts 1984-85. The figures for capital expenditure are based on gross capital expenditure by local authorities in 1984-85. Expenditure by housing associations in each of the local authority districts is not available.

Wales Tourist Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of staff employed by the Wales Tourist Board in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The numbers as at 31 March of each year were:

	Number
1979	92
1985	*107

* Includes part-time and temporary staff and nine board employees on secondment to CADW: Welsh Historic Monuments.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Philippines

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will re-assess the programme of aid to the Republic of the Philippines; if he has received any communications from the new Administration concerning the British aid programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: We are currently re-assessing sympathetically the level of our aid programme to the Philippines following the accession of the Aquino Government. The new Administration have so far sought our assistance in providing rural development and broadcasting expertise.

UNESCO

Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he proposes to allocate the £6·4 million saved in the financial year 1986-87 by the withdrawal from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Raison: I intend to allocate the following amounts to the programmes mentioned in my reply to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, South-West (Mr. Budgen) on 19 December 1985, at column 241:

	£ million
Additional allocations to the ODA Technical Cooperation Training Programmes	2·3
Joint scheme to provide scholarships in the United Kingdom for Chinese students	0·7
Additional allocation to the ODA Shared Scholarship Scheme	0·3
Key English Language Teaching programme, particularly in francophone Africa	0·6
Exploratory work on a distance learning programme among academic institutions in the Commonwealth	0·1
A training scheme for black South Africans at Post-graduate level	0·5
A contribution to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Scholarships and Awards Scheme	0·6
Participation in the Inter-Governmental Oceanographic Commission, the International Geological Correlation Programme and for contributions to the International Council for Scientific Unions	0·2
International Hydrology and Environmental Sciences through the Natural Environment Research Council	0·2
Research in arid Commonwealth Africa	0·4
Dissemination of results of research at Universities and other bodies	0·2
An increased grant to the Commonwealth Media Development Fund	0·1

The British Council will have a major role in the operation of a number of these programmes.

I also propose to allocate £0·2 million for projects in the cultural field, of which half would be spent through the aid programme on projects for the benefit of developing countries, and half would be transferred to the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for projects in the cultural heritage field which are not suitable for aid programme funding.

Estimates provision will be sought at the appropriate time.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Social Security Commissioners

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Attorney-General whether the Lord Chancellor will be conducting a review of the present mechanism for the reporting of decisions of the Social Security Commissioners; and whether he will consult organisations frequently representing claimants in cases before the commissioners on that issue.

The Attorney-General: Yes. The arrangements for reporting decisions of the Social Security Commissioners are currently under review. It is intended to consult relevant representative organisations before conclusions are reached.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Attorney-General whether he will take steps to make available to claimants and their representatives at each of the offices of the Social Security Commissioners a set of each of the following decisions of the commissioners for inspection and photocopying: (a) reported decisions, (b) starred decisions, (c) numbered decisions (old series) and (d) unreported decisions.

The Attorney-General: This is among the matters being considered in the review now in hand of the arrangements governing the availability of decisions of the Social Security Commissioners.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Attorney-General whether as part of the measures being taken to reduce the delays in matters before the social security commissioners, he will be appointing part-time or deputy commissioners.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor intends to do so.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Copyright

Mr. Denis Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultative arrangements are being set in motion with those organisations representing performing artists, sports men and women, regarding the proposed White Paper on reform of the law of copyright.

Mr. Pattie: The White Paper "Intellectual Property and Innovation", which includes proposals for the reform of copyright law, was published on 15 April (Cmnd. 9712). This White Paper takes into account responses to earlier consultative documents, including representations from performing artists, sports men and women. No further formal consultations are envisaged. The Government will, however, consider any representations made to it on the White Paper. My Department has recently agreed to meet two organisations representing performing artists and those engaged in professional sport to discuss issues of copyright and performers' protection.

Pyramid Selling

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many prosecutions have taken place under the Fair Trading Act 1973 in relation to pyramid selling up to the latest date for which figures are available;

(2) if he will review the working of the Fair Trading Act 1973 in relation to pyramid selling;

(3) if he proposes to take any further steps to curb pyramid selling and associated practices.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Aviation Fuel

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will exercise his powers under section 13 of the Competition Act 1980 to direct the Director General of Fair Trading to carry out an investigation into the current relationship between the cost of crude oil and the price of aviation fuel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend has at present no plans to do so.

Bedford Commercial Vehicles

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, following the end of the negotiations between General Motors and British Leyland, he has received any statement from General Motors as to its intentions as to the future of their Bedford commercial vehicles operation in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: General Motors has said it intends to review the alternative options for Bedford commercial vehicles and will keep my Department informed.

Departmental Official (Classified Information)

Mr. Leadbitter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken following reports to him that a civil servant in his Department has been passing classified material to a Czechoslovakian military attaché; when he was first informed of the civil servant's conduct; and if he will make a statement on security standards in his Department and the monitoring requirements at all levels handling classified material with reference to this case in particular.

Mr. Paul Channon: The official concerned has been suspended from duty while police investigations are carried out. I was first informed of allegations relating to this official late on the evening of 12 April 1986.

Security arrangements in my Department are in accordance with the standards and procedures laid down for all Government Departments. All staff are informed of the Department's security procedures including those which apply to the protection, transmission, storage and copying of classified material. The conduct of staff in these respects, as in other matters, is supervised by line management.

United States Trade Action (Chamois Leather)

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in view of the fact that the United States Government has announced its intention to include chamois leather in a list of items drawn up for retaliatory action against the European Economic Community, because of recently levied duties on American agricultural exports by Spain following that country's accession to the Community, he will outline the steps he intends to take to have such leather withdrawn from the list.

Mr. Alan Clark: Both bilaterally and jointly with our Community partners we are strongly resisting moves by the United States to take unjustified trade measures against the Community as a result of enlargement of the Community. As to chamois leather, my Department is in close touch with the British leather industry and my noble Friend Lord Lucas of Chilworth has discussed these matters with them. The industry is making formal representations to the United States Administration.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the occasions since 1979 when he and the management committee of Burnham have entered negotiations or sought to enter negotiations with teachers' representatives about a more definitive contract of employment for teachers, and how teachers' representatives reacted on each occasion.

Sir Keith Joseph: In February 1979 the local authority employers and the teacher unions set up a conditions of service working party under the auspices of the CLEA-ST committee. It reported in December 1980 that it had not succeeded in agreeing proposals for a new contract.

In March 1981 the management panel proposed in the Burnham committee a joint working party on salary structure. The teachers' panel agreed to this. The work of the joint working party lasted for some three years and in practice covered the structure of jobs as well as the structure of pay. It culminated in the proposal by the local authority employers in November 1984 of a new salary structure and an identification of the contractual duties and responsibilities of each post. This fell in December 1984 when the NUT majority on the teachers' panel walked out of the discussions. Representatives of the other teaching unions emphasised that in their view the proposals, though not acceptable, were worth discussing in detail.

In September 1985 the management panel made an offer in the Burnham committee which included a contractual definition of teachers' duties. That offer was unanimously rejected by the teachers' panel after the briefest consideration.

In January 1986 the management panel entered talks at ACAS which resulted in the signing of an agreement with five teaching unions. The agreement committed the parties to it to negotiate constructively and expeditiously on, amongst other things, a clear definition of the contractual duties and responsibilities (including defined limitations) of teachers and their employers. The NUT refused to sign the agreement and has maintained that stance. Talks are proceeding between the management panel and the signatory unions under an independent panel appointed by ACAS.

Officials of my Department are members of the management panel of the Burnham committee. I have not sought to enter separate negotiations about a contract of employment with the teaching unions whose members are not my employees.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the occasions since 1979 when he and the management committee of Burnham have entered negotiations, or sought to enter negotiations, with teachers' representatives about a more formalised system of appraisal for teachers, and how teachers' representatives reacted on each occasion.

Sir Keith Joseph: Appraisal was on the agenda of the Burnham joint working party on salary structure which met from 1981 to 1984. The work of this group, including proposals relating to appraisal, fell in December 1984 when the NUT majority on the teachers' side walked out of the discussions. The Burnham management panel's offer of 12 September 1985 included a contractual definition of teachers' duties which incorporated appraisal of performance. This offer was unanimously rejected by the teachers' panel after the briefest consideration. In January 1986 the management panel entered talks at ACAS which resulted in the signing of an agreement with five teaching unions. The agreement committed the parties to negotiate constructively and expeditiously on, amongst other things, arrangements for appraisal and training to ensure that teachers at all levels remain properly equipped for their tasks and to assist towards teachers' career development and fair selection for posts carrying leadership responsibilities. The NUT refused to sign the agreement and has maintained that stance. Talks are proceeding between the management panel and the signatory unions under an independent panel appointed by ACAS. Officials of my Department are members of the management panel of the Burnham committee. I have not sought to enter separate negotiations about a more formalised system of appraisal for teachers with the teaching unions, whose members are not my employees, but on a number of occasions I have discussed with teachers' representatives the Government's policy on appraisal.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the total cost of teachers' salaries in England and Wales, including national insurance and superannuation contributions, each year since 1975, in money terms, real terms as measured against the retail prices index and as a percentage annual change in real terms.

Sir Keith Joseph: The table shows the total cost of teachers' salaries in England, including national insurance and superannuation contributions, in each year since 1975 in money terms and in real terms as measured against the retail prices index, together with the annual percentage change in real terms.

The figures represent the cost of the salaries of teachers in primary and secondary (excluding special) schools. London weighting is included and social priority and special school allowances excluded.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he considers that teachers should have a more definitive contract of employment.

Sir Keith Joseph: I believe that, if there is to be improved performance and quality in the schools, it is vital that teachers should know what is expected of them. Teachers' employers and indeed society as a whole should know what they can reasonably expect of teachers.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he considers that teachers should be subject to a more formalised system of appraisal.

Sir Keith Joseph: The Government's view of the need for appraisal was set out in "Better Schools" in March 1985:

"The regular and formal appraisal of the performance of all teachers is necessary if local education authorities are to have the reliable, comprehensive and up-to-date information necessary for the systematic and effective provision of professional support and development and the deployment of staff to best advantage."

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the content and nature of the more definitive contract of employment for teachers which he is seeking.

Sir Keith Joseph: A statement of the Government's provisional view on the duties which should form part of teachers' contractual responsibilities was appended to my letter of 21 May 1985 to Councillor Merridale, which was published in my reply to the hon. Members for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh), for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist), for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock), for Warwickshire, North (Mr. Maude), for Langbaurgh (Mr. Holt), and for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes) on 22 May 1985, at columns 446-48. The Government have since accepted that midday supervision should not form part of teachers' duties under their main contract of employment.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the detail and implementation of the more formalised system of appraisal for teachers which he is seeking.

Sir Keith Joseph: I set out the sorts of arrangements which I have in mind for operating systematic appraisal of teachers' performance in a speech to an Industrial Society Conference on 14 April 1986. I shall send my hon. Friend a copy of that speech.

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the implications of changes in the tasks confronting teachers over the past 10 years; and what proposals he has to help teachers to cope with such changing circumstances.

Sir Keith Joseph: The White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) published in March 1985 dealt with the implications of such changes and in particularly with improving the match between teachers' qualifications and their teaching programme, through more rigorous requirements for initial teacher training including the selection of students, the academic and professional content of their courses and school experience; through more systematic provision of in-service training expressly designed to meet the needs of schools and teachers; through appraisal of the performance of all teachers so that LEAs may make systematic and effective provision for professional support and development; through associating parents and the community served by schools more closely in the work of teachers; and through making the work of local advisers more effective.

Performance (National Standard)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1979 to monitor the use of educational resources to ensure a national standard of performance.

Sir Keith Joseph: A number of initiatives have been taken since 1979 to promote a more appropriate distribution of resources within education and their more efficient and effective use; among the more significant of these are:

analysis of statistics regularly assembled for monitoring purposes and their presentation in statistical bulletins in a manner relevant to the evaluation of standards and spending;

The education support grant programme which is intended to raise national standards of performance through a number of discrete activities, details of which are given in DES circulars 6/94 and 5/85 (copies are in the Library). The monitoring arrangements vary from activity to activity according to what is appropriate but in all cases the Department is keeping in touch either through regular reports or through regional agents. Her Majesty's Inspectorate is also looking at ESG-supported work in the course of its normal inspection programmes; the decision to publish the reports of Her Majesty's inspectors. These reports, in particular the three which have been published on the effects of local authorities' expenditure policies on education provision, offer important messages to the education service as a whole about the interplay of various factors which together contribute to the quality of education in the schools and colleges. In its report last year on the effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England in 1984, HMI made it clear that the most crucial factor influencing effective learning was the quality of teaching, followed, in order of importance, by the identification of pupils' and students' needs, the level of resources available and their effective management and deployment.

although the Department's assessment of performance unit does not monitor the use of education resources, it has conducted surveys which provide a national picture of pupil performance in specific areas of the curriculum;

further information on the use of performance indicators in education is given in the relevant chapter of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986/87 to 1988/89" (Cmnd. 9702)

School Buildings

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on which schools in England are at present wholly unable to use their school premises due to the condition of the school buildings.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend's attention has been drawn to five such schools. I understand that work is in hand to repair or replace four of them (Gosforth, All Saints; Leeds, Cockburn High; Wakefield, Flanshaw First; and Madeley, St. Mary's) but that a decision has yet to be taken by the local education authority on the fifth school (Lancashire, Burnley Wood).

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how much has been spent on maintenance in primary schools in England and Wales each year since 1975, expressed in money terms, real terms and as an annual percentage change in real terms;

(2) how much has been spent on maintenance in primary schools in Hampshire each year since 1975, in money terms, real terms and as a real terms annual percentage change.

Plant Breeding Institute

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations he has had with representatives of the agriculture industry regarding the privatisation of part of the Plant Breeding Institute.

Mr. Walden: Officials of the Department and of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have had discussions with interested bodies, including representatives of the agricultural industry, in connection with the proposed privatisation of part of the PBI.

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he has given to the proposals of the Plant Breeding Institute that receipts from sales to companies of new plant and seed varieties by the National Seed Development Organisation be used to finance its work.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend announced on 18 February, at columns 108-9, that the Government intend to privatise the National Seed Development Organisation and part of the Plant Breeding Institute, provided this can be done on satisfactory terms. Privatisation on those lines would have the advantage of bringing together the breeding and marketing of PBI varieties within a single organisation. Also, a private sector company will be better placed to take commercial decisions about these varieties.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the teacher unions and other organisations which are working towards the introduction of general certificate of secondary education courses in schools this autumn.

Mr. Chris Patten: Preparations for the GCSE, including the national programme of teacher training, involve the collaboration of the Department, the Secondary Examinations Council, the GCSE examining groups, local education authorities, schools and teachers themselves. The teachers' associations are not directly involved. Two of the teachers' associations, the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers and the National Union of Teachers, have called on their members not to take part in the preparations for the GCSE. But I am pleased to note that the Assistant Masters and Mistresses Association and Professional Association of Teachers have not made similar recommendations to their members. My right hon. Friend and I hope that all teachers, conscious of their responsibilities, will take advantage of the unprecedented programme of preparation to plan and work for the introduction of the new examination courses.

Member's Correspondence

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill, about matters raised by four constituents and referred to his Department on 6 March and acknowledged on 7 March.

Mr. Walden: I wrote to the hon. Member on 11 April.

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to reply to the points raised by Dr. R. M. Wadsworth concerning which the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill wrote on 24 January and which his Department acknowledged on 27 January.

Mr. Walden: I wrote to the hon. Member on 14 April.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many pupils there have been in primary schools in England and Wales each year since 1975; and how many are anticipated each year until 1990, expressed also as an annual percentage change;

(2) how many pupils there have been in secondary schools in England and Wales each year since 1975; and how many are anticipated each year until 1990, expressed also as an annual percentage change;

(3) how many pupils there have been in primary schools in Hampshire each year since 1975; and how many are anticipated each year until 1990, expressed also as a percentage annual change;

(4) how many pupils there have been in secondary schools in Hampshire each year since 1975; and how many are anticipated each year until 1990; expressed also as a percentage annual change.

Mr. Dunn: The full-time equivalent numbers of pupils in maintained primary and secondary schools in Hampshire and in England for each year from 1975 to 1985, and the projected number of these pupils in England from 1986 until 1990 are as follows. Projections for individual local education authorities are not available centrally.

School Standards

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the means and methods whereby he has sought, and is seeking, to improve standards within schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: The White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) describes four linked initiatives to improve standards in schools, in which the Government are taking the lead.

—pursuing broad agreement on the objectives of the curriculum;

—introducing reformed examinations together with records of achievements;

—improving teaching quality in all its aspects;

—harnessing the energies of parents and others in a reformed system of school government.

Full details of these initiatives and the practical measures taken and planned to pursue them are given in the White Paper.

Value for Money

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the means and methods whereby he has sought, and is seeking, to achieve value for money within the education budget.

Sir Keith Joseph: The government's aims for all sectors of education include securing the best possible return for the resources available. The Government are taking every opportunity to work with those directly responsible for education spending in order to achieve this aim.

Examples of this work are: developing recognised output measures and performance indicators for individual sectors to provide measures of the returns achieved by spending; setting targets for improvements in areas covered by these measures; promoting efficiency studies in specific fields of education, such as the Jarratt report on the universities, the complementary study of good management in public sector higher education by the National Advisory Body, and the joint study with the local authority associations of efficiency in non-advanced further education; making specific grants available to support worthwhile developments in education, and monitoring the results; providing a new system of specific grants for the in-service training of teachers to focus training on priority areas; scrutinising the quality of initial teacher training courses; and scrutiny of various aspects of the Department of Education and Science's internal organisation.

The 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702) gives details of existing output and performance measures.

Parental Influence

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the means and methods whereby he has sought, and is seeking, to increase parental influence in schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government firmly believe that schools are the poorer if they fail to harness parents' natural and special interest in their children's progress. The Education Act 1980 made important advances in allowing parents a properly informed role in the school admissions process. It also introduced elected parent governors. Parental influence and involvement will be taken substantially further in the Education Bill currently before Parliament. The parent voice on school governing bodies will be strengthened while the scope for the local education authority to appoint the majority of governors is removed: at the same time, a clear framework of functions will be provided, within which the governing body can play its full part in running the school. Additionally, new arrangements for the governors to hold an annual meeting for parents will provide valuable opportunities for the parent body as a whole to become more closely involved in their children's education.

Schools (Expenditure)

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what has been the total cost of spending on primary schools in England and Wales each year since 1975, expressed in money terms, real terms and as an annual percentage change in real terms;

(2) what has been the total cost of spending on primary schools in Hampshire each year since 1975, expressed in money terms, real terms and as a percentage annual change in real terms;

(3) what has been the spending per pupil in primary schools in England and Wales each year since 1975, in money and real terms, expressed also as a real terms annual percentage change;

(4) what has been the spending per pupil in primary schools in Hampshire each year since 1975, in money and real terms, expressed also as a real terms annual percentage change.

Sunderland Polytechnic

Mr. Bagier asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representation he has received about the implications for Sunderland polytechnic of the proposals of the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education in relation to the closure of the civil engineering department, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 15 April 1986, c. 343]: I regret that the answer which I gave on 15 April was in one respect inaccurate. My right hon. Friend had in fact received two letters from hon. Members in relation to the NAB secretariat's consultative proposal that Sunderland polytechnic's department of civil engineering should close, and replies will be sent to the hon. Members as soon as possible.

Further, there is a misprint in the last sentence of the second paragraph of my answer of 15 April: "Committee" should read "Secretariat".

ENERGY

South Killingholm (CEGB Land)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, when he next meets the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board, he will raise with him the use to which the board intends to put its land at South Killingholm and the proposal for a coal-fired generating station there.

Mr. Goodlad: No. However, I understand that the Board has written to the hon. Member about this matter in reply to his letter of 24 March.

Oil Prices

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has had any recent discussions with oil companies about the extent to which the effect on costs of the recent fall in crude oil prices is being passed on to consumers of refined products and, in particular, of aviation fuel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My Department keeps in regular contact with the oil companies; I hope that oil product prices will continue to fall to reflect the falls in crude oil prices.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Industrial Injuries Scheme

Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has yet completed his consideration of the response to his consultation document on proposed changes to the industrial injuries scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Government are grateful for the many helpful suggestions made by the 43 individuals and organisations, including the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council, which commented on the consultation paper.* I am responding separately to the points raised by the council, and placing a copy of my reply to it in the Library. In the light of the responses made, we have decided to proceed as follows:

Disablement Benefit

The consultation paper proposed that disablement benefit should not be paid for disablement below 15 per cent. We continue to believe that compensation for loss of earnings is more important than compensation for loss of faculty at this level of disablement. However, in recognition of the concern expressed, particularly over injuries such as the loss of an index finger, which is assessed as 14 per cent. disablement, we have decided to lower the threshold for payment to 14 per cent. The effects of separate injuries will be aggregated and benefit paid if the total disablement from occupational causes is 14 per cent. or more. Disablement due to the progressive industrial diseases pneumoconiosis, byssinosis and diffuse mesothelioma will continue to be compensated at all levels.

Special Hardship Allowance

The allowance will be independent of disablement benefit and renamed "reduced earnings allowance". It will continue to be paid at levels of disablement below 14 per cent. It will also be payable in full for the first time to the more severely disabled whose total benefit by way of the allowance and disablement benefit cannot at present exceed the 100 per cent. rate of the latter.

Most respondents accepted that the allowance should not continue in full after retirement. They considered, however, that some payment should be made to compensate those whose additional earnings-related pension had been reduced because of their industrial disablement. We have decided that a better solution would be to fix the allowance at the rate obtaining on retirement and offset it against any additional pension paid. This will ensure that no beneficary will suffer a large drop in income on retirement, since the allowance will be withdrawn only to the extent that additional pension becomes payable. We also propose that the allowance should be offset against any additional pension payable with invalidity benefit to those who have not retired. As the invalidity addition payable with invalidity benefit is already offset against additional pension, the allowance would also be offset against the addition. For those already retired or receiving invalidity benefit, the allowance will be offset only against future increases of additional pension.

Most respondents favoured our proposals concerning the indexation of awards of the allowance. Some suggested, however, that beneficiaries should be able to have an award reviewed if they felt that, as a result, the allowance ceased accurately to reflect their earnings loss. In proceeding with the proposal, we intend to provide for such a right of review.

Industrial Death Benefit

While some respondents argued for improvements to industrial death benefit, most accepted that it was not worth retaining if it was to continue at the same very small cash differential over national insurance widows pension, which has in fact been unchanged at the present 55 pence under successive governments since 1967. We therefore propose to align provision for industrial widows with that in the main scheme. Existing industrial widows will not experience any cash loss. In addition, the law will be changed so that future industrial widows will not have to satisfy the contribution conditions for national insurance widows' benefits. This will ensure that they will be able to receive the new tax-free lump sum of £1,000 which we propose to pay to national insurance widows, as well at the same weekly benefits for older widows and widows with dependent children as are proposed in the current Social Security Bill.

Constant Attendance Allowance

The consultation paper proposed that CAA should be discontinued, leaving the industrially disabled in need of care and attention to rely on attendance allowance. Many respondents did not favour this change, because CAA can be paid at higher rates than AA. We continue to believe that the present dual provision is unsatisfactory, but have decided to defer final decisions so that further consideration can be given to the most suitable means of replacing CAA.

Accidents Abroad

All respondents welcomed the proposed extension of the scheme to cover accidents outside the European Community and those countries with whom there are reciprocal agreements in force. We will therefore extend the scheme to cover any employment abroad while the employer has to pay contributions for the employee concerned and voluntary service workers overseas who continue to pay United Kingdom contributions.

Other Proposals

The replacement of unemployability supplement by invalidity benefit was universally favoured. The majority of respondents agreed that hospital treatment allowance should be abolished. We shall proceed with both changes.

Legislation

We propose to introduce the legislation necessary to implement these changes as announced on 19 December in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden), at column 310, by tabling new clauses to the current Social Security Bill.

* "Industrial Injuries Scheme: A Consultation Paper". Issued by DHSS—December 1985.

Maternity Allowance

Mr. Carttiss asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to bring forward firm proposals following his consultation paper on statutory maternity allowance, published in December 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The consultation paper set out detailed proposals for a statutory maternity allowance to be paid by employers instead of DHSS, on the lines indicated in chapter 5 of "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9691). 90 responses were received and we are very grateful for the many helpful comments made.

Separate from the present maternity allowance scheme administered by DHSS, employers are currently responsible for maternity pay under the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978. A major concern among those commenting was that our proposals would mean that employers would have to operate a second scheme of cash provision for maternity. In the light of this concern we have modified our proposals with the aim of integrating the two schemes as far as possible. This will not only minimise the work for employers, but will represent a more coherent structure of cash support for maternity.

The new provision, to be known as statutory maternity pay (SMP), will therefore replace both the existing maternity pay scheme administered by the Department of Employment and the maternity allowance scheme administered by DHSS. We propose a two-tier provision — an earnings-related payment equivalent to 90 per cent. of earnings for six weeks, followed by a flat-rate payment for a further 12 weeks. To qualify for the earnings-related element a woman must have worked for the same employer for at least two years. This is the current requirement under the maternity pay scheme. To qualify for the flat-rate element a woman must have worked for the same employer for at least six months. A woman who has worked for the same employer for between six months and two years will qualify for only the flat-rate element, but for 18 weeks. Women who have decided not to pay full-rate national insurance contributions ("opted-out married women") will be eligible for SMP, as they are for maternity pay and statutory sick pay.

We envisage that the flat-rate element would be aligned with that rate of statutory sick pay which is at present £31·60 a week. Like statutory sick pay and the present maternity pay, both the earnings-related and the flat-rate elements will count as taxable income. They will also be taken into account in determining national insurance liability under the normal rules.

The consultation paper proposed that, in order to qualify, the woman's average earnings should be at or above the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions (£38·00 a week in current terms) for 26 weeks. There were strong representations that such a long period would cause difficulties for employers, particularly those with computer payrolls. We therefore propose that the period should be reduced to eight weeks.

We propose that the pont at which the earnings and employment tests are applied should be fixed at the 14th week before the baby is due. This is the earliest point at which a certificate of expected confinement can be issued.

The consultation paper proposed that a woman should be able to choose, to some extent, the period over which she was absent from work. There was a wide welcome for this. We propose that there should be a "core" period of 13 weeks, starting six weeks before the week that the baby is due. A woman will be able to choose whether she takes the other five weeks before or after this core period, or some before and some after. A woman who works during any part of the core period will lose the flat-rate element correspondingly, since the aim is to ensure that, in the interests of her own and her baby's health, she should refrain from work for a reasonable period on either side of the date of the birth.

As already announced, we propose that a pregnant widow should be able to get SMP without loss of her widow's benefit.

We propose that, as with statutory sick pay, employers should recover their payments of SMP by deducting the appropriate amounts from their remittances of national insurance contributions and tax to the Inland Revenue. The need to make a special claim to the Department of Employment, as is currently required for maternity pay, will no longer apply.

The maternity pay fund will be merged with the national insurance fund, and the DHSS will be responsible for SMP. National insurance inspectors will include checks on SMP in their visits to employers.

If a woman does not qualify for SMP, she will qualify for a maternity allowance paid by DHSS if she has worked as an employed or self-employed person, and paid full-rate contributions, for at least 26 weeks out of the 52 weeks ending 14 weeks before the baby is due. The rate of this maternity allowance will be, as at present, the same as that of sickness benefit—£29·15 a week in current terms. It will run for 18 weeks—a core period of 13 weeks, and a choice about the other five, as proposed for SMP.

Clauses to give effect to these proposals will shortly be tabled with a view to consideration by the Standing Committee on the current Social Security Bill. We propose that, subject to the passage of the Bill, the date for the introduction of SMP should be 6 April 1987.

Pregnancy Testing

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to communicate with the Canterbury and Thanet health authority about its decision to stop all routine pregnancy testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No. I understand that the district health authority has recently revised its policy on pregnancy testing and that the new arrangements will be monitored for a period of six months with the help of the local community health council and family practitioner committee. At the end of this period the policy will be reviewed. In the meantime the health authority will continue to make local facilities freely available for pregnancy testing whenever general practitioners consider it necessary.

Child Benefit

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will seek to make child benefit payable for children who continue to be educated at home after reaching the age of 16 years, having been educated at home before reaching that age.

Mr. Newton: Yes. An amendment to the Child Benefit Act is required and I have tabled an amendment to the Social Security Bill currently before the House.

Pharmaceutical Products

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he makes of the effect of the licence of right provisions on the availability of lower priced generic drugs to the National Health Service; what representations he has received on the terms on which such licences are granted to manufacturers independent of the patent holder; if there are any plans to abolish the licence of right provisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The endorsement of pharmaceutical patents, "licence of right", has in some cases enabled other suppliers to enter the market and compete with the patent holder at a lower price level. Loss of sales revenue to the patent holder encourages him to seek increases in prices elsewhere in his product range, inter alia to maintain his research capability.

Policy on patents is for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. I am aware that individual generic and research based pharmaceutical companies and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry have made representations to the Government on the terms for the settlement of licences of right.

The ABPI has also produced evidence to show that since the introduction of the Patents Act 1977, which extended the term of existing patents by four years subject to licences of right, there has been a significant lengthening of the period between the grant of a patent and a product licence for pharmaceuticals for human treatment. As announced by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 14 April, the Government intend to introduce legislation to provide that such pharmaceuticals should be exempt from the licence of right provisions contained in schedule 1, paragraph 4(2)(c) of the Patents Act 1977.

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the next pharmaceutical price regulation scheme will come into effect; and if he will make a statement outlining the changes it contains in profitability and promotion targets for the pharmaceutical industry from the present scheme.

Mr. Hayhoe: Renegotiation of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme has not been completed. I am not therefore able to predict what changes might be made.

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the percentage of turnover used by the pharmaceutical industry as a whole on research and development.

Mr. Hayhoe: Annual financial returns submitted under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme for 1983 (the latest year for which full details are available) show that the percentage of turnover, on prescription medicines for the National Health Service and for export, spent on research and development was 15 per cent.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce legislation to regulate the terms on which licences of right for pharmaceutical products are granted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to introduce legislation to regulate the terms on which licences of right for pharmaceutical patents are granted. When parties to such licences cannot agree, the matter can be referred to the Comptroller-General of the Patent Office who will settle terms having regard to the particular circumstances. This process is a judicial, not an administrative, one and as such is subject to appeal to the High Court.

National Health Service (Pay)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the management side of the Council for Health Staff has not yet been authorised to make a pay offer for National Health Service administrative and clerical staff for 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins) on 11 April, at column 217. I understand that a meeting of the council's joint negotiating committee is to take place on 30 April.

Dental Services

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to ensure that dentists entering the United Kingdom are properly qualified.

Mr. Hayhoe: Before practising in the United Kingdom a dentist entering this country is required to satisfy the General Dental Council that he is properly qualified and his name entered in the Dentists Register. Dentists practising in a member state of the European Economic Community may provide dental services while visiting the United Kingdom without registration for a fixed period provided they are entered on the list of visiting EC practitioners maintained by the council. Family practitioner committees are required to check the identity and registration or listing of any applicant for inclusion in their lists of dentists providing general dental services, including applicants from abroad.

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are taken by family practitioner committees to ensure that all dental practices in their areas come up to appropriate standards.

Mr. Hayhoe: A dentist is required by the terms of his contract with a family practitioner committee to employ a proper degree of skill and attention, to provide proper and sufficient accommodation for his surgery and waiting rooms and to supply his surgery with suitable equipment and instruments. Where a FPC believes that a dentist may be in breach of those terms of service, or it has received a complaint, it will refer the matter to its dental service committee for investigation. To assist it the FPC may call upon my Department's dental reference service, whose officers are empowered to examine patients, to inspect surgeries and waiting rooms and to provide independent and professional advice. If such an investigation indicates that the dentist has failed to comply with his terms of service the FPC may recommend the issue of a warning, the withholding of an amount from his remuneration, or that the dentist should submit estimates for treatment to the Dental Estimates Board for its prior approval. In addition, the committee may make representations to the National Health Service tribunal where it considers that the dentist should be removed from the dental list.

Schoolchildren (Dietary Survey)

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he plans to publish the findings of the dietary survey of schoolchildren carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Mr. Whitney: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 10 April at column 182.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he proposes to ensure more consultation before implementation of any changes in the provision of ambulance services.

Mr. Whitney: No. The responsibility for the organisation of ambulance services rests with the individual health authorities concerned and it is for them to arrange appropriate consultations when changes are contemplated.

Mental Patients (Supervision)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the proposal by Lincolnshire county council to provide only home help supervision for certain categories of mentally ill patients discharged from local mental hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We are not aware of such a proposal. However, decisions about the targeting and management of personal social services are the responsibility of the local authority concerned.

AIDS

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how much of the recently announced Government spending on acquired immune deficiency syndrome education is to be spent in the dental field;

(2) what courses his Department has organised in order that dentists may obtain information as to what risks are present and what combative and preventative measures can be taken in the face of the potential risks from blood-borne infections, including acquired immune deficiency syndrome and hepatitis; and whether any Government funding is available for such courses;

(3) whether any extra funds have been allocated to the general dental services in order that dentists can eliminate the potential risk from blood-borne infections, including acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: There is very little risk to dentists, their staff or patients of cross-infection from the AIDS or hepatitis viruses provided dentists observe a few simple precautions. Guidance on avoidance of cross-infection in respect of hepatitis was issued by my Department in 1979, and the British Dental Association has recently published guidance to dentists on precautions in respect of AIDS. My Department plans to issue guidance to all dentists in the near future concerning AIDS and dentistry.

My Department allocates funds for the post-graduate training of general dental practitioners under section 63 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968. The expenditure of these funds is arranged by the conference of post-graduate dental deans of the English Universities and I understand that courses relating to AIDS are eligible for such funding. Expenses incurred by dentists, including those relating to the prevention of cross-infection, are reimbursed through the fee scale.

Government funding on education on AIDS has been primarily directed towards informing the general public about the AIDS virus and the precautions that can be taken to minimise its transmission, rather than towards any particular specialist field. A further sum has however been allocated for the training of professional staff in the counselling of patients.

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) for each of the last 10 years, what were the amounts for the target average net income for dentists, as recommended by the Doctors' and Dentists' Review Body, as implemented, and as actually achieved by dentists;

(2) what was the percentage rise in the target average net income for dentists recommended by the Review Body and as agreed to by the Government in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Hayhoe: The following table gives the information requested.

Dentists average net incomes, as recommended by Doctors' and Dentists' Review Body as implemented and as achieved 1976-77 to 1985-86

	Target average net income recommended by DDRB		Implemented target average net income		Actual average net income
	Amount	Annual percentage increase	Amount	Annual percentage increase
	£	per cent.	£	per cent.	£
1976-77	[1]—	—	[5]—	—	7,974
1977-78	[1]—	—	[5]—	—	8,897
1978-79	[2]8,829	—	8,829	—	9,442
1979-80	[3]11,128	26·04	11,128	26·04	12,065
1980-81	14,675	31·87	14,675	31·87	14,282
1981-82	[4]15,337	4·51	15,555	6·00	[9]14,930
1982-83	16,880	10·06	16,435	5·66	[10]16,243
1983-84	17,890	5·98	[6]17,556	6·82	n.a.
1984-85	19,100	6·76	[7]18,707	6·56	n.a.
1985-86	20,280	6·18	[8]20,083	7·36	n.a.

Notes:

[1] The review body did not recommend a target average net income. Under current pay restraint measures it recommended the payment of cash supplements to dentists of varying amounts.

[2] The review body also indicated its judgment of the "fully up-to-date" level of remuneration which was £10,511.

[3] The review body also indicated its judgment of the "fully up-to-date" level of remuneration which was £12,368.

[4] The review body recommended that target average net income remain at £14,675 from 1 April 1981 and be increased to £16,000 with effect from 1 October 1981 (equivalent to £15,337 for 1981-82 as a whole).

[5] The recommendations set out in note 1 were implemented.

[6] Target average net income was set at £17,445 from 1 April 1983, increased to £17,890 on 1 January 1984 (equivalent to £17,556 for 1983-84 as a whole).

[7] Target average net income was set at £18,427 from 1 April 1984, increased to £19,100 on 1 November 1984 (equivalent to £18,707 for 1984-85 as a whole).

[8] Target average net income remained at £19,100 from 1 April 1984 and increased to £20,280 on 1 June 1985 (equivalent to £20,083 for 1985-86 as a whole).

[9] Takes account of deduction of £440 in respect of overpayments in earlier years.

[10] Takes account of deduction of £197 under the balancing arrangement.

Lincolnshire and South Humberside

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he has any plans to provide additional resources to assist local authorities with the increased burden falling on local social services if St. John's hospital, serving Lincolnshire and South Humberside, is closed; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what are his proposals for the future treatment of patients from the Grimsby area who are currently being treated at St. John's hospital;

(3) what is his policy towards the future of St. John's hospital, serving Lincolnshire and South Humberside;

(4) what are the most recent statistics in relation to St. John's hospital, Humberside, for the number of patients discharged; of these what was the number of patients who subsequently committed suicide; what was the number of patients readmitted; and, of those, what was the number who had been convicted of crimes;

(5) when he expects to announce a decision on the plans of the North Lincolnshire health authority for the rundown and closure of St. John's hospital, serving Lincolnshire and South Humberside.

Mr. Whitney: I assume that the hon. Member's questions are prompted by the article about St. John's hospital which appeared in The Mirror on 27 March 1986. The district general manager subsequently wrote to the editor rebutting the allegations made. In his letter the district general manager made it clear that patients will be moved from St. John's hospital into the community only after a personal rehabilitation programme and only into accommodation which has been vetted by health and social services staff. Responsibility for implementing the Government's hospital and community health service policies lies with individual regional and district health authorities. Plans to transfer patients from St. John's hospital into the community, and their timing, are a matter for both the health and the social services authorities in north Lincolnshire.

Benefits

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the per capita expenditure on social security benefits in England in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) what was the per capita expenditure on social security benefits in Wales in the last year for which figures are available;

(3) what was the per capita expenditure on social security benefits in Scotland in the last year for which figures are available;

(4) what is the number of claimants for each benefit administered by the Department of Health and Social Security in Wales;

(5) how many people are entitled to each of the benefit payments available through the Department of Health and Social Security in Wales; and what is the level of take-up.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

School Meals

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will examine and report on the differences in the interpretation by his external advisers of the statistics in the report prepared by his Department on the nutritional content of school meals with particular respect to sugar and fats.

Mr. Whitney: No. The preliminary report on the survey reflects the advice of the Chief Medical Officer's Committee on medical aspects of food policy (COMA). The Government look to COMA for advice on matters relating to diet and health.

DEFENCE

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Ulster Defence Regiment have resigned since 15 November 1985.

Mr. Stanley: Between 15 November 1985 and 8 April 1986, 297 members of the Ulster Defence Regiment applied to be discharged from the Regiment. By way of comparison, between 15 November 1984 and 8 April 1985, 372 members of the regiment applied to be discharged.

Berlin Brigade (Equipment)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to the reply of 27 March, Official Report, columns 601-2, when he will have finished his consideration of the purchase of armoured personnel carriers for use in Berlin by the British Army.

Mr. Stanley: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the production and deployment of chemical weapons is likely to be on the agenda of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Ministers of Defence meeting on 22 May; and if he will make a statement of the view he expects to put forward on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) and my subsequent replies to supplementaries at oral questions on 15 April at columns 714-16.

Mr. Clarence Robinson (Visit)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the terms of the apology proferred to him by Mr. Casper Weinberger on the circumstances surrounding the visit of Mr. Clarence Robinson.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The misunderstanding about this visit was described as a matter of mutual regret.

PRIME MINISTER

Strategic Defence Initiative

Q49. Mr Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what representations she has had from British industry about the strategic defence initiative programme, following the meeting in Washington on 25 March.

The Prime Minister: None.

United Kingdom Companies (United States Laws)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Prime Minister what is her policy on the acquisition for the use of the Cabinet Office or her own officials, of computers and equipment supplied by companies which seek to impose extraterritorial United States controls on their United Kingdom staff or on non-Government United Kingdom customers or on United Kingdom exports; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Acquisitions of such equipment are made by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency, whose policy was set out in the answer given by the Minister of State, Treasury, in response to a question from the hon. Member on 8 April, at column 95.

Opium Poppy (Seed Production)

Mr. Corbett asked the Prime Minister whether she intends to publish the report on opium poppy production for seed in England and Wales being drawn up jointly by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Home Office.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for the Home Department and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are urgently considering how far the United Kingdom's legitimate need for poppy seeds can be met from domestic supplies, having regard to the need for a proper system of regulation and to climatic conditions. We would need to be satisfied that any such production posed no threat of diversion to the illicit drug market. We shall ensure that the results of these deliberations are made public at the earliest opportunity.

Ministerial Shareholdings (Guidelines)

Mr. Dormand asked the Prime Minister whether she has any plans to issue new guidelines to Ministers about Ministers' shareholdings; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I believe that the existing guidelines are satisfactory. They are kept under review, but I have no present plans to issue new ones.

Energy Efficiency Projects

Mrs. Roe asked the Prime Minister how much Her Majesty's Government spent during 1985-86 on energy efficiency projects in Government establishments.

The Prime Minister: Approximately £15 million has been spent on energy conservation projects in Government establishments in 1985-86, although final figures are not yet available. This figure excludes projects whose main objective is other than energy conservation, but from which some benefits in energy efficiency would, nevertheless, be expected.

Public Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister if she will list the names of those people she appointed in 1985 to public bodies.

The Prime Minister: The names are as follows:

1. Imperial War Museum
   Lady Airey of Abingdon
   Sir Brian Young

Mrs. Jenny Hughes

18. Advisory Committee on Acceptance of Appointments by Crown Servants
Lord Diamond
Sir David Orr
Admiral Sir Anthony Morton
Sir Trevor Holdsworth

A number of the names listed are in fact reappointments.

Workfare Schemes

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Prime Minister if she will give urgent consideration to initiating pilot workfare schemes similar to those operating in the United States of America in dissimilar areas of Britain with a view to creating a nationwide workfare system in due course.

The Prime Minister: We continue to consider all ways, including the American experience, in which we can help the unemployed and tackle unemployment.

Departmental Classified Material (Security Commission)

Mr. Leadbitter asked the Prime Minister if she will refer to the Security Commission the allegations that a clerical assistant at the Department of Trade and Industry has passed classified material to a Czechoslovakian military attaché; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: This matter is under investigation by the police. The question of a reference to the Security Commission will be considered when the outcome of this investigation and any subsequent proceedings is known.

Engagements

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 April.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 April.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 17 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings today, including one with His Royal Highness King Hussein of Jordan.

SCOTLAND

Monofilament Gill Nets

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will meet the Scottish and English fishermen's organisations to discuss the Inshore Fishery (Prohibition of Carriage of Monofilament Gill Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: No. There was considerable consultation on the proposal to introduce an order and before the order was made full consideration was given to the representations received. The details of the order have already been fully explained and I see no useful purpose in a meeting of the kind proposed.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the English fishing industry on the Inshore Fishing (Prohibition of Carriage of Monofilament Gill Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: I have nothing to add to what was said in my reply of 10 March on this subject.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will consult the European Economic Community Commission about alleged discrimination against (a) English and (b) Scottish vessels in the Inshore Fishing (Prohibition of Carriage of Monofilament Gill Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: Before the order was laid we consulted the Commission of the European Communities on its terms. In reply the Commission indicated that the order was compatible with Community law and in conformity with the common fisheries policy. I see no need for further consultation with the Commission.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what instructions have been given to officers of his Department about reporting to the procurator fiscal English fishing vessels carrying monofilament nets (a) landing their catches in Scottish ports, (b) putting in for repairs and (c) sheltering from storms.

Mr. John MacKay: Officers have been instructed to report to the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland headquarters details of any British fishing vessel carrying such nets which claims it had been forced to enter the six-mile limits covered by the Inshore Fishing (Scotland) Act 1984.

Such fishermen forced into Scottish inshore waters by circumstances beyond their control will not be reported for prosecution. These circumstances to which I refer include serious illness or injuries, bona fide engine malfunctions and stormy weather, but not the landing of catches at Scottish ports.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average current and capital expenditure per head on housing of the Scottish local authorities during the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Ancram: Average current expenditure on local authorities housing revenue accounts was £134·86 per head of overall population in 1984-85. Local authorities average gross capital expenditure on housing in 1984-85 was £83·72 per head.

Fish Landings

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the tonnage or worth of fish landed by English fishing vessels in Scottish ports in 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: Figures are not available for England and Wales separately, but vessels from England and Wales landed around 33,600 tonnes of fish worth nearly £8 million in Scottish ports in 1985.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures for the proportion of those who have taken part in YTS schemes in Scotland who have subsequently found full-time employment; and what proportion subsequently were unemployed in each year since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Information is not available in the form requested. The Manpower Services Commission has conducted regular follow-up surveys of those leaving YTS schemes since 1984. Postal questionnaires are sent to young people some three months after they leave their scheme. Information from the 15 per cent. sample survey in Scotland between June 1984 and March 1985 is as follows, alongside the latest available information from the new 100 per cent. survey.

	*June 1984-March 1985	April-October 1985†
Percentage of respondents who are:
in full-time work with same employer	21	27
in full-time work with different employer	29	21
in part-time work	‡—	3
on full-time course at college/training centre	2	4
on another YTS scheme	5	6
doing something else	3	6
unemployed	39	34
Number of respondents (=100 per cent.)‖	6,145	15,991

* Based on 15 per cent. sample.
† 100 per cent. survey.
‡ Part-time figures not available.
‖ Due to individual roundings computed total percentages differ from 100 per cent.

Public Bodies (Staff)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of staff employed by (a) the Highlands and Islands Development Board, (b) the Scottish Tourist Board and (c) the Forestry Commission in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is as follows:

Number of staff in post at 31 March

	1979	1985
(a) Highlands and Islands Development Board	246	273
(b) Scottish Tourist Board	125	119
(c) Forestry Commission	8,323	6,273

These totals include part-time and temporary staff.

Single Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make additional provision for payments under section 12 of the Social Work Act following the introduction of changes to social security single payments regulations.

Mr. John MacKay: Payments by local authorities under section 12 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and single payments made by the Department of Health and Social Security are subject to different criteria. Local authorities should continue to apply the criteria relating to section 12 irrespective of any changes in the level of single payments.

Sunday Trading

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in the light of Her Majesty's Government's decision not to pursue the proposed Shops Bill legislation, he will now examine the Scottish Acts concerning shops opening in order to preserve the traditional Scottish Sabbath; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: No.

Housing (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the housing revenue account capital allocation for each local authority in Scotland, for the years 1974-86 inclusive, all figures at 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1986, c. 510]: The information requested is set out, for the years from 1978-79 onwards, in the table.

Capital allocations to the Housing Revenue Account at 1985-86 outturn prices

Notes:

1. All figures are expressed in constant prices by applying the GDP deflator (base year 1985-86).
2. Local authorities did not receive annual block capital allocations for the housing revenue account until 1978-79.
3. Capital allocations to local authorities have, since 1982-83, been made on a net basis; the Secretary of State provides a net allocation in addition to which local authorities can spend the actual net capital receipts realised in the year in question. However, the figures for 1982-83 and subsequent years are given on a gross basis, that is, inclusive of net capital receipts. The figures for 1984-85 are in some cases still subject to audit. Information for 1985-86 cannot be provided on the same basis as for earlier years as figures for actual net capital receipts realised are not yet available. The figures provided for this year (*) therefore represent the gross allocations issued on 29 March 1985 together with any subsequent supplementary allocations, incorporating the original estimates of likely capital receipts for 1985-86.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in respect of each police force area in Scotland in 1985 the total number of (a) offences notified to the police, (b) offences of violence against the person, (c) burglaries, (d) thefts, (e) offences of fraud and forgery, and (f) offences of criminal damage.

Mr. MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 16 April 1986, c. 401.] The table sets out the requested figures on crimes recorded by the police, using the best available approximations in the Scottish crime classification to the categories listed in the question. It is encouraging that the number of crimes recorded fell by almost 3 per cent. in 1985, with a 10 per cent. fall in housebreaking.

Crimes Recorded by Police Force Area, Scotland 1985

Notes: The categories listed above have been derived from the categories of the Scottish crime classification as follows:
"Violence Against the Person": all non-sexual crimes of violence (group 1 of the standard classification) apart from robbery, those crimes of indecency (group 2) which contain a violent element, and certain crimes involving malicious and reckless conduct.
"Burglary": Housebreaking.
"Theft": Opening lockfast places and clandestine removal in addition to theft per se.
"Fraud and Forgery": Fraud, forgery and uttering, bankruptcy and currency offences.
"Criminal Damage": Fire-raising, vandalism and other crimes of malicious and reckless conduct not involving violence against the person.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Brixton Prison

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether prisoners in the medical wing of Brixton prison are provided with library facilities.

Mr. Mellor: Prisoners held in the medical wing at Brixton (F wing) do not have access to the prison library. The library officer does, however, visit the wing regularly to take orders for books. A small stock of books is also held on each landing.

Prisons (Electronic Equipment)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many television sets, video recorders, tape recorders, stereo, hi-fi and other electronic equipment has been supplied to prisons in England during each of the last five years for which records are available.

Mr. Mellor: Equipment of this kind is provided from a variety of sources and for a variety of purposes, and no central record is maintained of items supplied. In 1985 the following equipment was in use in prisons in England for education and recreation purposes:

263 Television sets
182 Video cassette recorders
780 Tape recorders (including cassette recorders and players)
347 Items of hi-fi and other electronic equipment (stereos, record players, radios and radio cassette recorders/players).

Illegal Gambling (Prosecutions)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions for illegal gambling have taken place in each of the following years: 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: Information collected centrally does not distinguish all offences relating solely to illegal gambling. Information on the number of offenders prosecuted for any offence against betting, gaming and lotteries legislation is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". Offence classifications 75 and 106 in tables S1.1(A) of "Supplementary Tables, volume 1" for magistrates' courts and offence classification 75 in table S2.1(A) of volume 2 for the Crown court.

For 1960, the number of indictable offences relating to betting, gaming and lotteries cannot be separately identified, and for 1965, 1970 and 1975, offence classification 75 was not applicable to proceedings at magistrates' courts. Information for 1985 is not yet available.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to establish a mechanism for public scrutiny of the uses to which precepted money is put in each Metropolitan police district.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Metropolitan police is already accountable to Parliament, through my right hon. Friend as its police authority, for its use of public funds. Money raised through the receiver's precept on the boroughs and districts is not used for separately identifiable purposes, but forms part of the general income of the Metropolitan police which is applied to the needs of the Metropolitan police district as a whole.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any spending limits are set for each Metropolitan police district in each financial year; and what provision is made for senior officers in each district to assess the degree of underspending or overspending of budget figures at stages during the financial year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commission of Police of the Metropolis tells me that each division in the Metropolitan police district is given a yearly cash allocation for police overtime payments which cannot be exceeded without prior authority from New Scotland Yard. A monthly monitoring system provides divisional chief superintendents with the information needed to control their allocations. The possibility of developing further the use of local budgets is being studied.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library detailed information concerning the accounting methods and conventions used by the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The accounting methods and conventions used by the Metropolitan police follow closely those set out in "Government Accounting", published by HMSO (1986 edition ISBN 0115600086).

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a detailed breakdown of Metropolitan police expenditure in the borough of Islington in 1985-86 and an estimated breakdown for 1986-87, according to the categories laid down in the Metropolitan police estimate reports, and including capital expenditure; if he will include a specific breakdown of items included in those sections categorised as other expenses; and if he will include detailed information for the specific items included in the following categories (a) A001 salaries and wages (police), (b) D035 communications equipment, (c) D036 radio equipment, (d) E041 purchase of transport, (e) E042 running costs of transport, (f) F053 training, (g) G066 Riot (Damages) Act 1866 expenses, and (h) H072 Special Constabulary.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that records are not kept in a form which would enable information to be provided on the basis specified in the question. The Metropolitan police estimates are constructed not on a geographical basis but according to type of expenditure force-wide. This reflects the fact that the Metropolitan police district is policed as a whole and not as 40 separate areas corresponding to local authority boundaries. Although a substantial proportion of manpower and other resources is based at divisional level, they are not used exclusively within or for the benefit of the particular division to which they are allocated. Conversely, substantial resources which are not divisionally based are used in support of the policing of divisions.

In a special exercise carried out recently by the receiver for the Metropolitan police district at the request of the London boroughs and districts, based on the commuted rate cost of the manpower actually allocated to divisions within each borough and district, augmented by a percentage addition for support costs, it was estimated that the salary and support costs of officers based in the borough of Islington totalled some £20 million.

Alcohol Education Programmes

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the alcohol education programmes in the United Kingdom which have been approved as being appropriate for referral of defendants under a special condition probation order as permitted by the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973 as amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1982.

Mr. Mellor: Information about the number and location of alcohol education programmes in England and Wales is not held centrally. Such programmes are usually set up on local initiative, by interested groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous or, in some instances, by individual probation officers. Court duty probation officers will know of the availability of alcohol education programmes in their area and can, in appropriate cases, recommend the inclusion in a probation order of a requirement to attend such a programme.

Prison Officers (Territorial Army)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider his decision not to allow prison officers to join the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve.

Mr. Mellor: It is essential that if a man joins the Territorial Army he should not only be able to fulfil his training commitments but also be available for call-out in time of crisis.

Prison officers are expected to remain at their posts during a national emergency and would therefore not be available for call-up with the rest of the TA. In these circumstances, it would not be sensible for prison officers to join the TA and waste resources on training. For this reason we are unable to vary the decision not to allow them to join the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve.

Woolwich Prison

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the new prison at Woolwich to be available for service; what is the current occupancy of prisons in London over authorised accommodation levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The new prison at Woolwich is expected to become operational in the latter part of 1991. The current occupancy and certified normal accommodation figures for prison establishments in London as at 4 April 1986 are as follows:

	Population	Certified normal accommodation
HMRC Ashford	544	376
HMP Brixton	991	695
HMYCC Feltham	220	256
HMP Holloway	346	247
HMRC Latchmere House	175	127
HMP Pentonville	966	656
HMP Wandsworth	1,513	1,265
HMP Wormwood Scrubs	1,399	1,011

Thames Valley Police (Special Duties)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department allocates any extra funding to the Thames Valley police in respect of those officers assigned to royal family, diplomatic and VIP protection duties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Shaw: No. All expenditure by a police authority for police purposes is eligible for police grant from the Home Office at the rate in 1986-87 of 51 per cent.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Thames Valley as to how many officers in the Thames Valley police force are allocated at present to royal family, diplomatic and VIP protection duties.

Mr. Hurd: I understand from the chief constable that 40 officers are permanently engaged on protection duties, 20 on uniformed fixed post duties and the remainder comprising a mobile section and supervisory officers.

Opium Poppies

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will seek to amend the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 to control the growing of opium poppies in England and Wales and the sale of seed.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend shall decide on any necessary action once he has had an opportunity to consider the report which the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is preparing jointly with the Department's officials.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his officials are involved in preparing the joint report with the Ministry of Agriculture into opium poppy production in England and Wales; and how many meetings have so far been held.

Mr. Mellor: Six of the Department's officials have been directly involved in the preparation of the report, and one meeting has taken place with Ministry of Agriculture officials.

Animal Protection Groups (Police Liaison)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables about how many constabularies in England in and Wales have appointed officers with responsibility to liaise with animal protection groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: All police forces in England and Wales have nominated officers to deal, as appropriate, with any activities of animal protection groups which may relate to police responsibilities.

Shahid Syed

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Deaprtment how many representations has he received from (a) hon. Members and (b) others concerning the deportation of Shahid Syed.

Mr. Waddington: Representations about the case of Shahid Syed have been received from 41 hon. Members. Representations, including three petitions, have also been received from 16 other individuals or organisations.

Public Bodies (Staff)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of staff employed by (a) the Commission for Racial Equality, (b) the Equal Opportunities Commission and (c) the Gaming Board Inspectorate in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Hurd: The information is as follows:

	1979	1985
Commission for Racial Equality	229	200
Equal Opportunities Commission	148	161
Gaming Board Inspectorate	38	36

Immigrant Appeal Hearings

Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make funds available for the purpose of providing travel expenses for persons involved in immigrant appeal hearings.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Marita Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Glenarthur, will be replying to the letter he received from the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North of 27 January, whose acknowledgement of the receipt of the letter was received on 25 February, on the subject of Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer, currently on remand in Her Majesty's prison, Brixton.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend has written to the hon. Member today.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the longest period of imprisonment to which a fine defaulter was sentenced in 1984.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 544]: According to the records held centrally, the longest period to be served by a prisoner initially received into a prison department establishment in England and Wales in 1984 on committal in default of payment of a fine was 345 days.

Young Persons (Custody)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 15 and 16-year-old males who were sentenced to periods of custody by the courts in England and Wales served part of their sentence in an adult prison establishment during (a) 1984, (b) 1985 and (c) the first 10 weeks of 1986.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 548]: Details of every establishment in which such a prisoner has served a sentence are not recorded centrally. The available information relates to the initial reception under sentence and is given in the following table. Juveniles initially received into adult prisons usually spend a very short period in an adult prison before being transferred to another establishment. It is normal for young males to be kept apart from adult males.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many males aged 15 and 16 years who were the subject of unruly certificates were remanded into adult prison establishments by the courts in England and Wales during (a) 1984, (b) 1985 and (c) the first 10 weeks of 1986.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 548]: The information available relates to initial receptions on remand and is given in the table. A boy aged 15 or 16 who is awaiting trial or is convicted but unsentenced may be remanded in custody in a prison or remand centre in England and Wales only if a court certifies that he is so unruly that he cannot safely be committed to the care of a local authority, unless he has been committed under section 37 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 with a view to a youth custody sentence. Committals under section 37 of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 are not separately identified in the records held centrally. It is normal for young males to be kept apart from adult males and they usually spend a very short period in an adult prison before being transferred to another establishment.

Metropolitan Police (Complaints)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been received from persons in respect of officers in the N division of the Metropolitan police for each month since June 1983; how many of the investigations have been completed; how many were found in favour of the complaint; how many have resulted in compensation: how much has been paid in compensation; and how many are still unresolved.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986, c. 10]: The information: requested is as follows:

Number of complaints cases received by month:

	1983	1984	1985	1986
January	—	19	4	12
February	—	12	7	2
March	—	16	8	1

August	18	14	4	—
September	17	7	4	—
October	11	9	1	—
November	19	16	2	—
December	11	10	0	—

In 305 of the total of 319 cases, investigation has been completed; 14 cases are still outstanding.

In eight cases one or more of the complaints made was substantiated.

In seven cases civil claims were made against the commissioner. Three of these have been settled with payments totalling £242,000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pigs

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the requirements of the Council of Europe convention No. 87 on the housing of pigs in stalls or cages; and if he has any proposals to reduce the incidence or to ban the use of such stalls or cages for pigs.

Mrs. Fenner: Amongst other provisions, the Council of Europe convention No. 87 provides that where animals are continously confined they should be given the space appropriate to their physiological and ethological needs in accordance with established experience and scientific knowledge. The Government's code of recommendations for the welfare of pigs strongly recommends the use of alternatives to cages and stalls, and I have no further plans to ban or restrict their use.

Opium Poppies

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps he has taken, and on what dates, to collect exact details of the acreage of opium poppies to be grown for seed in England and Wales, the variety used and the location of fields where the crop is drilled;

(2) what steps he is proposing to take to ensure that opium poppy crops grown for seed are marketed solely for the purposes for which they are being grown;

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of contracts signed to grow opium poppy for seed in England and Wales; and what is the estimated contracted acreage;

(4) how many of his officials are involved in preparing a joint report with the Home Office into opium poppy production in England and Wales; and how many meetings have so far been held.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

EC (Intervention)

Mr. Marlow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost to the taxpayer of intervention and storage not yet reimbursed by the European Economic Community for each of the last three calendar years.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 270]: The European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund contributes one month in arrears at standard rate towards the interest costs of holding intervention stocks and the incidental costs such as transport, handling and storage, all of which are borne initially by member states.

The net cost of operations remaining with the United Kingdom in the years ending 31 December 1982 and 30 November 1983 and 1984 (provisionally) as shown in the Intervention Board's intervention buying accounts for those years, is £7·2 million, £20·8 million and £33 million respectively.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Newtownbreda Sewage Treatment Works (Contract)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply of 20 March, Official Report, columns 295-6, if the company with a registered office in Northern Ireland, which tendered successfully for the Newtownbreda sewage treatment works extension contract, is a subsidiary of a civil engineering firm in the Republic of Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The firm WAM Civil Engineering Contractors, which tendered successfully for the civil engineering contract at Newtownbreda sewage treatment works, is a partnership based in Northern Ireland whose partners reside there.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers of each rank have applied for transfer from the Royal Ulster Constabulary, or for early retirement, since November 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 10 April 1986, c. 179]: Members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary do not apply for permission to transfer to constabularies in Great Britain; rather they approach those constabularies which then approach the Royal Ulster Constabulary. In 1986 up to 6 April, Great Britain forces have made recruitment inquiries with the Royal Ulster Constabulary about 36 officers seeking a transfer — one inspector, eight sergeants, and 27 constables. Detailed statistics are not available prior to 1 January 1986 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. There were no requests for early retirement from 1 November 1985 to 6 April 1986.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Len Forsyth

Mr. David Howell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the outcome, following representations made on a recent visit to Dubai by the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) concerning the case of Mr. Len Forsyth, who is currently prevented from leaving Dubai although not charged with any offence.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Forsyth was charged on several counts in July 1985. I understand that his case is still before the court in Dubai. I hope for a satisfactory outcome before too long.

Holidaymakers (Cyprus)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being take to safeguard the well being of British holidaymakers on Cyprus in the growing tension between the United States of America and Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We do not see a need at present for any special advice or guidance to be given to British holidaymakers travelling to Cyprus. When British holidaymakers travel abroad we look to the host Government to protect their well-being.

THE ARTS

Opera (Private Sponsorship)

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister for the Arts (1) what information he has as to the percentage of the budget of (a) the English national opera, (b) the Northern opera and (c) the Royal opera raised from private sponsorship in the last year for which figures are available;

(2) what information he has as to the percentage of the budget of the Scottish national opera company raised from private sponsorship in the last year for which figures are available;

(3) what information he has as to the percentage of the budget of the Welsh national opera company raised from private sponsorship in the last year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts is currently abroad. I have been asked to reply.

The percentages of the budgets accounted for by all private giving* in 1984-85, taken from published balance sheets and excluding overseas tours, are as follows:

	Per cent.
Royal opera house	6·5
English national opera	2·6
Opera house	4.0
Scottish opera	5·7
Welsh national opera	2·6

* Separate figures for business sponsorship and private donations are not available.

British Library

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what was the number of staff employed by the British Library in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Luce: The British Library employed 2,210 staff in 1979. Since then it has absorbed a number of other organisations which together employed 239 staff. The number of British Library employees on 1 April 1985 was 2,452.

National Heritage Act 1980

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts if he has anything to add to his answer of 14 March in relation to the number of statements laid before Parliament covering the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 inclusive in compliance with section 9(6) of the National Heritage Act 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 390]: In addition to the statements listed in my answer to the hon. Member on 14 March, a statement was laid before the House on 16 May 1985. The information in my answer of 14 March has been checked and, so far as I am aware, is correct and in compliance with section 9(6) of the National Heritage Act 1980.

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts if he has anything to add to his answer to the hon. Member for Warley, East of 14 March, Official Report, columns 609-10, in relation to the number of references in written answers during the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 specifying particulars of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied in individual cases of acceptances in lieu of such taxes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 390-91]: The answer given to the hon. Member on 14 March specifying the number of written answers during the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 giving particulars of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied in individual cases of acceptances in lieu of such items has been checked, and I have nothing further to add.

ENVIRONMENT

Teviot Housing Estate, Tower Hamlets

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will lay in the Library copies of correspondence between his Department's urban housing renewal unit and Tower Hamlets borough council concerning proposals for the transfer of the Teviot housing estate to the management or ownership of a private trust.

Sir George Young: No.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what opportunities have been made available to residents of the Teviot housing estate in the London borough of Tower Hamlets to participate in the current discussions between his Department's urban housing renewal unit and Tower Hamlets borough council concerning proposals for the transfer of their homes to the management and ownership of a private trust.

Sir George Young: In 1984 there was a survey of tenants on the estate which invited their views on a variety of possibilities for improvement of the estate, one of which would have involved the establishment of a trust. A report of this exercise was published. Since then my Department's urban housing renewal unit has taken part in discussions with the borough council on developing the trust idea further. No firm proposals have yet emerged, but if they do it will be essential for residents to be fully consulted and for their support to be enlisted if any scheme is to go ahead.

Rates

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what sum is currently being demanded from the average industrial ratepayer in respect of general rates in the following city, borough and district councils: Westminster, Portsmouth, Southampton, Winchester, Mole Valley, Barnet, Waltham Forest, Medina and South Wight.

Mrs. Rumbold: The estimated figures are as follows:

*Average industrial rate bills in 1986-87

Westminster	11,220
Barnet	10,930
Waltham Forest	9,990
Mole Valley	13,730
Portsmouth	21,140
Southampton	26,770
Winchester	9,450
Medina	9,220
South Wight	4,540

* Average rate bills are derived from the average general rate poundages levied by local authorities and average industrial rateable values per hereditament. Average industrial rate bills are not comparable between authorities due to the wide variation in sizes of industrial properties.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what sum is currently being demanded in respect of general rates from the average domestic ratepayer being resident in the following city, borough or district councils: Westminster, Portsmouth, Southampton, Winchester, Mole Valley, Barnet, Waltham Forest, Medina and South Wight.

Mrs. Rumbold: The estimated figures are as follows:

*Average (unrebated) domestic rate bills in 1986-87

Westminster	733
Barnet	555
Waltham Forest	433
Mole Valley	462
Portsmouth	327
Southampton	315
Winchester	416
Medina	335
South Wight	369

* Average unrebated rate bills are derived from the average domestic rate poundages levied by local authorities and average domestic rateable values per hereditament.

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has recently met the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council to discuss the levels of radioactive discharges from nuclear plants.

Mrs. Rumbold: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment, Countryside and Local Government meets the chairman o the Nature Conservancy Council regularly to discuss matters of mutual interest. He last met the chairman on 9 April, but the levels of radioactive discharges from nuclear plants were not discussed.

Local Authority Mortgages (Defaults)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the number of home owners who have defaulted on local authority mortgage payments in the last year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The information requested is shown for English local authorities at 31 March 1985. The figures are provisional estimates.

	Number	Percentage of total
Number of mortgage loans	565,000
Number of loans 6 to 12 months in arrear	9,900	1·75
Number of loans over 12 months in arrear	5,000	0·89
Number of possessions for the period 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1985	750	0·13

Council House Sales

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will examine the case of Mr. and Mrs. Adkin of 48 Green lane, Rugeley, Staffordshire, who wish to exercise the right to buy under the Housing Act 1980 in 1982, but who have so far been unable to do so.

Sir George Young: I understand that the processing of Mr. and Mrs. Adkin's right-to-buy application has been seriously delayed because of a boundary dispute. My officials are in touch with Cannock Chase district council to see whether progress can be expedited. I shall write to my hon. Friend.

London Marathon

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had about the continued use of county hall for the London marathon after 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: We have received two letters from the race director.

Local Authorities (Employment of Members)

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what rules exist to restrict the employment of members of one local authority by a neighbouring authority; and if he intends to introduce legislation in this area.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are no statutory restrictions on members of one local authority being employees of another, although employees of a joint authority or of a joint committee of authorities may not be a member of any of the constituent councils. We have, however, asked the Widdicombe inquiry into the conduct of local government business to examine any problems of propriety which may arise from members' conflicts of interest, particularly where officers of one authority serve as members of another. The inquiry's report is expected to be submitted shortly.

Hampton Court (Fire)

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if Hampton Court was afforded sprinkler protection against fire; and if he will now review his policy of protection against fire for those parts of the national heritage in his custody.

Mr. Tracey: Sprinklers are not currently in use at Hampton Court palace. Following the events of 31 March 1986 my right hon. Friend has set up an inquiry into the discharge of the Department's responsibilities at Hampton Court palace. He will consider any recommendations which are relevant to protection against fire at other heritage buildings for which he is responsible when the report is available.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of central Government funding of Greater London council services not devolved to local authorities.

Mrs. Rumbold: There is provision for additional central Government current expenditure of some £19 million on services carried out by the GLC. It is for the Arts Council, the Sports Council and the Countryside Commission to allocate additional funds, totalling over £30 million, given to them on account of the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils.

Shire Counties (Single Tier Authorities)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to extend the principle of single tier authorities into the shire counties in England.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. My right hon. Friend is satisfied that the present two-tier structure remains appropriate in those areas.

Tobacco (Sports Sponsorship)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has met any of the chairmen or secretaries of the governing bodies of sport specifically to discuss tobacco and sports sponsorship.

Mr. Tracey: No. I sought the views of the Sports Council, as the Government's advisers on sport. In formulating its advice, the council consulted the Central Council of Physical Recreation and those governing bodies currently or recently sponsored by tobacco companies.

Tobacco Advisory Council

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the people from the Tobacco Advisory Council and his Department or other bodies who attended the Tobacco Advisory Council meeting on 19 March.

Mr. Tracey: Neither I nor any of my officials attended any meeting of the Tobacco Advisory Council on 19 March.

Acid Rain

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the examination of the possible contribution of nuclear establishments in the United Kingdom to acid deposition is complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: An assessment of the contribution of nuclear installations to acid deposition, undertaken by scientists at the environmental and medical sciences division of AERE Harwell, is now available.*

It confirms the preliminary scientific view that radioactive emissions from these installations make no contribution of any significance whatever to acid deposition. Amongst its conclusions, the report finds that:

—the nitrogen oxides discharged from an individual nuclear power station in the United Kingdom are less than the average emissions from a single petrol-engined vehicle; and —the total quantity of nitrogen oxides formed as a result of atmospheric emissions from all nuclear installations in the United Kingdom is about 20 millionths of the amounts discharged by conventional sources.

I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Library.

* "The possible impact of atmospheric radioactive discharges from UK installations on acid deposition" AERE R-12182 (March 1986).

Local Authorities (Grant-Related Expenditure)

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish details of the service components of local authorities' grant-related expenditure for 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer this question shortly.

Slum Clearance Subsidy

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to undertake a study of slum clearance subsidy.

Sir George Young: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said in her reply of 10 December 1985, at columns 574-75, to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham), the programme of efficiency scrutinies for 1985-86 included a scrutiny of slum clearance subsidy. The scrutiny began in January and is scheduled for completion shortly.

Housing Expenditure

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average current and capital expenditure per head on housing of the English local authorities during the last year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: Current expenditure by English local authorities from their housing revenue accounts in 1984-85 represented on average £109 per head of population; their gross capital expenditure on housing represented on average £67 per head of population.

Nature Conservancy Council and Development Commission

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of staff employed in (a) the Nature Conservancy Council and (b) the Development Commission in 1979 and 1985.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information is as follows:

	1979	1985
(a) Nature Conservancy council	589½	582½
(b) Development Commission	31	34

The main agency of the Development Commission is the Council for Small Industries in Rural Areas (COSIRA). COSIRA employed 305 staff in 1979 and 292½ staff in 1985.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date the first annual report and statement of accounts of the London Residuary Body will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Tracey: No date has been set.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ask the London Residuary Body to make available its minutes in the Library.

Mr. Tracey: The availability of its minutes is a matter for the London Residuary Body to decide.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy not to give consent to any proposal for the demolition of county hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Any necessary application for listed building consent to demolition would be decided on its merits by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

BBC (Sports Events)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether any Minister or officials of his Department have made any requests to the British Broadcasting Corporation to remove scheduled sports events in recent weeks.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Denis-Wild Type Houses

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when officials of his Department and the building Reasearch Station visited the Lower Grange estate, Bradford, to inspect Denis-Wild type houses; when he expects to receive reports from those officials; when he expects to designate such properties under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Officials from my Department, including the Building Research Establishment, inspected Denis-Wild houses on the Lower Grange Estate, Bradford, on 7 February this year. I have received the BRE's note of that inspection. On this evidence my right hon. Friend is not minded to designate Denis-Wild houses under part XVI of the Housing Act 1985 (formerly the Housing Defects Act 1984)

Residuary Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 11 April, Official Report, column 211, why he has not appointed any women to the residuary bodies set up following abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils.

Mrs. Rumbold: Those appointed to the residuary bodies were chosen on grounds of suitability and availability.

TRANSPORT

Vehicles (Anti-spray Devices)

Mr. Woodall asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will extend the anti-spray rules now applicable to heavy trailers to existing heavy goods motor vehicles, including tractor units used to tow trailers, and to tipper vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Existing motor vehicles and tractor units, unlike trailers, are invariably fitted with mudguards. It would not be cost effective to require operators to alter these so as to meet all the technical details of the British Standard. Anti-spray devices are difficult to fit to tipper lorries because of their tipping action and off road use. The best way forward is to allow the regulations to take effect without extending their scope at this stage.

Aviation Fuel

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the average price of aviation fuel by comparison with figures for July 1985.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The average scheduled price of aviation turbine fuel in the United Kingdom fell by 8 per cent. between July 1985 and March 1986.

The scheduled price takes no account, however, of discounts available to airlines. These can vary considerably from one airline to another and reductions in prices actually paid may differ accordingly. I have no information about prices in other countries where much of the fuel used by United Kingdom airlines is bought.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received from airlines and tour operators with regard to the current relationship between the price of aviation fuel and the cost of crude oil, and its implications for the competitiveness of the airline and tourist industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have received no recent representations.

Road Casualty Figures

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the road casualty figures for the last quarter of 1985 will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department of Transport's statistics bulletin containing these figures was released this morning. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

In 1985 as a whole, there were 5,200 deaths in road accidents, lower than any year since 1954. Traffic in the same period has increased by 450 per cent.

72,000 people were seriously injured on the roads in 1985, the second lowest figure since 1958. Slight injuries were 243,000 and 1 per cent. lower than last year.

I welcome these reductions in casualties on Britain's roads, although they do nothing to alleviate the suffering of the victims and their families. In the end it is up to each one of us to use the roads safely to protect ourselves and others.

Dumping at Sea

Mr. Nelson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Association of County Councils and the Nature Conservancy Council regarding ratification of annex V of the MARPOL convention on the dumping of garbage in the sea; and whether he proposes to bring any action as a result.

Mr. Ridley: I hope to make an announcement on annex V of the convention in the near future.

General Lighthouse Authorities

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to implement the recommendations of Messrs. Arthur Young McLellan Moore & Co's report on the general lighthouse authorities with regard to advice from non-paying users of navigational aids; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 14 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastleigh (Sir D. Price).

Gipsies

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the locations of land, owned by his Department, occupied by gipsies and the number of acres per site.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [pursuant to his reply, 8 April 1986, c. 2]: The information requested is as follows:

Location	Acreage
Highway land
A20, Swanley bypass	0·50
A614/M180, Tudworth	0·08
A49, Bayston hill, Shrewsbury	0·75
A27, Withy Patch, Lancing, West Sussex	2·20
A3, Potters lane, Send, near Ripley, Surrey	0·55
Non-highway land
Adjoining Pestilence lane, Alvechurch	1·50
A34, Wytham turn, near Botley, Oxfordshire	1·79
M25, Oakham road, Leatherhead, Surrey	0·20
Cleveland—Yarm road, Stockton-on-Tees	0·50

NATIONAL FINANCE

Unemployed Persons (South-East)

13. Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of support for the unemployed in the south-east.

Mr. MacGregor: The overall cost to the Exchequer of unemployment and supplementary benefit paid to the unemployed is estimated at £5·6 billion in 1986-87. In addition about £1·15 billion is paid in housing benefit, a benefit which can continue to be paid if the recipient finds employment. Regional figures would only be available at disproportionate cost.

Privatisation

14. Mr. Evans asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has considered bringing forward any privatisation programmes in order to increase annual receipts above the levels set out in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Moore: No.

42. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contributions he expects receipts from privatisation to make to his future policy on income tax levels.

Mr. Moore: Expected proceeds from privatisation are taken into account in judging the appropriate level of Government borrowing. It is the Government's policy to reduce the burden of personal taxation by exerting firm control over public expenditure and borrowing.

Manufacturing Industry (Taxation)

15. Mr. Fatchett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the income arising from taxes raised directly or indirectly from manufacturing industry in 1979 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Moore: Information is not available in the form requested. But income tax, corporation tax, National Insurance surcharge and employers' National Insurance contributions paid by manufacturing industry are estimated at £4½ billion in 1979-80 and £6 billion in 1985-86—a reduction of 15 per cent. in real terms.

Interest Rates

16. Mr. Soames asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Base rates have been reduced by 1½ per cent. since the Budget.

51. Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the real interest rate both short and long-term in the United Kingdom; and what information he has on such rates in West Germany and Japan.

Mr. Ian Stewart: There are many problems in measuring either pre-or post-tax real interest rates, though in the United Kingdom the yields on index linked gilts give a direct indication of long term pre-tax real interest rates. The yield on the 1996 index linked gilts is currently 4 per cent., and that on the 2,020 indexed gilt is 3½ per cent. There are no comparable instruments in West Germany or Japan.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

17. Mr. Livsey asked Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in the public sector borrowing requirement during the month of March.

Mr. MacGregor: The March PSBR is provisionally estimated to be £3 billion.

36. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement for 1985-86.

Mr. MacGregor: It is £5·9 billion.

Petrol (Duty)

18. Mr. Litherland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account he takes of the effects of consequential changes in petrol prices when putting forward proposals to alter the duty on petrol.

Mr. Moore: The possible effects on prices are among the many factors taken into account. This year my right hon. Friend judged that the oil companies should be able to absorb the modest increase proposed.

Gross Domestic Product

19. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on comparable figures of gross domestic product per head in the United Kingdom and other industrialised countries.

Mr. Moore: Following is a table showing comparable figures for other OECD countries.

GDP per head in OECD countries, 1984

	*United States dollars
Australia	11,180
Austria	8,540
Belgium	7,700
Canada	13,290
Denmark	10,690
Finland	10,490
France	8,910
Germany	10,030
Greece	3,380
Iceland	10,720
Ireland	4,990
Italy	6,110
Japan	10,460
Luxembourg	9,240
Netherlands	8,530
New Zealand	7,160
Norway	13,220
Portugal	1,910
Spain	4,190
Sweden	11,370
Switzerland	14,000
Turkey	1,020
United Kingdom	7,500
United States	15,360

Commercial Contracts

20. Mr. Dubs asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to ensure that Government commercial contracts will be given only to firms which can demonstrate that they have effective equal opportunities policies.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The basis for the award of Government contracts is value for the taxpayers' money. All firms, whether tendering for Government contracts or not, must obey the existing laws relating to equal opportunities.

Freeports

21. Mr. Colvin asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about reviewing the customs and tax regulations covering freeports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: A number of representations have been received mainly from local authorities with an interest in either the Southampton free trade zone or Freeport Scotland about the freeport regulations. The freeport experiment is being monitored by appointed consultants and the regulations are being kept under review in the light of growing operational experience.

Alcohol (Excise Duty)

22. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the level of excise duties levied on alcoholic drinks.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Budget decision not to increase these duties has been widely welcomed.

Inflation

23. Mr. Fisher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what factors he attributes the difference between United Kingdom inflation rates and those in the United States of America, France, Japan and Germany.

Mr. MacGregor: A range of factors.

28. Mr. Spencer asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of inflation.

32. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of inflation.

Mr. MacGregor: Over the 12 months to February 1986, the retail prices index increased by 5·1 per cent.

Personal Equity Plan

24. Mr. Beith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates will be the total amount of tax relief available through the personal equity plan, in the first two years, to a new investor liable to the standard rate of income tax, who holds no other shares.

Mr. Moore: This will depend in particular, on how much is invested, what shares are acquired, what dividends are paid, and whether or not such dividends are reinvested.

35. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people he expects to take out personal equity plans in their first year of operation.

Mr. Moore: I am confident that a substantial number of people will wish to take advantage of this important new incentive.

Value Added Tax

25. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress towards raising the value-added tax threshold within the Community.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Negotiations are continuing with the Commission with a view to allowing member states greater flexibility in determining their threshold.

Charities

26. Mr. Ashley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in response to the concessions to charities announced in the Budget.

Mr. Moore: The measures announced in the Budget have been widely welcomed.

European Monetary System

27. Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many European Community member states currently take part in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Eight.

Public Expenditure

29. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the outturn of public expenditure in the financial year 1985-86.

33. Mr. Portillo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of public expenditure outturn in 1985-86.

40. Dr. Twinn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outturn of public expenditure against forecasts in 1985-86.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government's latest estimate of the outturn of the public expenditure planning total in 1985-86 is £133·9 billion, published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report". This is within the planning total of £134·2 billion set at the time of the 1985 Budget.

37. Mr. Corbyn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to raise the 1987-88 fiscal adjustment of £2 billion outlined in table 2.5 of the 1986-87 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" for public sector capital expenditure and maintenance.

Mr. MacGregor: No.

43. Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he makes of the relative impact on the least well-off sections of the United Kingdom community of a £1 billion increase in expenditure on (a) measures to reduce unemployment, (b) child benefit, (c) the introduction of a reduced rate band, (d) personal allowances and (e) a cut in the standard rate of tax by 1 penny to 29 pence.

Mr. MacGregor: The relative impact of the various measures on the least well off sections of the United Kingdom community depends on personal circumstances, for instance, whether they are pensioners, are unemployed or are families with children. Various analyses of the likely impact are undertaken from time to time.

World Debt

30. Mr. Duffy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he is satisfied with current progress on the easing of Third world debt in the light of the Baker-Darman plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Baker plan has been endorsed by all parties in the debt arena as an important development in the strategy to manage the international debt problem. Last week's IMF/IBRD interim/development committee meetings in Washington reaffirmed their support for the Baker plan and welcomed the progress in implementing these proposals and in particular the design of growth oriented adjustment programmes in a number of countries. I have arranged to have copies of the communiqués of these two meetings deposited in the Library.

Prices and Incomes Policy

31. Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received supporting reintroduction of a statutory prices and incomes policy.

Mr. MacGregor: None.

Public Sector Borrowing

34. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how public sector borrowing as a proportion of national income in 1986-87 is expected to compare with previous years.

Mr. MacGregor: As published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", the PSBR/GDP ratio is set at about 1¾ per cent. in 1986-87. This compares with an average of 3½ per cent. in the first seven years of this Administration, and 6¾ per cent. under the previous Labour Government.

Personal Taxation (Reform)

38. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the total loss of revenue arising from the full implementation of the transferable allowance proposals set out in the Green Paper "The Reform of Personal Taxation".

Mr. Moore: The revenue consequences of a move to transferable allowances are considered in paragraphs 3.5-3.9 of the Green Paper.

Capital Expenditure

39. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards the chartering or leasing of major items of capital expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: Proposals to lease major capital items should be evaluated using standard investment appraisal techniques. Each proposal should be judged on its merits; in practice, leasing by the public sector often tends to be more expensive than outright purchase.

Housing (Personal Investment)

41. Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average amount invested by each individual (a) in personal housing through mortgage rent and repairs and (b) in his or her place of work, through direct share ownership.

Mr. Moore: The 1984 "Family Expenditure Survey" found that average weekly household expenditure on housing net of housing benefit, rebates and allowances, was £24·06, and that average weekly household expenditure on the purchase or alteration of dwellings, including mortgage payments, was £11·19*.

The best figures available for the extent of direct share ownership in the place of work are for employees in companies with Inland Revenue-approved all-employee share schemes. Up to 31 March 1985 an estimated 1¼ million employees had joined such schemes, acquiring shares or options on shares to an average initial value of approximately £1,200 each.

* Full definitions of these two categories are contained in Annex A of the Family Expenditure survey.

Job Creation

44. Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the impact of the Budget measures announced on 18 March on unemployment in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Budget has been well received both because of its emphasis on further developing a vigorous and enterprising economy generating sustained growth of output and employment and because it contains a considerable number of measures directed to the problem of unemployment.

Personal Taxation

45. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total income tax and national insurance contribution deducted from a sole income of £10,000 per year if the income was (a) earned, (b) unearned for a married man with no mortgage.

Mr. Moore: The deductions would be (a) £2,740·05 (made up of £1,840·05 income tax and £900 national insurance contributions) and (b) £1,840·05 in 1986-87, assuming no allowances and reliefs other than the married man's allowance and that for (a) national insurance contributions are paid at the contracted-in rate.

Taxation

46. Mr. Rogers asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why it is his policy to give priority to cuts in investment income surcharge, income tax capital gains tax and capital transfer tax.

Mr. Moore: My right hon. Friend's tax proposals are those best suited to further the Governments' economic objectives.

Economic Prospects

47. Mr. Loyden asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he makes of the effect on United Kingdom economic prospects of a fall in oil prices and a fall in United Kingdom oil output, respectively.

Mr. MacGregor: Estimates of United Kindgom oil production were given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Energy in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Orpington (Mr. Stanbrook) at column 31 17 March. These estimates suggest that any decline in oil production is likely to be gradual and therefore to exert only a very limited impact on the United Kingdom economy over the next few years. The assessment in my right hon. Friend's Budget statement of the effects of a fall in oil prices was that the level of economic activity and inflation would be, if anything, slightly better than they would have been without the fall in oil prices.

Unemployment Costs

48. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the relative costs to the respective national economies of unemployment in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Japan, (c) Germany, (d) the United States of America and (e) France, respectively.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The information requested is not available.

Export Licences

49. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operation of the export licences system.

Mr. Brooke: The Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985, S.I. 1985 No. 849 lists goods whose exportation is prohibited without a licence. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is responsible for the legislation and his Department issues the licences. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are responsible for enforcing the controls at exportation. During the year ended 31 March 1985 goods to the value of nearly £18 million were seized, offences involved 191 persons of whom three received prison sentences and compounded settlements under section 152 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 totalled over £78,000.

Systime plc, Leeds

50. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has had regarding the visit of Her Majesty's Customs and Exercise officers to Systime plc, Leeds, between 19 and 21 July 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have had no representations regarding this visit other than the letter from the hon. Member to which I have replied on 7 April.

Water Authorities (Privatisation)

52. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions he is making in his public expenditure projections as to how much he expects to be raised from the sale of water authorities between the current time and May 1988.

Mr. Moore: It would be wrong to speculate on the proceeds from the privatisation of water authorities.

Depositary Receipts (Taxation)

53. Mr. Freeman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received upon his Budget proposals to tax the issue of United States depositary receipts for equity shares of United Kingdom companies at a rate of 5 per cent.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations to the effect that the 5 per cent. tax should not be imposed on the conversion of United Kingdom shares into depositary receipts.

Excise Duty

54. Mr. Alexander asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account he took, in deciding to raise certain duties by amounts incorporating a halfpenny, of the fact that the halfpenny is no longer legal tender; and what assessment he has made of the practical implications of this decision.

Mr. Brooke: The legal rates of excise duty for hydrocarbon oils are expressed per litre to a hundredth of a penny, and duty is charged on the quantity delivered in bulk from refineries and import warehouses. The retail price of petrol and derv is shown at most pumps to a tenth of a penny for both litres and gallons, while heating gas oil is commonly sold in bulk to final consumers. My right hon. Friend's Budget decision to raise the duties on these products by amounts which (including any consequential VAT) do not approximate to whole numbers of pence per gallon should, as in previous years, cause no practical problems.

United States Extraterritorial Controls

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the policy of the CCTA on the re-imposition of United States extraterritorial controls on computers and peripherals which are being disposed of from Government use; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the policy of the CCTA towards accepting tenders or recommending for purchase by Government Departments computers or equipment supplied by companies which seek to impose extraterritorial United States controls on their United Kingdom staff or on non-Government United Kingdom customers or on United Kingdom exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his similar question on 8 April at column 95.

Civil List

Mr. Canavan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about his most recent statement on Civil List expenditure.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received five letters.

Building Societies (Ombudsman Scheme)

Mr. Hawkins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement about the proposal that building societies should belong to an ombudsman scheme.

Mr. Ian Stewart: In accordance with undertakings I gave during Committee stage of the Building Societies Bill, the Government propose to introduce amendments to the Bill requiring societies to belong to an ombudsman scheme. Such a scheme will need approval by the Building Societies Commission, and will have to be administered by a body independent of the member societies.

Building societies will be obliged to belong to a scheme in respect of the opening, operation and termination of share, deposit and class 1 or 2 loan accounts. The scheme need not cover the decision to grant or refuse a class 1 or 2 loan to new borrowers. In the case of other decisions turning on the creditworthiness of a member or depositor the ombudsman need not be empowered to over-ride the commercial judgment of the society, but may require it to reconsider its decision. Societies may, if they wish, belong to schemes covering other aspects of their operations.

I referred to this matter in a speech about the building society legislation delivered to the annual general meeting of the Metropolitan Association of Building Societies today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Eastern Bloc Fish Processing Ships

Mr. Randall asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he had with the United Kingdom fishing industry before deciding to impose Customs and Excise duty on supplies to Eastern bloc fish processing ships; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 16 April 1986, c. 418]: None. Customs and Excise officials held several meetings with agents for the factory ships and representatives from the fishing industry last summer to discuss the charge of duty and levies legally required on supplies imported for factory ships for consumption in the United Kingdom.

EMPLOYMENT

Statistics

Mr. Adley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the compilation of statistics by his Department in so far as they relate to comparisons with other EEC countries.

Mr. Lang: Most regular labour market statistics in the United Kingdom are collected according to national definitions and methods of compilation, as they are in other EC countries.

For example, monthly unemployment statistics in most member countries are based on national registration systems, and are not comparable. (See "Definitions of Registered Unemployed: 1984" published by the Statistical Office of the European Communities (SOEC)). Statistics on the numbers of people in employment are also compiled by each member country from national sources, and while these are normally based to some extent on recognised international definitions they are still not fully comparable. (See "Employment and Unemployment: 1985" published by SOEC).

Information on the labour force is, however, also obtained from the annual labour force survey, a sample survey based on household interviews, which is conducted along similar lines in all EC countries. This provides much information eg on employment and unemployment on a comparable basis (see "Labour Force Sample Survey: Methods and Definitions: 1985" published by SOEC).

Perivale Skillcentre

Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the future of Perivale skillcentre.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission's lease on Perivale skillcentre is due to expire in 1990. It is possible that it will not be renewed. For this and other reasons the skills training agency has commissioned a study into the nature, size and location of its whole skillcentre provision in north London after this date. The long term future of Perivale skillcentre will depend on the findings of this study, which will shortly become available. A copy will be sent to my hon. Friend so that he will have a chance to comment before a decision is reached, and I will also arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

Community Programme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish figures for the numbers of (i) jobs covered by the community programme and the annual cost of the programme in each year since it started and (ii) current jobs covered by the programme and its cost; and what are the average weekly earnings and number of hours worked under the programme.

Mr. Lang: The community programme was introduced on 1 October 1982 and replaced the community enterprise programme.

The number of filled places at the end of each financial year since 1982 were as follows:

	Filled places
March 1983	17,100
March 1984	112,900
March 1985	132,800
March 1986	199,900

The annual costs in cash prices, including programme administration costs, and residual expenditure on the community enterprise programme were as follows:

	£ million
1982-83	177·0
1983-84	400·1
1984-85	534·3
*1985-86	688·0

* Forecast.

Preliminary findings from the most recent survey of community programme participants indicate average weekly earnings of £141·55 for managers and supervisors and £65·96 for other participants. However the manager and supervisor figure is thought to have been influenced by the incidence of back-pay during the survey period, resulting from last year's local authority pay settlement. The previous survey of participants, conducted three months earlier, showed average weekly earnings of £121·60 for managers and supervisors.

The reported earnings figures include top-up payments made by some project sponsors to participants in addition to wage costs met by the Manpower Services Commission. A survey currently in the field will provide information as to the extent of this topping-up.

The most recent survey found that, on average, managers and supervisors work 37 hours per week and other participants 27 hours per week.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish any available data which show the labour market activity of workers in the 12 months following participation in (i) the YTS, (ii) the community programme, (iii) the young workers scheme and (iv) the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: A regular follow-up survey is conducted of young people some three months after they leave YTS. Results from this survey are produced monthly and copies are placed in the Library.

A survey of the community programme was published in November 1985 and showed that 48 per cent. of people leaving the community programme had held one or more jobs in the six to 10 month period since leaving the programme. An estimated 90 per cent. of those completing a year of support on the young workers scheme continue in employment with the same employer. Further details will be published in an article in the May issue of the Employment Gazette.

An article in the August 1985 issue of the Employment Gazette summarised survey work on the enterprise allowance scheme and reported that 80 per cent. of those who had completed a year on the scheme, were still running the business 15 months after starting it under the scheme.

Jobstart Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will estimate the number of new jobs to be created by the Government's jobstart and new workers' scheme initiatives; and on what basis the relevant expenditure estimates given in table 1 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" were calculated;

(2) how much public expenditure is being set aside in 1986-87 to finance (i) the jobstart allowance element of the national restart programme for the long-term unemployed and (ii) the new workers scheme; and how many new jobs he expects to be created by these measures.

Mr. Lang: The jobstart allowance is designed to encourage long-term unemployed people to take jobs which they might otherwise not consider and thereby to help employers to fill vacancies. It does not aim to create additional, new jobs, although it may help to fill vacancies which would otherwise remain unfilled (hence raising the overall level of employment). The allowance will be available from 1 July to anyone who is eligible and who makes a valid claim. It is difficult to predict what the take-up will be. A sum of £15 million has been provided for this programme in 1986-87.

The estimates of the expenditure on the new workers scheme published in table 1.1 of the Budget report were calculated on the basis of forecasts derived from our experience of the young workers scheme. We estimate that the coverage of the scheme in March 1987 may be some 63,000 and that its effectiveness in encouraging new jobs will be similar to that of the young workers scheme.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General how many of those in receipt of the enterprise allowance remained in employment or gainful self-employment at the expiry of the period of award of the allowance, by region, for the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: Of the 4,367 people who joined the enterprise allowance scheme in March 1985 the following percentages by region were still trading in their EAS business at the end of their allowance period in March 1986.

Region	Per cent.
London	88·8
South West	91·8
South East	88·8
Midlands	89·1
North West	89·3
Yorkshire and Humberside	89·2
Scotland	89·8
Wales	89·5
Northern	90·8
Great Britain	89·5

Survey evidence has shown that about one quarter of those who leave their EAS business immediately go into employment or other forms of self employment and that within two years of leaving their EAS business 55 per cent. of people are either employed or self employed in a different venture.

YTS

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish (a) the number of training places covered by the YTS and the annual cost of the scheme in each year since it started, (b) the current number of places covered by the scheme and its cost, (c) the average weekly income and number of hours of trainees; and if he will provide a breakdown between mode A, mode B1 and mode B2 places.

Mr. Trippier: The information on training places and cost of YTS in the financial year since the scheme started is shown in the following tables:

1. Capital Grants expenditure cannot be separately identified by Mode.
2. Other expenditure includes research and development accredited centres and miscellaneous minor items.
3. Excludes MSC administration costs.
4. Outturn for 1985-86 is provisional.

(b) For the current financial year 1986-87 expenditure is estimated at £906 million to cover around 468,000 places.

(c) All trainees whether employed or non-employed receive at least the standard training allowance plus any payments in respect of travel costs or lodgings to which they may be entitled. Payments made to trainees in excess of the standard allowances are a matter for the training providers concerned. Neither my Department nor the Manpower Services Commission maintain a record of such payments.

The detailed information requested on trainee hours is not readily available. However it has always been the rule that trainees must generally spend no more than 40 hours per week on YTS excluding meal breaks.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General, further to his answer of 18 December 1985, Official Report, column 187, whether he intends to encourage or counsel employers to contribute towards the funding of the two-year YTS.

Mr. Trippier: The funding for two-year YTS has been set at a level which will lead managing agents generally to seek contributions from employers. The Government recognise the importance and legitimacy of such contributions; it does not, however, intend to issue specific guidance on the level of contributions that managing agents should seek.

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General what are the latest figures for the proportion of those who have taken part in YTS schemes in England who have subsequently found full-time employment; and what proportion subsequently were unemployed in each of the years since the scheme's inception.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the form requested. The Manpower Services Commission has conducted regular follow-up surveys of those leaving YTS schemes since 1984. Postal questionnaires are sent to young people some three months after they leave their scheme. Information covering leavers in England between June 1984 and March 1985 is set out below, alongside the latest available information (covering leavers in England between April and October 1985).

Wages Inspectors

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish an analysis of the numbers of wages inspectors, the number of establishments covered by the wages councils, and the results of inspections in 1985 in the same format as was used in the series of written answers given on 4 April 1985, Official Report, columns 782-90.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is given in the following tables.

Industrial Diseases and Accidents

Mr. Normanton asked the Paymaster General (1) how may persons employed by the Central Electricity Generating Board died from industrial diseases or from industrial accidents during each of the calendar years 1970 to 1985;

(2) how many persons have (a) died and (b) been seriously injured in nuclear establishments producing electricity for the Central Electricity Generating Board during the calendar years 1970 to 1985.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. For the electricity industry as a whole, available information is given in the table. Data for 1985 are not yet available.

Mr. Normanton asked the Paymaster General if he will list the number of persons who were (a) killed or died and (b) seriously injured resulting in their being unable to resume normal employment, in the mines belonging to the National Coal Board during each of the calendar years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Trippier: The available information including accidents at non-NCB licensed coal mines is shown in the following table.

Accidents in coal mines in Great Britain reported to HMQMI

* The NADO Regulations which came into force in 1981, introduced a new definition on a wider basis than the earlier category of serious injuries.
† Figures affected by consequences of the miners strike (began March 1984, ended March 1985).
Note:

Many of those suffering serious or major injury will be able to resume their normal employment in due course.

Coventry (Redundancies)

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to the answer of 10 April to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, if, in the light of the fact that information equivalent to that sought in the hon. Member's original question was, until its abolition, published by the West Midlands metropolitan county council, he will reconsider his refusal to publish in the Official Report details of firms in Coventry which have notified redundancies to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Information given to the Department under the redundancy handling provisions of the Employment Protection Act is given in confidence. The publication of details of individual redundancies would require the prior approval of the employer concerned, and this could only be done at disproportionate cost.

The figures published by the West Midlands metropolitan county council must come from a different and consequently not directly comparable source.

Tourism

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General what was the number of staff employed by (a) the British Tourist Authority and (b) the English Tourist Board in 1979 and 1985.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that information is not available in the precise form requested. The following table shows the average number of staff employed by each Board during the financial years ending 31 March 1979 and 31 March 1985.

	1978-79	1984-85
British Tourist Authority	452	420
English Tourist Board	160	156

Licensing Laws

Mr. Gale asked the Paymaster General if he will quantify the number of jobs that might be created by liberalising the licensing laws in England and Wales.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We cannot make forecasts of specific numbers of jobs which might be created if licensing laws were liberalised. It would depend on the extent and form of liberalisation and how the trade and consumers responded to the opportunities. The licensed trade have estimated that some 25,000 new jobs in public houses alone might be created by the introduction of flexible hours.

Closed Shop

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he is considering any amendments to the current legislation on the closed shop; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We have no plans at present for further legislation but we are keeping the situation under review. We remain determined to ensure the fair treatment of people who choose not to belong to trade unions.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 18 April 1986

ENERGY

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy at which power station sites construction of new radioactive waste storage facilities is under way or planned; and what are the volumetric storage capacities in each case.

Mr. Goodlad: No new waste storage facilities are under construction at any CEGB or SSEB nuclear power station sites, but additional storage for short-lived intermediate level Magnox waste is planned for Trawsfynydd to store 100 cu m in 200 litre drums for an interim period. No new facilities are under construction or planned for work resulting from nuclear power station operated by British Nuclear Fuels.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current status of the Severn barrage project; and whether a potential timetable presently exists for its design, tendering and construction.

Mr. Hunt: I have recently received the report of the Severn tidal power group, which I am now considering. I shall respond in due course.

Selston Electricity Substation (Accident)

Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has received the report of the working party set up following the inquest into the two children who died as a result of an accident at Selston electricity substation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I have received the report and today placed a copy in the Library. The working party recommended three courses of action to reduce the incidence of trespass into substations and the risk of accident to those who do; namely, improved security, improved education and research and development into more sensitive means of detecting mechanical failures. The improved security measures should be directed at substations which are at greatest risk of trespass or vandalism. The working party recommended a capital expenditure programme costing possibly some £10 million, but with an initial field trial designed to assess the effeciveness of such measures. The Electricity Council has accepted the report and has decided to implement the recommended programme, but to dispense with the field trial phase. The Electricity Council will monitor the programme and my Department will keep in close touch with this.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchase of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Peter Walker: I regret that my Department does not keep its records in a form which would enable this question to be answered, but we do wish to encourage small businesses.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary have applied for transfer to other constabularies in Great Britain since 15 November 1985.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Sir J. Biggs-Davison) on 17 April 1986, at column 470.

Infant Birth and Death Rates

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will state for 1983 and 1984 (a) the number of live births in Northern Ireland and the rate per 100,000 population, (b) the number of perinatal deaths and the rate per 100,000 population, (c) the number of infant deaths and the rate per 100,000 population and (d) the number of perinatal and infant deaths and the rate of such deaths per 100,000 population, ranked according to district council area; and if he will make a statement.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

British Companies (United States Laws)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy on the acquisition for the use of his Department or for educational establishments for which he is responsible of computers and equipment supplied by companies which seek to impose extraterritorial United States control on their United Kingdom staff and on non-Government United Kingdom customers and on United Kingdom exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 27 March, at columns 559-60, to which I have nothing to add.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what work has been done by his Department to promote education concerning drugs and drug abuse in school curricula for both secondary and primary schools.

Mr. Dunn: £2 million has been made available through the education support programme mainly to enable local authorities to appoint a member of staff to stimulate and co-ordinate action in the education service aimed at the prevention of drugs misuse, including where appropriate the development of curricular materials.

Last year the Department issued a new publication, "Drug Misuse and the Young", which has been made available in very large numbers to school teachers and to others in the education service.

The Department is also currently funding an important piece of development work which is being steered by the Health Education Council and involving other expert bodies to produce a range of curricular and supporting materials aimed at young people aged 14 to 18. These should be available later this year.

In addition to the material produced or promoted by the Department, there is a good deal of useful material produced by other bodies including ISDD, TACADE and the Lions Clubs International working in association with others. Although most of the material is aimed primarily at children of secondary age, an interesting initiative has been taken by the Wirral local authority to produce materials aimed specifically at younger pupils and the Department has provided some supportive funding.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what training is made available to teachers for coping with drug abuse among the pupil and the student population.

Mr. Dunn: Many local education authorities are already undertaking some useful work in this area: in some cases their efforts have been supported by bodies with appropriate expertise, notably TACADE.

The Department has identified work in this area as being of particularly high priority and a number of short courses under the aegis of Her Majesty's inspectorate have been held as part of the regional course series; more of these are planned.

The package of educational materials which the Department is funding through the agency of the Health Education Council — and which involves bodies including TACADE — will include components aimed specifically at the training of teachers and providing support for curriculum developers. This material will be available later this year; as an interim measure the Department issued last year the booklet "Drug Misuse and the Young" which has been made available to the teaching force in large numbers and which sets out some useful, basic information.

Within the education support grant programme £2 million has been set aside in 1986-87 for work relevant to drug misuse and local authorities have been encouraged to regard the funding of appropriate forms of teacher training as one of the areas in which the funding might be deployed.

The Department is keeping under review what possibilities there might be for further initiatives in this field.

Nursery Schools

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the figures for the number of children aged under five years attending maintained nursery and primary schools per 1,000 of the under-five population in (a) all of the councils under Conservative control and (b) under Labour control, respectively, in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 8 April, at columns 53-55.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table listing education authorities by the number of discretionary awards issued, their average value and the number per thousand of the population aged 16 years or over for the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the average value of discretionary awards and the number per thousand of the population aged 16 years or over for (a) all the councils under Conservative control and (b) all the councils under Labour control, for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Walden: The table provides, for 1984-85, the provisional number of new, full-value discretionary awards per 1,000 of the average 18 and 19-year-old population for each local education authority in England and Wales. C denotes control by Conservative council; L denotes control by Labour council; N denotes no overall control by either. The average value of such awards is estimated at £2,300.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Sir Keith Joseph: The Department is mindful of Government policy to encourage the development of small firms, but has not to date kept detailed records of the value of contracts placed with small firms. However, the department will be keeping records of contracts let to small firms (under 200 people) for 1987-88 and beyond.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

York Trailer Holdings, Market Harborough

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why his Department recently accepted a specification from the Ethiopian Government for road trailers fitted with German axles and suspension for famine relief purposes; what account was taken in reaching the decision of the willingness to the bid of York Trailer Holdings of Market Harborough; and what steps were taken to ascertain the extent to which that company already has such units operating in Ethiopia and supplies other countries in Africa.

Mr. Raison: The specification was accepted to ensure compatibility with the existing Government trailer fleet in Ethiopia. The tender from York Trailer Holdings was unsuccessful because it failed to meet the urgent delivery date. The existence of the company's units in Ethiopia and elsewhere could not override this. The contract went to another British firm.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Young Person (Remand)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which an application was made by the prosecution to remand a 14-year-old boy from Leeds Crown Court to Hull prison on 9 April; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I understand that no application was made by the prosecution to remand a 14-year-old boy from Leeds Crown Court to Hull prison on 9 April 1986. However, I am making further inquiries into this case, and I will write to the hon. and learned Member.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authorities (Capital Projects)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to increase the percentage of capital receipts that local authorities can spend on capital projects.

Mrs. Rumbold: In respect of 1986-87, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, East (Mr. Moynihan) on 20 November at column 246. No decisions have been taken for later years. They will depend in part on the nature of a new local authority capital control system and the timing of its introduction.

Coal-burning Power Stations (Pollution)

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what tonnage of ash was released into the atmosphere by coal-burning power stations of the Central Electricity Generating Board during each of the calendar years 1970 to 1985.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information is not compiled precisely in the form requested, but total grit and dust emissions to the atmosphere in the years in question from coal-burning power stations of the Central Electricity Generating Board have been estimated as follows.

Year	Mass Emission (Tonnes)
1970	178,500
1971	161,600
1972	139,200
1973	154,800
1974	130,100
1975	138,100
1976	139,500
1977	133,400
1978	133,400
1979	140,500
1980	135,300
1981	124,900
1982	109,700
1983	108,300
1984	66,400
1985	84,700

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchase of goods and services those amounts represented.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Covent Garden

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to support the transfer of former Greater London council property in Covent Garden to Covent Garden Area Trust.

Mr. Tracey: It will be for the London Residuary Body, in the first instance, to consider this option, amongst others.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce planning controls to prevent the Covent Garden area being sold off to private interests.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Hampton Court

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has now received the consultants' report on the feasibility of leasing vacant apartments at Hampton court to substantial companies with a United Kingdom base, for use as company flats; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Yes. We have received the consultants' report. They have concluded that there is scope for a viable scheme, though there would inevitably be important historical and architectural constraints. The cost of the associated works would have to be contained within public expenditure planning controls. The report needs to be very carefully considered, taking account of recent events at Hampton court palace. We will announce the Government's decisions in due course.

Thames Towpath

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to take any steps to arrange for the opening to public access of one and a half miles of towpath along the right bank of the River Thames between Albert bridge and Victoria bridge, in the Windsor home park, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I have been asked to reply.

Public use of this part of the towpath has not been available since the Home park became private in 1850, except for its use as a towpath for horse-drawn river traffic. There are no plans to change these arrangements.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Cruise Missile Convoys

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable as to how many police officers were involved in policing the cruise convoy at Roleston camp corner on Salisbury Plain on 17 March; and as to whether he intends to increase numbers of police protecting such convoys on future occasions.

Mr. Giles Shaw: For operational reasons, information of this nature is not disclosed.

Shotgun Cartridges

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to make it illegal to import, manufacture, sell or possess bullets for use in conjunction with shotgun cartridges.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Shotgun cartridges containing five or more shot, none of which exceeds ·36 in in diameter, are exempt from control under the Firearms Act 1968 but the insertion of solid pieces of metal such as single, rifled, lead slug in place of the normal pieces of lead shot in such a cartridge would bring the ammunition within certificate control. The possession of such ammunition without a firearms certificate would be an offence under the 1968 Act.

Police Authorities (Computers and Hardware)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how value for money is assessed before the purchase of computers and hardware by police authorities.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is for police authorities to satisfy themselves that expenditure on police computers represents good value for money. The Home Office issues guidance to chief officers and police authorities from time to time on the considerations to be taken into account in assessing value for money in this field. The most recent guidance is contained in Home Office circular No. 23/1985, a copy of which is available in the Library.

In considering proposals for computer equipment for the Metropolitan police, of which my right hon. Friend is the police authority, he expects to see an investment appraisal which sets out the following:

a description of the objectives which the equipment is intended to achieve;

the full range of options for achieving these objectives;

the costs and benefits of each option;

an assessement of the likely effects of the equipment on police and civil staff manpower;

as well as details as to how it is proposed to procure and finance the equipment and other relevant considerations.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent communications his Department has had with police authorities about the use of plastic bullets.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Home Office officials have had discussions with the chairmen of the Greater Manchester, West Midlands, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire police authorities, and with representatives of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and the Association of County Councils; and we have corresponded with the chairman of the West Midlands police authority. My right hon. Friend has met representatives of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss the availability of plastic baton rounds and other topics.

Racial Attacks

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to combat the recent increase in racially motivated attacks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Brandon-Bravo) on 23 January at column 267.

US Extraterritorial Controls

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the acquisition for his Department's use of computers and equipment supplied by companies which seek to impose extraterritorial United States controls on their United Kingdom staff or on non-Government United Kingdom customers or on United Kingdom exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have nothing further to add to my response to the similar question given on 27 March 1986 at column 542.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Hurd: The Department does not keep records of the size of firms to which contracts are awarded; and the percentage of total expenditure represented by contracts awarded to small businesses cannot readily be estimated. Most outstation purchases, amounting to about £35 million annually, are likely to be placed with small businesses.

Libya (Engineers and Pilots)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to review the immigration status of Libyan trainee engineers and pilots currently studying in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: We keep these matters under constant review.

Boys (Remand)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any boys under the age of 15 years have been remanded into adult prison establishments in England and Wales since 31 March 1981.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Unruly Certification Procedure

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if prison establishment standing orders have been amended to take account of Home Office circular 7/81, which altered the unruly certification procedure for boys under the age of 14 years in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. Full-scale revision of the standing order will be undertaken when the proposals for amending the arrangements for unruliness certificates—mentioned in my hon. Friend's reply to a question from the hon. and learned Member on 27 March at column 547—are fully developed. In the meantime, an interim amendment is being issued, drawing governor's attention to the prison department circular instruction which describes the current provisions.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals to change the unruly certification procedure for 15 and 16-year-old boys in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply given to a question from him on 27 March at column 547.

WALES

NHS (Hospital Staffs)

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were working in National Health Service hospitals in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were working in the different occupational categories within the National Health Service in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(3) how many people were working in the National Health Service in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(4) how many people were working in the different occupational categories within hospitals in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Other than for medical, dental and nursing staff it is not possible, from the information available centrally, to identify separately those National Health Service staff working in hospitals from those working in the community or at district headquarters. The numbers of National Health Service staff in Wales for the years 1975 to 1985 are given, for each staff group and in total, in the following table:

*National Health Service staff

* Including Welsh Health Common Services Agency (WHCSA).
† Standard working hours for nurses were reduced from 40 to 37·5 hours per week in 1980, and therefore whole-time equivalents from 1980 onwards are not strictly comparable with those for previous years.

Local Government

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were working in local government in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were working in the different occupational categories in local government in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is given in "Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics, No. 8, 1984" (table 66) and No. 9, 1985 (table 67), copies of which are available in the Library.

Water Industry

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were working in the water industry in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Figures are not available in the format requested, but the numbers employed by the Welsh water authority from 1975 are as follows:

Year	Number of employees
1975	5,009
1976	5,402
1977	5,535
1978	5,601

1983	5,424
1984	5,180
1985	4,709

Figures at 31 March each year.

Nurses

Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people were being trained and educated for a nursing career in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were being trained and educated in the different categories for a nursing career in Wales in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The available information is given in the following table:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Labelling

Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he received from the BBC on behalf of the staff of the "Food and Drink" programme about food labelling; and what has been his response.

Mrs. Fenner: I was sent on 13 February copies of the top four entries to the BBC "Food and Drink" programme labelling competition and I undertook to look at these ideas alongside other comments received on our proposals for fat and nutrition labelling of food. In my acknowledgement I did draw to the attention of the programme producers the difficulty of reconciling this selective graphic format with guidelines which allow for a full nutritional profile using words and figures.

Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, as part of his proposals for the compulsory labelling of fat content in food, he will incorporate a mandatory requirement for the inclusion of a symbolic representation of the fat content.

Mrs. Fenner: The draft proposals for compulsory labelling of fat require levels of both total and saturated fatty acids to be displayed numerically, normally on a grams per 100 gram basis. We have no proposal for requiring in addition a symbolic representation.

Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, as part of his proposals for the voluntary labelling of salt, sugar and fibre content in food, he will incorporate a requirement for the inclusion of symbolic representation of these constituents.

Mrs. Fenner: No. Our guidelines for voluntary nutrition labelling provide for the declaration of a wide range of nutrients including salt, sugar and fibre, and I can seen no justification for giving special prominence to these items by selective graphic representation.

UK Companies (US Law)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the acquisition for the use of his Department of computers and equipment supplied by companies which seek to impose extraterritorial United States controls on their United Kingdom staff or on non-Government United Kingdom customer or on United Kingdom exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: The Government's policy on the acquisition and use of computers in this respect was expressed in an answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Treasury, on 8 April, at c. 95, and my Ministry adheres to that policy.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Jopling: Records are not maintained in a form which enables this information to be provided.

Diabetics (Food Standards)

Mr. Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what responsibilities his Department has in relation to the provision of, and standards applied to, special food for diabetics.

Mrs. Fenner: Apart from my general responsibilities for the nation's food supply, I have no particular responsibilities for the provision of foods for diabetics. I have, however, made the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 which does, amongst other things, control the conditions under which a claim can be made that a food is suitable, or has been specifically made, for diabetics.

Opium Poppies

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is proposing to take to ensure that opium poppy crops grown for seed are marketed solely for the purposes for which they are being grown.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 17 April 1986, c. 470]: Under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, the unlicensed extraction of opium from poppies is already an offence. What, if any, additional steps to take will be decided in the light of the report which my officials are preparing jointly with those from the Home Office.

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of contracts signed to grow opium poppy for seed in England ad Wales; and what is the estimated contracted acreage.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 17 April 1986, c. 470]: Reports suggest a total of about 20 contracts covering up to 300 acres.

Mr. Corbett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of his officials are involved in preparing a joint report with the Home Office into opium poppy production in England and Wales; and how many meetings have so far been held.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 17 April 1986, c. 470]: Four of my officials are directly involved in the preparation of the report, and one meeting has taken place with Home Office officials.

THE ARTS

South Bank

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his reply of 14 April, if he will state the number of staff deployed on the South Bank by (a) Argus Shield, (b) Blue Arrow, (c) Pall Mall and (d) Matthew Hall.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts is currently abroad. I have been asked to reply.

Information is as follows:

	Number
(a) Argus Shield	15
(b) Blue Arrow	48
(c) Pall Mall	3
(d) Matthew Hall	12

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his reply of 11 April, Official Report, column 221, how many staff were employed by the South Bank concert halls immediately prior to 1 April.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts is currently abroad. I have been asked to reply.

A total of 239 at 31 March 1986.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Tax

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out in comparative form such information as he has as to the top rate of income tax in France, Japan, Canada, West Germany, the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moore: The information requested is as follows:

Maximum Rates on Employment Income

	Rate per cent.
France	65
Japan	84
Canada	54
West Germany	56
United States of America	55·5
United Kingdom	60

Note: Where applicable (Canada, Japan and the United States of America) the tax rates include local income taxes.

Personal Taxation

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Hampstead and Highgate of 27 March, Official Report, columns 602-5, if he will set out in respect of tables 1 and 2, the equivalent rates of tax for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moore: The information requested is as follows:

Table 1
Income Tax Thresholds in £—Employment Income
(1986-87 proposed level)

Single person	2,335
Married couple with no dependent children	3,655

Table 2
Rates of Tax on Bands of Net Taxable Employment Income in £ (1986-87 proposed taxable income and rates)

Single person/married couple with no dependent children	Rate per cent.
0—17,200	29
17,201—20,200	40
20,201—25,400	45
25,401—33,300	50
33,301—41,200	55
over 41,200	60

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Brooke: Her Majesty's Treasury does not record information about the value of contracts according to the size of businesses with which they are placed. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Since 1978-79 there has been greater emphasis on contracting-out Government business and the value of contracts placed with all businesses, including small businesses, has increased. Examples where Treasury purchasing is known to be from small businesses are travel arrangements, taxi hire and carpet purchasing and laying.

EC (Non-VAT Own Resources)

Mr. Freeman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the earlier payment of non-value added tax own resources to the European Communities in April.

Mr. Brooke: In accordance with article 10(2) of Council regulation 2891/77, the Commission has invited member states to advance from 20 May to 21 April the payment of own resources other than VAT in respect of agricultural, sugar and isoglucose levies and customs duties collected by the Government on its behalf in March.

In accordance with this request, the Government propose to make an advance payment of some £132 million on 21 April. This will be financed initially by a repayable advance from the Contingencies Fund, pending parliamentary approval of a summer Supplementary Estimate. The payment of levies and duties on 20 May 1986 which is made directly from the Consolidated Fund under section 2(3) of the European Communities Act 1972 will be reduced by the amount of the advance. There will therefore be no net addition to forecast public expenditure for 1986-87.

Budget Statement (Tax Changes)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to seek to ensure that tax changes announced in future Budget statements will take effect from a minute past midnight on the day of his statement.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 16 April 1986, c. 418]: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made in the debate on the Budget resolutions on 19 March at columns 377-78. Some Budget changes which affect income tax and corporation tax have to take effect more or less immediately. Where changes of this kind are proposed, it has been the normal practice in the past for those which work to the taxpayers' advantage to take effect on or after Budget day, but for those which impose or increase tax to take effect only after Budget day. In future the Government will consider making changes effective from the start of Budget day to prevent forestalling. This practice is already frequently followed for the capital taxes. As far as taxes on consumer expenditure (value added tax and excise duties) are concerned, the Government see no need to depart from the long-standing practice of applying changes from the most convenient and appropriate time after the Budget statement.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been paid out in tax relief for private health insurance since 1979, showing separately the figures for the financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 15 April 1986, c. 354.]: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the fact that, since 1982-83, tax has not been chargeable on the cost of private medical insurance provided by employers for employees earning less than £8,500 per annum. The total additional yield, if such benefit had been chargeable to tax, is estimated at about £25 milion for 1982-83 to 1985-86, of which about £7 million relates to 1985-86.

SCOTLAND

Prisoners

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of prisoners admitted to Scottish prisons in the latest year for which figures are available who were sentenced to periods of three months and 30 days or less, respectively; and what percentage this was of the total number of admissions of prisoners serving sentences in that year.

Mr. Rifkind: Provisional figures for 1985 are as follows:

Receptions of Convicted Prisoners

Length of Sentence	Number	As Percentage of Total
3 months/90 days	3,306	13·6
1 month/30 days or less	12,660	52·2
All sentence lengths	24,258	100·0

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of persons admitted to prison in Scotland for the non-payment of fines in the latest year for which figures are available and the percentage that number represents of the total number of admissions of convicted prisoners; and what was the average sentence served by those admitted for non-payment of fines in that year.

Mr. Rifkind: According to provisional figures for 1985, 11,435 persons were admitted to penal establishments in Scotland in 1985 in default of payment of fines. This represents 47 per cent. of all receptions under sentence during the year. The average sentence imposed on fine defaulters was 19 days. No information is collected centrally on the average length of sentence actually served, which is affected by remission and by the payment of the fine in some cases before expiry of the sentence.

Nurses

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people were employed, by occupational category, in the education and training of nurses in Scotland in 1975 and in each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were employed in the education and training of nurses, by specialist category, in Scotland in 1975 and in each subsequent year;

(3) how many tutors and other staff were employed in the education and training of nurses in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on the number of nurses teachers employed by health boards in colleges of nursing and midwifery is obtainable from the "Scottish Health Statistics," which are published annually and are available from the House of Commons Library.

So far as specialist category is concerned "Scottish Health Statistics" distinguish only between nurse teachers employed in teaching midwifery students and those teaching other learners. No information is available centrally to enable numbers employed in teaching in the general, mental handicap and mental illness fields to be separately distinguished.

The number of non-nursing staff employed in colleges of nursing and midwifery in 1984 was 266·1 whole-time equivalents; information for previous years is not held centrally.

The colleges also use visiting lecturers from other occupational groups, but no records of this are held centrally.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people were being educated and trained for a nursing career in Scotland in 1975 and in each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were being educated and trained in the different categories for a nursing career in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on the number of nursing staff in training, by specialist category, is obtainable from the "Scottish Health Statistics," which are published annually and are available from the House of Commons Library.

Local Government

Mr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people were working in the different occupational categories in local government in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were employed in local government in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Ancram: Quarterly figures for local authority manpower have been published jointly by the Scottish Office and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities since 1976 and are available in the Library.

Education

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were employed in education in Scotland, excluding the universities, in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information requested is not readily available for years before 1977-78. The relevant figures from 1977-78 onwards are given in the table.

Numbers employed in education in Scotland (excluding universities)*

	Numbers
1977-78	111,618
1978-79	110,514
1979-80	112,508
1980-81	113,130
1981-82	112,028
1982-83	109,285
1983-84	107,639
1984-85	106,911
1985-86	106,580

* Includes the full-time equivalent of part-time staff.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were employed in the different occupational categories in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Detailed information is available only for 1981 and is published by the Registrar General for Scotland in "Economic Activity (10 per cent. Sample), Census 1981 Scotland". Some annual estimates can be derived from the tables contained in "New Earnings Survey", part E, published each year by the Department of Employment. These analyses are based on a 1 per cent. sample of full-time employees, and the results are affected by non-response. Copies of these publications are in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people were employed in his Department in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were employed in the different occupational categories in his Department in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

National Health Service

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many people were employed in the different occupational categories within the National Health Service in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(2) how many people were working in the National Health Service in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year;

(3) how many people were employed in the different occupational categories within hospitals in Scotland in 1975 and each subsequent year.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is published annually in "Scottish Health Statistics", the latest figures being for 1984. These volumes are available in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Royal Navy (Target Towing Contract)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Defence why he has decided to call for a revision of the tenders for his Department's target towing contract for the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: We have decided to reissue invitations to tender, in the light of our evaluation of the tenders already received and the changes recently proposed to the Air Navigation Order 1985.

United States Dassault Falcon Aircraft

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions United States registered Dassault Falcon aircraft on contract to the Royal Navy for target towing purposes have been used for air transport tasks involving service personnel or civilians; and whether such flights are covered by an appropriate air operators' certificate.

Mr. Lee: On 18 occasions, arrangements for the operation of the aircraft being agreed with the Civil Aviation Authority.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall answer shortly.

Royal Dockyards

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has instructed further consultancy work into the setting up of Government-owned plc's for the royal dockyards;

(2) what is the objective of the Coopers and Lybrand study into the royal dockyards; when it will be completed; and if he will publish it.

Mr. Lee: As I told the hon. Member in a letter to him of 27 March, Coopers and Lybrand is providing advice to my Department in two interrelated areas. The first concerns the possible future organisation of the royal dockyards at Devonport and Rosyth after the introduction of commercial management. The second relates to the framework of a Government-owned plc at Rosyth and at Devonport. As I also told him, this second study does not mark any shift in the Government's thinking about the future management of the dockyards. A Government-owned plc remains, as it always has been, an option to which the Government would have recourse only if it was felt that commercial interest in bidding for the contract to manage one of the dockyards was inadequate or unsuitable. The work being done by Coopers and Lybrand in connection with the Government-owned plc option will also provide a benchmark against which to evaluate the responses of potential contractors to the invitations to tender for the management contracts.

Both studies should be completed by early summer. I expect to be able to publish the first study, but it would not be appropriate to publish the second, at least in full. I shall, however, consider, when it has been received and studied, whether any part of it may sensibly be made public.

Upper Heyford Air Base

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the arrest in the early hours of Tuesday 15 April of a newspaper reporter by a number of armed United States military personnel, about ½-mile from the outer perimeter of the Upper Heyford air base.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that United States air force security personnel at RAF Upper Heyford have made no such arrest.

PRIME MINISTER

Drug Abuse

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Prime Minister if she is satisfied with the co-ordination between the Department of Education and Science the Home Department and the Department of Health and Social Security in dealing with the drug abuse problem among the pupil and the student population; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Yes; there is excellent co-ordination between all the Departments in this matter. The main link is the ministerial group on the misuse of drugs which has been in existence for almost two years and has been the forum in which the Government's comprehensive and closely co-ordinated strategy has been formulated. The group is chaired by my hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor), Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, and the Members at present include my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn), Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Science, and my hon. Friend the Member for Wycombe (Mr. Whitney), Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health. Other Departments, including those with other education and health interests, are also represented. The most recent evidence of the group's coherent approach is provided by the latest edition of the document, "Tackling Drug Misuse: a Summary of the Government's Strategy," which has recently become available.

Whisky Exports (Japan)

Mr. Sims asked the Prime Minister if, during the forthcoming Heads of Government summit, she intends to raise with the Japanese Prime Minister the problem of tax and duty discrimination facing Scotch whisky exports to Japan.

The Prime Minister: Yes.

Nuclear Disarmament (Negotiations)

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister when Her Majesty's Government intend to resume negotiations on nuclear disarmament as specified in article VI of the non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom remains ready to play its full part in the arms control and disarmament process. As for nuclear disarmament, the immediate priority is for the United States and Soviet Union to agree substantial reductions in their nuclear arsenals. We accordingly support the objectives of the nuclear and space talks at Geneva. The United States proposals of November last year and February this year have our full support.

Argentina (Trade)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report figures showing how trade between each European Economic Community country and Argentina was reduced during and after the conflict in 1982 in pursuance of the agreed sanctions.

The Prime Minister: The suspension of European Community imports from Argentina was effective from 16 April to 17 May 1982, although some countries maintained a ban until late June. Goods already licenced, contracted for, or in transit were not covered.

Given the volatility of trade from month to month, it is not possible to estimate the reduction in imports due to these sanctions. However, in the case of the United Kingdom, where trade was suspended until July 1985, imports in 1983 were about 1 per cent. of their level in 1981.

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 15 April to the hon. Member for Islington South and Finsbury what information she has as to whether any plutonium produced by the re-processing of spent fuel from any British civil reactor has ever been used in nuclear weapons programmes under previous adminstrations since 1956.

The Prime Minister: I am not able to answer for previous Administrations.

US Bases

Mr. Craigen asked the Prime Minister in what circumstances and under what conditions she is prepared to permit the use of American bases in the United Kingdom for the launching of attacks on other countries; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Under long-standing arrangements, the use by the United States forces of bases in the United Kingdom in an emergency would be a matter for joint decision by Her Majesty's Government and the United States Government in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time.

Mr. Craigen asked the Prime Minister what state of relations between the United Kingdom and Libya is implied by her decision to permit the use of United States bases in the United Kingdom for the launching of air strikes on Libya; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No change is implied in our relations with Libya which were broken in April 1984 following the shooting of WPC Fletcher by a gunman inside the Libyan People's Bureau.

TRANSPORT

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchase of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Ridley: This particular information is not available from our records, but we seek in appropriate cases to provide opportunities for smaller firms when inviting tenders for contracts and commissions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Furniture Companies (Liquidations)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies in the furniture sector have gone into liquidation in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Howard: Separate figures for the furniture industry on its own are not available. Information on insolvencies in the timber and wooden furniture industry in England and Wales is in the table:

	Bankruptcies	Company liquidations
1976	31	121
1977	24	128
1978	29	128
1979	28	116
1980	24	211
1981	25	203
1982	31	350
1983	40	294
1984	61	382
1985	n/a	*495

* Provisional.
n/a=Not available.

The bankruptcy figures include receiving orders and administration orders: the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Butcher: Given the devolved nature of the Department's purchasing activity, this information could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

EC (Research Council)

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress was made at the meeting of the Research Council of the European Community Ministers on 8 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The EC Research Council met in Luxembourg on 8 April. I represented the United Kingdom. In a discussion of the Community's 1987 to 1991 research framework there was general agreement that emphasis should be given to R and D to increase industrial competitiveness. Several member states, including the United Kingdom, questioned the unrealistically high level of finance proposed. The United Kingdom emphasised the need for clear criteria for Community programmes, and for the establishment of action priorities. The United Kingdom, supported by other member states, called for a thorough review of the role of the Community's joint research centre in the new industry-oriented programme. The Council accepted a number of changes requested by the European Parliament to the materials and environment programmes agreed last December, but maintained the previously decided funding levels.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Start Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if, for each of the pilot areas of the job start scheme, he will give (i) the number of long-term unemployed, (ii) the number of people taking jobs with the job start allowance between 6 January and 18 March or such other dates for which data are available and (iii) the average level of gross earnings for such jobs.

Mr. Lang: The information available for the period 6 January to 4 April is as follows:

Job start scheme

	Number of long term unemployed	Accepted applications
Billingham	1,341	3
Crawley and Horsham	860	7
Dundee	5,766	15
Ealing	3,937	3
Huddersfield	3,719	15
Preston	3,633	23
Plymouth	5,498	14
Port Talbot and Neath	2,849	21
Stoke	5,942	21
TOTAL	33,545	*122

Information on the average level of gross earnings of job start allowance recipients is not readily available. The table sets out the earnings of job start allowance recipients according to five broad ranges.

Wages (£ a week)	Number
0-39	1
40-49	6
50-59	12
60-69	15
70-79	32
TOTAL	*66

* These totals differ because of backlogs in computer processing of information.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchase of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Trippier: Information in the form requested is not available. However, it is estimated that small firms benefited from at least 10 per cent. of the value of contracts placed directly by my Department in 1985-86.

Skill Shortages

Sir Patrick Wall asked the Paymaster General (1) whether, in view of the recent Confederation of British Industry report on future shortage of skills, a copy of which has been sent to him, he is satisfied with the current relevant output from higher education; and what assessment he has made of the degree of retraining which will be required;

(2) whether, in view of the recent Confederation of British Industry report on future shortage of skills, a copy of which has been sent to him, he is satisfied with the projected future relevant output from higher education; and what assessment he has made of the degree of retraining which will be required.

Mr. Trippier: The Confederation of British Industry, in co-operation with the Manpower Services Commission, undertook a skills shortages survey in conjunction with the regular industrial trends survey of manufacturing industry in December 1985. In the survey 4 per cent. of respondents reported shortages of professional engineers. The Government are aware that there are some skills shortages of this type, particularly in disciplines related to information technology. It was for this reason that in 1985 the Government established the engineering and technology programme to provide an additional 5,000 places in higher education institutions in shortage subjects. The first students under the programme were admitted to university last autumn. This programme builds on earlier initiatives, including a shift towards engineering in the public sector of higher education. These measures, which have increased, and will continue to increase the number of admissions of new students, will, of course, take some time to produce an increase in the number of graduates. I am confident, however, that the future relevant output from higher education will more closely match employers' needs for these key skills than the present output does.

The Government are aware that rapid technological change means that a substantial proportion of the work force will need some retraining within the near future. The main objective of the adult training strategy outlined in the White Paper "Training for Jobs" (Cmnd. 9135) is to secure an adequate supply of people with up-to-date skills to meet the demands of new technology. However, it is for industry itself to assume prime responsibility for taking steps to identify and meet training needs.

Miss Juliet Kent

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to his reply, 28 January, Official Report, column 477, he will list the factors causing the delay in the proceedings to recover wages owed to Miss Juliet Kent of Birmingham.

Mr. Trippier: Formal action to institute proceedings for recovery under section 22(5) of the Wages Councils Act 1979 was taken on 30 October 1985. Since then there has been correspondence between solicitors acting for the parties in an effort to achieve a settlement which would avoid the need to bring the matter to court. This has not been successful. Instructions have therefore been given for proceedings to be issued, but it is not possible at present to say when the case will be heard.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

United States Export Denials List

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the status, in relation to the United Kingdom, of the United States export denials list unit at the United States embassy in London.

Mr. Eggar: We are not aware of any United States export denials list unit (or group) at the United States embassy in London. The internal workings of the United States embassy in London are in any case a matter for the United States Government. As my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade confirmed to the hon. Member on 27 March at column 611, the United States denied parties list has no status in United Kingdom law.

United States Embassy (Mrs. Nelson)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the nationality, status, employment and function of Mrs. Nelson at the United States embassy in London; and if she has diplomatic status.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that Mrs. Nelson, a British national, is employed in the commercial section of the United States embassy. She has not been formally notified to us. She does not have diplomatic status.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Eggar: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not maintain separate records of purchases of goods and services from small businesses, and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Industrial Disablement Benefit

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what minimum level of percentage disablement it is proposed that industrial disablement benefit will be payable in future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Lord) on 17 April at columns 443-45.

Medical Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications were made to social security commissioners for leave to appeal on a point of law against a decision of a medical appeal tribunal (such leave having been refused by the tribunal) in each year from 1980 to 1985 (a) nationally, (b) in London south region and (c) in London north region; and, for the same years and areas, what numbers of applications were granted.

Mr. Major: The information required is as follows:

Number of applications for leave made to Social Security Commissioners

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Great Britain*	202	269	330	279	268	274
London South Region	15	17	†20	34	40	32
London North Region	N/A	4	†15	22	29	41
Number of applications for leave granted by Social Security Commissioners
Great Britain*	46	60	69	78	96	100
London South Region	5	3	†6	9	16	12
London North Region	N/A	1	†1	5	11	11

Notes:

* The figures for Great Britain include applications for leave to appeal against decisions on mobility allowance and severe disablement allowance which are made direct to the Commissioners.

† The boundaries of the social security regions were restructured from 31 July 1982—details are shown in appendix 3 of "Social Security Statistics 1982" (HMSO).

British Pensions (Canada)

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current situation in relation to negotiations which his Department has been having with the Federal Government of Canada in relation to the index linking of the pensions of British retirement pensioners living in Canada; whether agreement has been reached; and when he expects this index linking will be commenced and the relative agreement signed.

Mr. Major: Officials of the Department and of the Canadian Department of Health and Welfare have work on hand on the preparatory technical matters which would lead to a social security convention between Canada and the United Kingdom to include uprating of United Kingdom pensions payable to pensioners in Canada. No agreement has been reached as the finance to permit a measure of pensions uprating is not available. We cannot therefore say when index-linking might commence or a convention be signed.

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the cost of the index linking for the first year of pensions for retirement pensioners living in Canada.

Mr. Major: The cost of paying full index-linked United Kingdom pension to pensioners in Canada is estimated to be over £35 million a year. The cost of paying only the pension increases due after any agreement came into effect is estimated at about £4·8 million in the first year, rising progressively. These estimates are based on November 1985 rates.

Neurostimulator Implants

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the efficacy of neurostimulator implants; what plans he has to support the development of this technique and extend its availability on the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We are aware of a number of developments in this field, not all of which are generally accepted within the medical profession. Comprehensive information about assessments of their efficacy is not held centrally. It is for health authorities to decide what level of resources should be allocated to the implantation of these devices, and for doctors to decide whether they should be prescribed for individual patients.

Drugs (Expenditure)

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will set out in a table the latest expenditure in pound sterling per head on drugs in those EEC countries for which figures are readily available.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Departmental Circulars (Copyright)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 459, whether his Department is planning to put a cover charge on circulars; and what action he intends to take against people who breach copyright.

Mr. Major: There is no immediate intention to place a cover charge on health circulars issued by the Department of Health and Social Security. As regards action in breach of copyright cases, it could be for the Department to decide whether to proceed in any particular instance which in turn could consist of asking Her Majesty's Stationery Office to deal with the offender on our behalf.

Alcohol Abuse

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met the British Medical Association and the Health Education Council to discuss alcohol abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I reviewed Health Education Council programmes, including those on alcohol abuse, with representatives of the council on 17 March. Ministers have not recently discussed alcohol abuse with the British Medical Association.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many civil servants in his Department liaise with Action on Alcohol Abuse; and what is the cost per annum.

Mr. Whitney: Liaison with Action on Alcohol Abuse takes up a very small amount of Department officials' time and the cost cannot be seperately identified.

Alcohol Concern

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money has been paid from public funds to Alcohol Concern each year since 1983; and for what purpose.

Mr. Whitney: Central funds have been granted to Alcohol Concern as follows:

1983-84	69,000
1984-85	310,789
1985-86	486,300

These sums have been awarded to enable the organisation to encourage and facilitate extensions of local services, especially local voluntary councils on alcohol, to assemble and provide information on alcohol misuse for public debate and for use by local voluntary agencies and to co-operate with the Health Education Council and other agencies concerned with the health education and training. The figure for 1985-86 includes £35,000 removal expenses grant.

Single Payments

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the latest estimate of the cost of payments made under the single payments regulations in 1985-86, and his estimate of the cost for 1986-87, taking into account the changes to be introduced to his new regulations.

Mr. Major: Figures for the full financial year 1985-86 are not yet available but expenditure for the period from 10 April 1985 to 11 March 1986 was £303 million.

As announced on 24 February 1986 by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) at columns 476-78, our proposals for amending the rules for single payments, which are currently being considered by the Social Security Advisory Committee, are intended to bring expenditure back to around the 1984 level.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the figure for the average payment made under the single payments regulations for claimants taking up a new tenancy; and what he estimates will be average payment in 1987.

Mr. Major: The annual statistical inquiry contains information about the average amount of single payments for specific items but does not separately identify payments for furniture to those taking up tenancies for the first time. I regret therefore the information requested is not available.

Residential Care

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has now received Ernst and Whinney's report on residential care and nursing homes; and if the report will be published.

Mr. Newton: We expect to receive a final report shortly. We shall then consider whether and, if so, in what form the report should be published.

Small Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the value of contracts placed by his Department with small businesses in each of the financial years since 1978-79; and what percentage of total expenditure on purchases of goods and services those amounts represented.

Mr. Major: I regret that information is not available in this form.

Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if representatives of the Bethlem royal hospital and the Maudsley hospital special health authority have asked to meet him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No. I shall be visiting the joint hospitals shortly and look forward to meeting the chairman and representatives of the authority when I do so.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he last met representatives of the Bethlem royal hospital and the Maudsley hospital special health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Health and I both met the chairman and general manager of the joint hospitals at a meeting of the London postgraduate committee last October; and I will be doing so again.

Psychiatric Emergency Clinics

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the psychiatric emergency clinics in London which are open 24 hours a day.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that this information is not collected centrally, although I am aware that such a facility is offered by the Maudsley hospital.

Neurosurgery

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the hospitals in (a) London and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom where neurosurgery can be performed on children.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have the available information as soon as possible concerning hospitals in England. Statistics for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what has been the length of the waiting lists for neurosurgery at the Maudsley hospital in each of the years 1979 to the present day;

(2) what has been the length of the waiting list for the adolescent unit at the Bethlem royal hospital for each of the years 1979 to the present day.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information she seeks. The latest figures centrally available are given in the table. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the Bethlem royal hospital and Maudsley hospital special health authority for current information.

Alcoholism

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what grants from public funds have been made for work on alcoholism at the Maudsley hospital.

Mr. Whitney: Services for people with alcohol-related problems are provided from revenue allocations to the Bethlem and Maudsley special health authority. The cost of these cannot be separately identified. In addition, the Institute of Psychiatry situated in the Maudsley hospital, received annual grants from the Department and the Medical Research Council from 1970 to 1983 to support a programme of research on alcoholism. Currently, this programme is receiving some £250,000 per annum from the Medical Research Council and continued funding has been guaranteed up to 1992.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the special units for in-patient treatment of alcoholism in London.

Mr. Whitney: At December 1984 National Health Service returns indicated that there was a special unit for in-patient treatment of alcoholism at each of the following hospitals in the Greater London area:

St. Bernard's Wing, Ealing
Bexley
Bethlem Royal and Maudsley

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claims to supplementary benefit have been registered by young people at school studying for examinations during the summer term.

Mr. Major: This information is not available. Other than in exceptional circumstances, young people who are still attending school, as opposed to those who have left but still have exams to take, are unlikely to qualify for supplementary benefit.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to produce an updated form FB20 on "Leaving School? A Pocket Guide to Social Security".

Mr. Major: Leaflet FB20 is currently under review, and a revised version will be issued in due course.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many circulars outlining the rights of young people to supplementary benefit while they take their examinations have been produced following the commissioners' decision on this subject; and to whom they have been sent.

Mr. Major: Two S circulars were issued following the commissioners' decision on the entitlement of young people to supplementary benefit while they take their examinations. These circulars were sent in the normal way to DHSS local and regional offices, to the House of Commons Library, and to members of the public who subscribe to the S manual and circulars.

Transplants

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the number of transplants which have been performed on private patients in National Health Service hospitals using organs which would have been suitable for National Health Service patients waiting for treatment, for the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: None that I am aware of. I am informed that in 1985, 34 heart transplant operations and 15 liver transplant operations were performed privately in National Health Service hospitals, though 29 of these heart transplant operations and three of these liver transplant operations were performed on patients who were eligible for National Health Service treatment. Cadaveric organs procured in National Health Service hospitals are offered in the first instance to patients who are eligible for National Health Service treatment, and only if there are no such patients on the waiting list for whom they are suitable are they offered to patients who are not eligible for National Health Service treatment. Exceptions may be made in cases of extreme clinical urgency, but I have not been informed of any such cases in 1985. No kidney transplant operations were performed in National Health Service hospitals in 1985 on patients not eligible for National Health Service treatment using cadaveric organs procured within the National Health Service.

Chief Medical Officer (Advice)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions since 1979 the Chief Medical Officer has given his formal advice; on what dates; and on what topics.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Chief Medical Officer, as the Government's principal medical adviser, provides advice as and when required to Ministers of this and other Government Departments. The Chief Medical Officer's advice to Ministers, like the advice to Ministers of all civil servants, is confidential. The Chief Medical Officer also from time to time gives advice and guidance to the medical profession and the public at large on public health issues.

Binfield Park Hospital

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the proposed closure of the Binfield park hospital, Berkshire, and about alternative accommodation to be provided for in-patients.

Mr. Whitney: The long term objective of providing a comprehensive community-based mental handicap service to permit the closure of Binfield park hospital was included in Oxford regional health authority's strategic plan approved in 1985 by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke), the then Minister for Health. We have had a copy of a consultation document issued by the managing health authority setting out proposals to put this into effect over eight to 10 years.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the total National Health Service waiting list every six months since 1956.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. Some of the information is not held centrally. The available information is given in the table. Over this period the number of in-patient discharges and deaths per year increased by 74 per cent. from 3·5 million to 6·2 million.

Private Contractors

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether it remains his policy that health authorities be permitted to judge whether contract companies offer wage rates and conditions sufficient to attract adequate numbers of staff of the right calibre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Our policy on the wage rates and conditions paid by private contractors and the factors health authorities have to take account of in assessing competitive tendering contracts remains unchanged. This was set out in our letter to regional health chairmen dated 9 October 1984, a copy of which was placed in the Library.

Young Offenders

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average relative cost per head per week of placing a young offender in various kinds of care; and what is the cost in respect of placing a young offender under the alternative to custody projects scheme.

Mr. Whitney: The average relative cost per head per week of placing a young offender in various kinds of care is given in the table. This information is derived from The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) annual "Personal Social Services Statistics" for 1984-85 covering England and Wales. There is no recorded average cost of placing a young offender in an alternative to custody project. However, the grants made under the IT initiative (LAC (83)3) for the provision of alternatives to custody or residential care facilities for young offenders at £2,000 per young offender (approximately £154 per week for 13 weeks) are believed to be near to average costs.

	£ per week
Community Homes with Education	418
Observation and Assessment Centres	413
Other Community Homes	260

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the Government's intention towards future funding of alternatives to custody projects, initially funded under LAC/83/3, when this two-year project funding runs out.

Mr. Whitney: Local authorities are responsible for meeting the costs of young offenders using listed intermediate treatment facilities including those which are alternatives to custody or residential care. At the outset of the LAC(83)(3) scheme it was made clear that the grants were intended as short term funding of facilities to allow local authorities time to develop such facilities and rationalise other services so as to take over funding. Although the Government's intention has not changed, six-month extension funding is being approved in cases where, due to technical budgeting difficulties, such continuation funding is not available immediately.

Mental Patients

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received as to the quality of community care given to discharged mental patients who have been placed in residential hostel accommodation.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 294-95]: In the last year we have received letters from two former mental illness hospital patients complaining about the hostels they were living in and a letter from one hon. Member concerning alleged financial malpractices by a member of staff in another hostel. In all three instances the local social services department has investigated the complaints. In the two cases that concerned the quality of care the residents left the hostels before the complaints were resolved. In the other case the complaint was partially resolved.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what steps are taken to ensure the standards of hostel accommodation to which long-term mental health patients are discharged;

(2) what inspection arrangements have been made in respect of those hostels to which long-stay mental patients are discharged.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 14 April 1986, c. 294-95]: Before long-stay patients in mental illness hospitals are considered for discharge a full assessment of their abilities and needs should be made and those people found capable of living outside the hospital should have an appropriate course of rehabilitation. When clinicians decide that the time for discharge has been reached, plans should be made, in consultation with the patient and with any other people or bodies who may be involved, for a move to a suitable setting with an appropriate level of ongoing care and support. Where the agreed setting is hostel accommodation—a term that is used to describe a variety of facilities—authorities are expected to assure themselves about the standard of provision before patients are transferred. Hostels may be provided by health and social services authorities themselves, by housing associations, and by the voluntary and private sectors, and the approach needed may vary accordingly.

If a place termed a hostel is providing personal care and is a voluntary or private establishment, registration under the Registered Homes Act 1984 will apply and inspection by the social services department will be required. Some hostels do not provide personal care at this level, but provide accommodation to residents capable of looking after themselves on a day-to day basis. While there are no formal inspection arrangements laid down for non-registerable hostels, authorities can be expected to maintain contact with people they have placed there and to react appropriate to any indications of dissatisfaction.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 95

SESSION 1985–86

8th April—18th April 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
